GORPUS IGZATIANUM

TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE ALBERT

OF SAXE COBURG AND GOTHA, K.G.

Chancellor of the University of Cambridge.

SIR,

I ESTEEM it a peculiar happiness that my own humble researches should have been rewarded by a discovery which seems to throw a clearer light upon the writings of one of the companions of the holy Apostles, than the united labors of several of the highest and most distinguished Prelates who have adorned the English Church ;

And in being permitted to inscribe to your Royal Highness these results of my discovery, I enjoy a very rare and high gratification, such as none of them could ever have experienced,—the honor of dedicating my work to a Prince whose own learning and acquirements have qualified him to estimate the importance and the interest of the task which I have undertaken, and whose personal condescension and kindness have encouraged me under the difficulties with which it has been attended.

I have the honor to be,

Your Royal Highness'

Most obedient and devoted Servant,

WILLIAM CURETON.

THE discovery of the Ancient Syriac Version of the Epistles of St. Ignatius excited so great and general an interest, that the whole of the impression of the volume in which I made the results of that discovery public was exhausted in the course of a very few months, and a new edition called for. I felt, however, that something more was due to the subject which I had undertaken than merely to exhibit it again in the same form as that in which it had appeared at first. Although I was fully aware that the very little leisure which I could command must necessarily delay the publication for a considerable period, I resolved to collect together all the documents relating to the Ignatian Epistles, and to exhibit them in such a manner as would enable those who may be desirous of investigating this subject for themselves to form their own judgment respecting the whole question, without being compelled to refer to other books than that which I might lay before them.

For this purpose I have exhibited at one view a comparison of the text of the Syriac and of that of both the Greek Recensions of the three Epistles to Polycarp, the Ephesians, and the Romans; and I have caused the particular variations of each to be printed in a different and distinct type, in order that their several peculiarities may be immediately obvious. I have also given a similar comparison of the text of the Longer and Shorter Recensions of the Epistles to the Magnesians, Trallians, Philadelphians, and Smyrneans. To these I have subjoined the rest of the Ignatian Epistles in Greek; and to all of them I have supplied their corresponding ancient Latin versions. I have likewise appended to the rest the Three Letters attributed to St. Ignatius, of which Latin copies only are known to exist. This furnishes a complete collection of all the Epistles which have ever been assigned to the venerable Bishop of Antioch.

To these Epistles I have subjoined all the Testimonies respecting Ignatius himself, and all the extracts from the Ignatian Epistles which have been quoted by various authors in Greek and Latin down to the tenth century—so far at least as my own knowledge extends, and I have been able to collect them. I have not thought it necessary to add those of a later period. The Acts of Martyrdom, as exhibited in the Colbert manuscript, follow. I have also diligently collected and supplied all the extracts from the Ignatian Letters, and all the passages respecting Ignatius himself, in Syriac, which I could find among the rich and valuable treasures of the British Museum, or could obtain elsewhere, to make the work more complete. These, as well as the Syriac text of the Three Epistles, I have translated into English, for the use of such as may not have studied the Aramaic tongue.

I have also appended several extracts attributed to St. Ignatius, found among the Ethiopic collection in the British Museum, with a Latin translation. These, I believe, constitute the whole of the documents up to this time available, upon which any discussion respecting Ignatius and his Epistles can be based.

In the Introduction and Notes I have very freely explained my own views and convictions on the several subjects which presented themselves; and I have stated the arguments upon which they have been founded. Should these appear to be less uniform and consecutive than the entire tenour of the whole investigation may seem to require, I trust that the reader will kindly grant me his indulgence in this respect, when he is informed that the little leisure which I have at my own disposal has never permitted me to give more than an hour or two at one time, and that after the fatigues of my daily occupations, to a subject which, from its interest and importance, Liberty well have demanded my whole and undivided attention. The task which I imposed upon myself would perhaps have been much better executed by some one who is happy enough to have his time sufficiently at his own command to be able to direct and apply the whole energies of his mind to any subject like this, which he may be desirous to investigate and illustrate. Still, however, I have not shrunk from it, with all its difficulties. How far I have been successful others must judge. The only merit which I can venture to claim to myself is that of zeal in attempting, and of perseverance in executing, as the task of my Horæ Subsecivæ, a work of so great extent, requiring so much laborious research and thought, upon a controverted matter, in which I must necessarily expect that those to whose particular views or prejudices the results of my inquiries may prove unfavourable will be ready to catch at every slip, and to expose every error. The conscious determination to seek diligently and impartially for the truth, and to state plainly and unhesitatingly my honest convictions, has given me the courage not to be dismayed or deterred by any such considerations as these.

Indeed, when I first published my volume in 1845, I felt assured that it would not be allowed to pass without censure ; and I then resolved to avoid entering into any of the controversy which I could not but foresee it would create. It was, however, received far more favourably than I could venture to anticipate. This I can only attribute to the evident conviction afforded by the facts which it contains. Only one attack, so far as my knowledge goes, has been directed against it. This appeared in the English Review.* It is much easier to make a parade of orthodoxy, and thereby excite the fears, and prejudice the sympathy of the well-disposed but uninformed, than to argue logically, especially when the premises require some learning and research. Thus the Reviewer attempted to decry the work, by representing the Syriac version of the Ignatian Epistles as the production of an Eutychian heretic. I felt, therefore, that it was due to the late Archbishop of Canterbury to abandon the resolution which I had formed, and to shew that the Reviewer was mistaken in representing, as “a miserable epitome by an Eutychian heretic,” a work in which the Archbishop expressed great interest, and, after having read the Epistles, had kindly allowed me to dedicate it to him. The Reviewer’s attempt in this respect has been pronounced an unhappy failure by Dr. Jacobson, the present Regius Professor of Divinity at Oxford.* Dr. Lee, late Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge, has ably exposed many of the fallacies and gratuitous assumptions of the Reviewer.† How far I have succeeded in my own Reply‡ I must leave to others to determine.§

§ I may perhaps venture to quote here the opinion of some writer apparently unbiassed, and certainly unknown to me, on this head. “Diese Anklage ist nun offenbar der Art, dass, gelänge es, damit durchzudringen, es bei der hohen Geltung, welche striete Orthodoxie in England noch jetzt inner- wie ausserhalb der Kirche hat, um den Credit der Uebersetzung wenigstens im Lande ihres Erscheinens geschehen sein würde. Nun scheint es zwar nicht, als ob diess gelungen sei, da nach einer Ankündigung am Schlusse des vorliegenden Schriftchens die ganze Auflage des angeklagten Werkes bereits vergriffen ist. Indessen kann man es Hrn. Cureton keineswegs verargen, wenn er sein Möglichstes thut, um diese Anklage als völlig unbegründet darzustellen. Es ist ihm diess unseres Erachtens auch nicht missglückt, denn er hat, wo nicht die Güte seiner eigenen Sache, doch sicherlich die Schwäche des Gegners dargethan und ihm den Stachel genommen. Schritt für Schritt folgt er dessen Erörterungen und deckt seine Ungenauigkeiten, Missverständnisse, Uebereilungen, Selbstwidersprüche und Verdrehungen, kurz alle die absichtlichen Kunstgriffe oder unbewussten Fehler einer von einseitigen Vorurtheilen geleiteten Polemik

In 1847 Dr. Hefele, one of the Professors at Tübingen, published his third edition of the works of the Apostolic Fathers, in which he has made such use of my labours as seemed most appropriate to the object which he had before him. The following are his own words, extracted from the Prolegomena, "Curetonus nobis persuadere conatur, versionem illam Syriacam genuino textui Ignatiano accuratissime respondere, et omnia, quæ in nostro Græco textu plura inveniuntur, ab aliis addita esse et introducta. Tantum vero abest, ut ei adstipulemur, ut versionem Syriacam non nisi epitomen Ignatianarum epistolarum a monacho quodam Syriaco in proprios usus pios confectam (cfr. infra, p. 156, not. 1)*, reputare possimus; præsertim cum iidem codices a Tattamo detecti et alia plura excerpta ex epistolis Ignatianis, necnon alios libellos asceticos, ut Curetonus ipse fateatur, contineant. Præterea sæpius inde ex eo, quod nexus sententiarum in versione Syriaca minus est arctus, apparet, mona-chum illum non tam interpretis, quam epitomatoris partes egisse.”* (p. lviii.). These observations I should not have thought at all deserving of notice upon the present occasion, had not Dr. Jacobson repeated them nearly in the very words of the writer, and likewise inserted, verbatim, in his own work, several of Dr. Hefele’s notes which relate to the Syriac version.

Polemik einen nach dem andern auf, versäumt auch nicht, zur Beruhigung ängstlicher Gemüther schliesslich darzuthun, dass der Bestand des Episcopalsystems von der Entscheidung der Frage über die Ignatianischen Briefe ganz und gar nicht abhängig sei. Uebrigens ist diese Vertheidigung, auch wo sie selbst zum Angriff wird, fast durchgängig ruhig und würdevoll gehalten, und bewegt sich, frei von Leidenschaftlichkeit, wenn auch nicht immer von Empfindlichkeit, die bisweilen doch zu Ungerechtigkeit oder mindestens Kleinlichkeit verleitet hat, in meist ernst und sicher erörterndem, doch auch nicht selten an Ironie streifendem Tone, wo dann der Vf. die deductio ad absurdum mit Geschick und Erfolg handhabt, in streng, wir möchten fast sagen pedantisch-kirchlichem Geiste, aber ohne Intoleranz, auf wissenschaftlichem Grund und Boden, so dass dieses Schriftchen die frühern Ansichten des Vfs. in nicht wenigen Stücken erläutert, ergänzt, verstärkt oder übersichtlicher zusammenfasst, und somit als ein nicht unwillkommener Nachtrag zu dem Hauptwerke zu betrachten ist." Leipziger Repertorium, 13. Nov. 1846. Heft 46, p. 254.

It is quite obvious that Dr. Hefele’s knowledge on the Ignatian question is too imperfect to allow his voice to have much weight upon this subject. In his first edition of the works of the Apostolic Fathers, which was published in 1839, he has stated that Daillé made an attack upon Bishop Pearson’s celebrated Vindiciæ†; while the truth of the case is exactly the contrary. Bishop Pearson made the attack in his Vindiciæ, which was not published till six years after Daillé’s work had appeared; the one bearing the date of 1666, and the other of 1672. Moreover, Daillé had in the meanwhile paid the last debt to nature, having expired on the 15th of April 1670.‡ This extraordinary blunder, which no one acquainted with the two most learned and famous works that had appeared during the Ignatian controversy could have made, has been successively repeated in each of the subsequent editions of Hefele’s work. In the third, now before me, he gives further proof of his ignorance of the contents of Bishop Pearson’s celebrated Vindiciæ. In the ‡ See Abregé de sa Vie, by his son, prefixed to Les deux derniers Sermons de M^r Daillé, prononcez à Charenton le jour de Pasques, sixieme Avril 1670, et le Jeudy suivant. 8vo. Geneve. MDCLXXI. p. 76.

Prolegomena, as an additional testimony from the second century, he has now adduced from the Dialogue of Lucian de Morte Peregrini, a fancied allusion to the Ignatian Epistles, and to some expressions contained therein, which he has taken from the Dissertation of Düsterdieck, published in 1843. This, however, had been already propounded by Bishop Pearson among his conjectural testimonies, and spoken of at considerable length. It is quite plain, therefore, that Dr. Hefele, although he refers to the Vindiciæ upon several occasions, could have had but a very slight knowledge of that famous work.

He also mentions Larroque among those who had replied to the learned Prelate's Vindiciæ; but it is evident that he could not have read his work at all, or he would not have fallen into the error above stated respecting Daillé. Indeed, he appears never even to have seen it; for not only has Larroque dedicated his book to Daillé's son, and in the dedication, which is but short, spoken of his father, and mentioned the circumstances which led to his own Reply to Bishop Pearson: but he also commences his book with the following words: "Ignatianæ eruditissimi Pearsonii vindiciæ à quibus nostras inchoamus observationes, nihil aliud sunt propriè quàm exceptiones ad Dallæi argumenta." In his Notes on the Epistle to Polycarp Dr. Hefele classes ὀψώνια among the Latin words used by Ignatius.*

Without adducing any other reasons, these, perhaps, would have been deemed sufficient to justify me in allowing Dr. Hefele's remarks, under other circumstances to have passed without observation. But since they have been copied and adopted by Dr. Jacobson, whose character and learning must at least entitle any thing which he has propounded to consideration, while the important position of Regius Professor of Theology in the University of Oxford, which he has been so deservedly and honourably called to fill, will necessarily give weight to any thing which he has sanctioned by publishing, I have felt that I am no longer at liberty to consult solely my own feelings in this matter, but that it is due to the cause which I have undertaken not to allow these remarks to pass altogether unnoticed.

Professor Hefele therefore observes, "that so far from agreeing with me that the passages which the Syriac does not acknowledge have been interpolated into the Greek, he can only consider the Syriac Version as an Epitome made by some Syrian monk for his own pious use ; and especially so, since the same manuscripts discovered by Dr. Tattam contain several other extracts from the Ignatian Epistles, and also other ascetic works, as I myself admit. Moreover, it appears, from the fact of the connection of the sentences in the Syriac being less close, that the monk did not so much act the part of a translator as of an epitomizer."

It is quite certain that the copies of the Syriac Version were found in a monastery ; and it is extremely probable that they were transcribed by monks, as almost all works of every kind were during the ages in which those copies must have been written : but this does not at all prove that the translation was made by a monk, any more than it would prove that the Syriac Version of the writings of Chrysostom, Basil, Gregory of Nazianzum, Cyril of Alexandria, &c., which are also found in considerable numbers in the same monastery, was the work of a monk. Some of them, I know, were certainly not translated by monks ; and I have no evidence to prove that any of them were.

The Syriac Version having been discovered in a monastery with several ascetic treatises cannot shew it to be the work of a monk ; otherwise, if that reasoning were correct, not only would the translations of the writings of the great Fathers of the Church which I have just specified appear to be monkish, but also the Treatises of Aristotle and Galen, which have been found in the same company in the same monastery. Moreover, although the copies of the Syriac Version of the Epistles of Ignatius were discovered in the Nitrian convent, in the possession of monks, there is no reason whatever to conclude that any of them were written there: one of them, we know, was procured in the neighbourhood of Bagdad, and deposited in this convent more than nine hundred years ago.

Is there, therefore, any thing in the Three Epistles themselves which would tend to shew that, in their present form, they are an epitome of monkish and ascetic origin? The Epistle to the Romans consists almost entirely of arguments, which Ignatius urges upon those to whom he was writing, in order to induce them to refrain from making any effort to reverse the decree of Trajan, and to save him from the death to which he was condemned. Now it is a well-known fact that monasticism and asceticism, in their simplest and purest form, chiefly derived their origin from the desire which some converts to Christianity felt to avoid persecution, and consequent martyrdom, for the profession of their faith, by retiring to those wild and sequestered spots, where they might escape the observation of their Pagan persecutors. Moreover, I am not aware that in any subsequent ages such an earnest desire for the crown of martyrdom, as that evinced by Ignatius in the Epistle to the Romans, has ever been considered so peculiarly appropriate to the aspirations of monkish asceticism, that we should reasonably expect a Syrian monk to retain this Epistle for his own "pious use," in preference to any of the others which he has rejected. Nor would it, indeed, have been a very pious act to mutilate in so unsparing a manner the only few remains of so great and holy a man as Ignatius, the disciple and companion of the Apostles.

The Epistle to the Ephesians, contains an acknowledgment on the part of Ignatius for the kind attentions which they had shewn to him, an exhortation to them to imitate the good example of their Bishop, and advice how they should comport themselves towards their opposers, in returning kindness for injuries, and meekness for railing. The Epistle to Polycarp also gives further advice as to relative duties in common life ; and likewise adds some instructions respecting matrimony, with an admonition to wives to love their husbands, and to husbands to cherish their wives. These surely could not have been peculiarly appropriate to the "pious use" of a monk, whose very name indicates that he had quitted the busy world, renounced the holy tie of matrimony, and, consequently, could not stand in need of any of those instructions which relate peculiarly to a state with which he has no concern.

These considerations do not seem to have suggested themselves to the learned Professor ; nor does it appear to have occurred to him to inquire why the Syrian monk should have chosen to abridge the Ignatian Epistles, which in themselves are but short, rather than to curtail any of the long Treatises of the Fathers above mentioned, which are found altogether whole and entire in the same library of the Nitrian monks ; and some even in the same volume as the Epistles of Ignatius. The Syriac Version, however, did not contain all that he had previously published as the genuine Epistles of St. Ignatius ; and consequently he was fain to consider it as an epitome, in the same manner as the Reviewer of whom I have spoken above. The one, however, regarded it as "a miserable epitome," made by some designing Eutychian for heretical purposes ; the other considers it as an abridgement adapted by some religious monk to his own "pious use." Both of these learned men cannot surely be right. It does not contain all that they wish ; and they therefore agree at least in concluding that it must be an epitome. Neither of them, however, appears to have been sufficiently acute and ingenious to discover and state the reason why this epitomizer, whoever he might have been, monk or Eutyehian, should have selected for the peculiar ends which he had in view, precisely the very three Epistles, and those three only, for the existence of which there is any evidence in early Christian antiquity for more than two centuries after the death of Ignatius, and, in accommodating them to his own purposes, whether of pious asceticism or crafty heresy, why he should have omitted precisely the very passages which the ablest European critics, without any knowledge of his previous labours, pointed out, a thousand years later, as inconsistent with the character of the times of Ignatius, and designated as spurious.

The next consideration which Professor Hefele advances as an argument to shew that the Syriac is an epitome, is based upon the fact that numerous other extracts from the Ignatian Epistles are found among the manuscripts brought from the Nitrian convent. But if this argument will prove any thing, it must prove rather more than the learned Professor would be willing to admit ; since there are found among these extracts passages from some of the other Ignatian Epistles which he himself rejects as manifestly spurious, such as those to Hero the Deacon and to the Tarsians ; and the latter of these in one of the most ancient manuscripts, certainly transcribed about the sixth century. These Ignatian extracts, however, have no bearing whatever upon the case before us. With the exception of the passages in the Epistle of John the Monk, which agree almost word for word with the Syriac Version of the Epistles, all these extracts are found quoted in works originally written in Greek, and thence translated into the Syriac. They belong, therefore, in no way to any Syriac Version of a collection of the Ignatian Epistles. Moreover, they are all taken from authors who wrote subsequently to the time when these Epistles had assumed nearly the form in which they are found in the Medicean text : they exhibit, however, considerable variations from that text, as the comparison will shew. If.

further, the simple fact of these extracts having been quoted by those authors is to be considered as giving them any authority, we must place upon the same level with them in this respect the works of Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, and several other fabrications, which are quoted by them with the same degree of respect and authority as the Ignatian Epistles.

The last ground for considering the Syriac Version an epitome, and, indeed, the only one which has any pretence to be considered of weight, is the assertion, that after the passages rejected by the Syriac are removed, the tenor of the Epistles is broken, and the several sentences do not closely and naturally follow each other. This is, however, only a matter of opinion; and others take a very different view of it from the learned Professor, who has adduced no stronger argument in confirmation of his own view of the subject than several bare assertions, such as the following: "Syrus omisit—melius vero cohæret," p. 162. "Arctius vero—cohærent," ibid. "Posteriora hæc verba a Syro male cum antecedentibus conjuncta esse, nemo non videt," p. 169, &c. &c. Simple assertions such as these will not generally be accepted as arguments, even when they are alleged by persons who may have far greater claims to be considered of authority upon this question than those to which Professor Hefele seems to be entitled.

I regret that I should have felt myself obliged to make these remarks upon Dr. Hefele's observations, in consequence of several of them having been adopted by Dr. Jacobson in his last edition of the works of the Apostolic Fathers. It is also necessary for me to say a few words respecting some of his own observations.

He writes in the following terms: "Curotono nobis persuadere conanti Versionem hanc Syriacam nunc demum scripta Ignatii genuina exhibere, et omnia quæ in Græco Textu nostro plura leguntur, ab aliis fuisse addita, adstipulatus est clarissi-mus CHRISTIANUS CAR. JOS. BUNSEN, Borussiae Regis legatus, vir nullo doctrinae genere non excultus.

Ego quidem, ut quod sentio dicam, non sum is qui pro Recensionis brevioris integritate ita propugnem, ut nullas sententias perplexas, corruptas, interpolatas habere contendam. Neque tamen video cur a Textu ad quem defendendum Pearsonius Vindicias suas conscripsit illico ad eum a Curetono editum nosmet recipiamus necesse sit. Monachus enim Syrus, uti monet Hefelius, non tam interpretis partes egisse videtur quam epitomen in usus pios confecisse. Et Codices Tattamiani alia plura Excerpta ex Epistolis Ignatianis, atque alia opuscula ascetica continent." p. liv.

To these concluding observations, in which Dr. Jacobson has followed the steps of Dr. Hefele, I have already replied. In those which precede he admits that the Medicean Recension contains involved, corrupt, and even interpolated passages; but at the same time he states that he nevertheless does not see why he is immediately to abandon that text in defence of which Bishop Pearson wrote his celebrated Vindiciae, and adopt the Epistles which I propose as the only genuine production of Ignatius. According to his own admission, that learned Prelate wrote to defend an involved, corrupt, and interpolated text. However able or clever, therefore, his defence may be, it cannot remedy these defects. Archbishop Usher, a still more learned man and an abler critic, and certainly at least as ingenuous an inquirer after the truth, not only spoke of these defects, but also intimated his hope and expectation that the ancient Syriac Version might at some future time be discovered, and serve as the means of correcting them. Its discovery has placed the whole of the Ignatian question in a very different light from that in which it was exhibited when Bishop Pearson wrote; and to abandon this now, and return again to the position which it occupied in the middle of the seventeenth century, would be as preposterous as to neglect the great discoveries which have been recently made in various branches of science, and revert to the works even of the most distinguished authors who, two hundred years ago, may have written most ably upon any such matters, but whose conclusions subsequent discoveries have proved to be far from correct.

Whenever the means of forming our opinions and judgment are equal, I should certainly think it prudent most cautiously to examine my own conclusions again and again, if I found them to differ from those of a scholar so able, learned, and acute, as Bishop Pearson; but still, even then I should think it my duty to adopt and state freely, although modestly, my own convictions, rather than follow, against my own persuasion, the authority of any one, however great, or learned, or wise he may have been. In the present state, however, of the question before us, we have far better materials to form a judgment respecting the Ignatian Epistles than were accessible to Bishop Pearson; and I doubt not, had the same degree of evidence been laid before him, that learned Prelate would have come to the same decision. Certainly his celebrated work exhibits more of the character of a very able advocate of a particular cause than of that of a simple inquirer after the truth. There have been several important objections raised against the Ignatian Epistles, to which he has not attempted any reply in his celebrated Vindiciæ. And if the answers which he has given with great learning, skill, and plausibility, to one specific objection were placed in contrast and juxtaposition with those which he has applied with not less ingenuity to other specific objections, it will be seen that many of the arguments which he advances, to say the least, very much weaken, if they do not nullify, one another.*

* In the whole course of my inquiry respecting the Ignatian Epistles I have never met with one person who professes to have read Bishop Pearson's celebrated book; but I was informed by one of the most learned and eminent

Of the two Recensions of Epistles attributed to Ignatius, which are now presented to us for our decision and choice, even had we no better grounds for the preference, we should surely act wisely not to select that which we know to contain involved, corrupt, and interpolated passages, rather than the other, which is free from such grave objections. The latter, even if it were not entire, would not mislead us, but conduct us truly so far as it goes; but the former, by causing us to take falsehood for truth, may turn us from the right path into the intricacies and difficulties of error. But when the grounds for rejecting as spurious all the rest of the Ignatian Epistles, except the Three in the form in which they are found in the Syriac Version, are so very strong and cogent, as I believe I have proved them to be, it becomes our duty immediately and at once to reject that which is false, however agreeable the testimony which it may seem to bear, or the conclusions to which it may appear to lead, may be to our own views and our own wishes. Christ came into the world to bear witness to the truth: our highest moral obligation is to fulfil those commands of charity and virtue which he has given us; our highest intellectual duty is to seek for the truth simply and honestly, and when we are convinced that we have found it, to embrace it at all temporal hazards.

No one can be more sincerely and warmly devoted to our own Church-system than myself; and I believe it to be based upon far higher and surer grounds than to stand in any need whatever of the testimony of the Ignatian Epistles; still less do I think that it can incur any risk by the great mass of that testimony being proved to be spurious. Those who are firmly attached to that system from other convictions would hardly need the additional authority which the Ignatian Epistles were supposed by some to give ; and those who have objected to it upon other grounds have always, and I must confess it appears to me justly, rejected the Ignatian testimony, so long as there were such strong and well-grounded reasons to doubt of its authenticity. Surely, therefore, we have rather gained than lost by the rejection of those Epistles and passages which the Syriac Recension shews to be spurious, if, after the removal of all just grounds of doubt and suspicion, the Epistles still afford us incidental, and consequently unsuspected evidence to the fact of the establishment of a Bishop, Presbyters, and Deacons, in their several capacities in the Church of Smyrna at the period when St. Ignatius wrote, and of their having received in those capacities the commendation of that holy Martyr, the disciple and companion of the disciples and companions of our Lord.

There is another, and, in my opinion, a still more important aspect in which this subject may be viewed. In late years several attacks have been made upon the very charters of our holy faith, even upon the inspired books of the Apostles themselves, which the evidence afforded by Ignatius was in a great measure sufficient to refute, but which could not be successfully urged, so long as the great admixture of spurious matter rendered the whole authority of the Epistles attributed to him doubtful ;—I mean the citations and evident allusions to certain books of the New Testament, which are still found in the genuine Epistles ; and which therefore indubitably prove those books to have been written before Ignatius suffered, and not many years later, as the theories of a certain class of critics in Germany have endeavoured to establish. This is not the place for me to make further mention of this matter ; nor should I have deemed it requisite now to allude to it at all, had not Baur*, being aware that if the Three Epistles of the Syriac

Reconsion were received as genuine, the grounds of his hypothesis must fail, felt it therefore to be necessary for him to endeavour to prove that they also are spurious, in an answer to the Chev. Bunsen, who had applied the evidence afforded by Ignatius to refute some of the dangerous theories of the Tübingen school of Theology. Baur's main argument is based upon the assertion that these Three Epistles, even in their present form, are so like the rest that they must all have come from the same hand.* There cannot be a more complete refutation of this imagined, than that which I had already supplied in my Introduction, before I had any knowledge whatever of Baur's assertion. I have there shewn that a marked difference, as to matter and manner, between these Three Epistles in their present form and the rest, was seen and pointed out by the ablest critics on the Ignatian question nearly two centuries before the Syriac Version was discovered, and proved the depth of their discernment, and the justice and propriety of their observations.

I have expressed, in another part of this volume, my obligations to the Archdeacon of Bedford, M. Munk, and Dr. Dillman, for the assistance which they have kindly rendered to me. I should be ungrateful to pass without acknowledgment the help of my wife, in executing for me the facsimile of the manuscripts upon the authority of which the Syriac text of the Epistles of Ignatius is based.

* He concludes his argument on this head with these words: "Ich glaube nur, man kann demselben Betrüger auch noch auf eine weitere Spur seines Betruges kommen, woraus sich auch jene Verfälschungen am einfachsten erklären, dass er nämlich bei jenem Briefen nicht blos, um sie zu verfälschen, seine Hand im Spiel gehabt, sondern sie, was freilich arg genug ist, sogar selbst geschrieben hat!" p. 74.

INTRODUCTION.

LITERARY HISTORY OF THE IGNATIAN EPISTLES TILL THE DISCOVERY OF THE SYRIAC VERSION.

EXACTLY three centuries and a half intervened between the time when Three Epistles in Latin* attributed to St. Ignatius first issued from the press, and the publication, in 1845, of Three Letters in Syriac, bearing the name of the same Apostolic writer. † Very few years passed before the former were almost universally regarded as false and spurious; and it seems not improbable that scarcely a longer period will elapse before the latter be almost as generally acknowledged and received as the only true and genuine Letters of the venerable Bishop of Antioch that have either come down to our times, or were even known in the earliest ages of the Christian Church.

Of the Three Epistles in Latin, two were addressed to the Apostle St. John, and the third to the Holy Mother of our Lord, to which was subjoined a Letter in the name of the Blessed Virgin herself to the Disciple whom her Son the Lord loved. These were annexed to a * Orlandi speaks of an edition of six Epistles published seventeen years earlier. "S. IGNATIUS Martyr Episcopus Antiochenus, A.D. 71 florebat. Epistolæ ejus Sex. Coloniae 1478." "Latina trium Epistolarum, 1. ad Mariam Virginem, et 2 ac 3 ad Johannem Apost. Colon. 1478." See Bibliotheca Græca, vol. v. p. 42. Harles has the following note upon this passage of Fabricius: "Hanc editionem Colon. Maittaire A. T. in ind. ex Orlando, p. 349, memorat; sed dubia esse videtur et cl. Panzerus ejus mentionem omisit. Vol. vii. p. 40." None of the writers who have discussed the subject of the Ignatian Epistles in the seventeenth century seem ever to have referred to or mentioned any edition previous to that of 1495; and it appears, therefore, most probable that no such edition existed.

Three years later, Eleven Epistles, also in Latin, issued from the same press, appended to the works of Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, and followed by the Letter of St. Polycarp to the Philippians.† They were arranged in the following order:—1. To the Trallians, 2. Magnesians, 3. Tarsians, 4. Philippians, 5. Philadelphians, 6. Smyrneans, 7. Polycarp, 8. Antiochians, 9. Ihero, the Deacon of Antioch, 10. Ephesians, 11. Romans. This Latin version is of considerable antiquity, having been quoted by Ado Viennensis‡, who lived in the ninth century.§ The editor, J. Faber Stapulensis (Le Fevre d'Etaples), supplied a short preface to these Epistles, but assigned no reason for the omission of the Letter to Maria of Cassobolita, which usually stands at the head of them in this collection.

These Epistles were reprinted several times in the interval extending to the year 1529.||

In 1536 Symphorianus Champerius (Champier) published an edition of the Ignatian Letters, comprising, besides the Eleven above enumerated, that addressed to Maria Cassobolita and the Three which were first mentioned. These also accompanied the works of Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, and were printed at Cologne. Several other editions followed in the course of the next twenty years.*

The Epistles attributed to Ignatius occupy the first page of the last leaf: "Hee sunt quattuor epistole de quibus due prime mittuntur beato iohanni euangeliste: ex parte beati ignatii. tertia mittitur beate virgini marie: ex parte ejusdem. quartam vero mittit beata virgo eidem ignatio."

The Ignatian Epistles were first published in Greek at Dillingen in 1557.† They were edited by Valentinus Paccus, whose real name was Hartung Frid, from a manuscript in the Library of Augsburg. He gives no description of the condition or probable date of the manuscript.

The Twelve Epistles contained in this edition are arranged in the following order:—1. Πρὸς Μαρίαν Κασσοβολίτην, 2. πρὸς Τραλλησίους, 3. πρὸς Μαγνησίους, 4. πρὸς τοὺς ἐν Τάρσῳ, 5. πρὸς Φιλιππησίους, 6. πρὸς Φιλαδελφεῖς, 7. πρὸς Σμυρναίους, 8. πρὸς Πολύκαρπον, 9. πρὸς Ἀντιοχεῖς, 10. πρὸς Ἰερωνά, 11. πρὸς Ἐφεσίους, 12. πρὸς Ῥωμαίους.

From this William Morel printed two editions at Paris; one in 1558‡, the other in 1562. He also published a new Latin translation of these Epistles in 1558.§

In 1560 And. Gesner, apparently without any knowledge of the edition by Valentinus Paccus, published these Ignatian Epistles in Greek, from a manuscript in the possession of Caspar von Nydpruck, accompanied by a translation, or rather a paraphrase, by J. Brunner.* Three other editions, and another Latin translation by Hieronymus Vairlenius, appeared before the end of the sixteenth century.†

Up to this period the editors had done little or nothing in the critical examination of the Ignatian Epistles. At the beginning of the seventeenth century more attention was given to this subject; and Martialis Mæstræus, in the notes to his edition ‡, entered slightly upon an examination of the grounds of the pretensions of the Epistles to be considered as authentic. The Three Epistles, of which Latin copies only were found, he thought would be more safely classed among Apocryphal writings; both because there were no copies of them existing in Greek, and because no mention had been made of them by any ancient writer before the time of St. Bernard. Of the Twelve in Greek he received Nine as genuine, on the authority of the testimony borne to them by Ecclesiastical writers—namely, the four cited by Theodoretus, which are included in the seven enumerated by Eusebius, the Epistle to the Antiochians, cited by Johannes Damascenus, and that to the Philippians, which he supposed to be the Letter alluded to in the Epistle of Polycarp. The remaining Three, to Hero the Deacon, to the Tarsians, and to Maria Cassobolita, although not mentioned by Eusebius, he felt constrained to admit with the rest, on account of the conformity of the style, and because Twelve letters are mentioned by Simeon Metaphrastes, and Twelve also are contained in the old Latin version, which is of greater antiquity than the time of Ado.* He acknowledged, however, that the

Verum cum præter antedictas, aliæ duodecim epistolæ B. Ignatio assignentur, quæ non modo Latinis sed etiam Græcis characteribus expressæ esse reperiuntur; est quod illarum certitudinem paucis ad amussim examinemus. —

Quod autem ad earundem literarum numerum spectat atque seriem, Theodoretus Cyrensis e quatuor tantum piam Ecclesiæ doctrinam in dialogis suprâ citatis confirmat, ex epistolis nimirum ad Romanos, ad Ephesios et Trallianos dialogo 1, et ex epistola ad Smyrnæos dialo. 2. et 3. Ruffinus dum lib. histor. Eccles. 3. cap. pridem cit. literas Ignatii Apostolicas refert, quatuor superioribus alias duas, illas scilicet, quæ ad Magnesianos et Polycarpum scriptæ fuerunt, adjicit. Hieronymus in Catalogo præter has sex antedictas septimam ad Philadelphenos, non secus ac Sophronius ejus interpres, Eusebius atque Nicephorus locis nuper citatis commemorant. Damascenus ἠθικῶν quandam ejusdem martyris sententiam ex epistola ad Antiochenos lib. i. Parall. c. 21. mutuatur: et Polycarpus ipse vir Apostolicus expressum illius quæ ad Philippenses legitur, in suis ad illo. literis reddit testimonium. E quibus certè aptè inter se compositis Patrum assertionibus, novem nobis è duodecim indubitata fidei (si veteribus credamus) constant Ignatii epistolæ: ad Trallianos videlicet, ad Magnesianos, ad Philippenses, ad Philadelphenos, ad Smyrnenses, ad Polycarpum, ad Antiochenos, ad Ephesios, et demum ad Romanos.

Ex prælibato igitur Ignatii epistolarum numero, tres consequuntur, ad Heronem scilicet, ad Tarsenses, ad Mariam Cassoboliten, quæ magis in dubium videntur posse revocari, eo quod illarum antiquissimi Ecclesiæ scriptores nullam fecerunt mentionem. Verum præter id quod sapientissime Baronius tomo 2. Annalium, cum de hisce literis dissereret, observavit: illas videlicet in unum corpus initio simul non fuisse redactas, sed singillatim Asiaticarum Ecclesiarum sollicitudine, prout in Epistola Polycarpi ad Philippenses suprâ citata videre licet: tres illæ duplici potissimum de causa, ad Ignatium auctorem referri debent. Una est, quod mira styli conformitas et sententiarum similitudo in his tribus cum novem reliquis reperiatur, prout planius atque perspectius animadverteret, quisquis illas invicem καὶ παραλλήλως contulerit. Altera verò quæ illas Ignatio vindicat ratio est, quod Simeon Metaphrastes auctor antiquus duodecim epistolarum tandem in vita illius meminerit totidemque præterea vetus Ignatii interpres, quem ipso Adone antiquiorem infra declarabimus, è Græco in Latinum commutarit. — Ex tot igitur tamque gravibus patrum antiquorum auctoritatibus, rationumque momentis, satis liquidò constare potest: has esse germanas et verè aureas Ignatii epistolas, quæ licet ab hæreticis et a Græculis posterioribus, Greek text of the Ignatian Epistles had been in some places interpolated and corrupted by heretics and later Greek writers.

Robert Cardinal Bellarmin also, in his treatise De Sacramento Eucharistiæ, remarked that the Greek copies contained many errors* ; and in his Catalogue of Ecclesiastical writers he observes that no great trust is to be placed upon the Greek copies whenever they differ from the Latin. †

Nicolaus Vedelius (Vedel), a Professor at Geneva, was the first to attempt a discrimination between the Epistles bearing the name of Ignatius. In 1623 he published an edition ‡, in which he divided the Greek Epistles terioribus, alicubi interpolatæ et depravatæ fuerint, ut potissimum in epistola ad Philadelphenses videre licet," &c. See Notæ ad Epistolas S. Ignatii, eodem Martiali Mæstræo auctore. Paris. 1608, pp. 15—21.

In this criticism Mæstræus has not advanced much further than Baronius, in whose steps he has evidently trod. Baronius writes thus: "Ceterum, quod ad Ignatii epistolas pertinet, de illis agens Eusebius, illarum tantum meminit, quæ datæ sunt Smyrnæ primum, ac deinde Troade: sic et Hieronymus easdem recenset, omnes numero septem, videlicet ad Ephesios, ad Magnesianos, ad Trallenses, ad Romanos, postea quæ datæ sunt Troade ad Philadelphios, ad Smyrnenses, et Polycarpum; omnes scilicet, quas priusquam ex Asia proficeretur conscripsit. Quæ autem ab eo sunt scriptæ Philippis in Macedonia, ad Antiochenos, et ad Heronem ejus ecclesiæ diaconum, quæve ad Tarsenses, eos præteriisse videntur, sicut et quæ novissime scripta ab eo fuit ad Philippenses; quas Ignatii esse germanas, easdemque sincerissimas, nemo jure poterit dubitare: sicut et quæ data est ad Mariam Cassobolitem, de qua superius actum est: de quarum fide parum est ut citem vetustissimos Græcos codices, qui non in Urbe tantum in diversis bibliothecis habentur, sed et aliis ubique locorum; vel Photium in testem adducam: quandoquidem judicio omnium eruditorum, stylo, caractere, aliisque compluribus notis verborum, sententiarum, ac rerum, ex septem illis omnium auctoritate probatis epistolis certam sibi vendicant fidem, adeo ut nulla manifestior vel vehementior de earum integritate possit afferri probatio, quam ex reliquis epistolis ejusdem Ignatii, contesseratione et connexionione quadam sibi invicem omnibus coherentibus: ut nulla prorsus de impostura possit oriri suspicio." See Ann. Eccles. ad An. 109. Edit. Lucæ. 1738—1757. Vol. ii. p. 50.

* "Neque multum fidendum est Græcis codicibus quos Kemnitius magni facit: Multi sunt enim in eis errores, ut quisvis facilè animadverteret, qui conferret eos codices Græcos, qui nunc extant, cum testimoniis Ignatii, quæ citantur ab Athanasio in Epist. ad Epictetum, et à Theodoro in Dialogis contra Eutyechianos." into two classes, one of which he considered to be genuine, and the other spurious. To the former he assigned the seven Epistles — 1. To the Trallians, 2. Magnesians, 3. Philadelphians, 4. Smyrneans, 5. Polycarp, 6. Ephesians, 7. Romans, which had been enumerated by Eusebius; to the latter he attributed the remaining five which had not been mentioned by him in his Ecclesiastical History. The Three Latin Epistles he passed over, as being too manifestly spurious to need any notice. Besides this division into classes, he also marked several passages which he considered to be interpolated, even in the Epistles which he received as genuine. The Latin version of Vairlenius, as corrected by Mæstræus, with Vedelius' own emendations noted in the margin, is printed in parallel columns with the Greek text. This is accompanied with critical notes, an apology for Ignatius, or Prolegomena de auctoritate Epistolarum Ignatii, and twelve Exercitationes, in which the authority of these Epistles is turned against the tenets of the Romish Church.

But far greater progress was made in the investigation respecting the claims of the Ignatian Epistles by James Usher, Archbishop of Armagh, than by any of those who had preceded him in this field of interesting inquiry. He had observed that a passage cited by Theodoretus, Bishop of Cyrus in the fifth century, as from the Epistle of Ignatius to the Smyrneans, was not found to exist in any of the Greek or Latin copies of those Epistles then published, but that a quotation similar to that made by Theodoretus had been adduced by Robert Grosseteste, Bishop of Lincoln, in his Commentary on Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, about 1250, and by William Wodeford about 1396, and John Tissington, both in their writings against Wickliff.* As all these three authors were Englishmen, the thought suggested itself to the learned Archbishop that the source from which these quotations were derived must once have been current in this country, and might probably be still in existence. Under this impression he instituted an inquiry, and had the gratification of discovering two copies of an ancient Latin translation of the Ignatian Epistles, one in the library of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and the other in the private collection of Richard Montacute (or Mountagu), Bishop of Norwich, in which the passage of the Epistle to the Smyrneans was found to agree with the quotations made by those three authors, and with the Greek as cited by Theodoretus.

In these copies the Epistle to the Philippians was omitted; and the arrangement of the rest differed from that of the Greek and Latin editions previously made public. They were exhibited in the following order:— 1. ad Smyrnenses, 2. ad Polycarpum, 3. ad Ephesios, 4. ad Magnesios, 5. ad Philadelphicos, 6. ad Trallesios, 8. Mariæ, proselytæ Chasæobolorum, ad Ignatium, 8. Ignatii ad Mariam proselytam, 9. ad Tarsenses, 10. ad Antiochenos, 11. ad Eronem, 12. ad Romanos.*

Besides this difference in the arrangement of these Epistles, the text itself was found to display considerable variations from the previous editions, to omit altogether many passages, and likewise to amplify and extend, in the manner of paraphrase, numerous others. A comparison of some other passages which had been cited in the Dialogues of Theodoretus, in a Letter concerning the Synods of Rimini and Seleucia, attributed to Athanasius, and in the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius, convinced the learned Archbishop that the recension contained in the manuscripts which he had discovered might be considered as a tolerably accurate representation of the text of the Ignatian Epistles in the fourth and fifth centuries, although not precisely corresponding with it in every particular. Furnished with these additional means of criticism, he endeavoured to separate the spurious Epistles attributed to Ignatius from the genuine, and to restore the latter to their pristine condition, by removing the interpolations by which they had been falsified and deformed. Following, therefore, in the steps of Vedelius, he rejected as fictitious all those Letters which had neither been mentioned by Jerome or Eusebius, nor cited, in his Dialogues, by Theodoretus. Moreover, having observed that the style and manner of the Epistle to Polycarp varied considerably from the rest which he was induced to receive as genuine, he was led to reject this also as spurious; and in doing so he believed that he was supported by the authority of Jerome †, whose words as they now stand would certainly lead to the conclusion, either that the Epistle to Polycarp was formerly different from what it now is, or that it and the Epistle to the Smyrneans were identical. But it is evident, from comparing the passage with Eusebius, that the obscurity has arisen from a considerable omission having been made by Jerome in transferring the words of Eusebius to his own Catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers. The learned Primate in this place seems to have considered the words of Jerome as independent testimony respecting the Epistles of Ignatius, although it could scarcely have escaped his knowledge that Jerome had borrowed his information altogether from Eusebius without mentioning the source from which it was taken, as Vossius* and Bishop Pearson afterwards observed. †

Archbishop Usher published his edition of the Ignatian Epistles, together with the Epistle of Polycarp to the Philippians, at Oxford, in 1644. ‡ He divided them, as Vedelius had done before him, into two classes. The former comprehended the Epistles to the Ephesians, Magnesians, Trallians, Romans, Philadelphians, and Smyrneans. The latter, which he regarded as spurious, contained the remaining six Greek Epistles, and the Three which are found only in Latin. § To these he subjoined the ancient Latin version of the Shorter Recension of the eleven Ignatian Epistles discovered by himself in the manner which has been stated above. ||

In this volume the Greek text and the old Latin Version, first edited by J. Faber Stapulensis, are printed in parallel columns. In republishing this Version Archbishop Usher not only consulted the previous editions, but also compared two ancient manuscripts belonging to the libraries of Baliol and Magdalene Colleges, Oxford; and, further, he procured a collation of a very ancient copy in the possession of Alexander Petau, at Paris.*

It does not, however, appear that the learned Prelate had the opportunity afforded him of consulting any fresh manuscript authority for the Greek text; but by causing all those words and passages which had no equivalent in the Shorter Latin Version to be printed in red letters, he exhibited at once the chief variations between the Greek recension of the Ignatian Epistles which he then edited and another recension hitherto unknown, which that Latin translation must have followed. By such means he felt that he had made considerable progress in detecting that which was spurious and had been interpolated into the text; but inasmuch as he saw that there still remained in that Shorter Latin Version many passages and expressions which could scarcely be received as the genuine words of Ignatius, he declared that he could not venture to promise † that the genuine Ignatius could be recovered without the aid of another Greek text, which he hoped to obtain from a manuscript in the Medicean Library at Florence, of which he had already received permission to have a transcript ‡; or at least without the aid of a Syriac copy, which he did not despair of procuring from Rome.

To this edition he prefixed a very learned and able Dissertation respecting the writings of Ignatius and Polycarp, and also the Apostolic Constitutions and the Canons attributed to Clemens Romanus, which he sums up with the following passage respecting the Ignatian Epistles: “ Ut igitur totum hoc negotium tandem aliquando finiamus: quod olim de libro, qui Prædicatio Petri inscriptus est, disquirendum Origenes

Two years later the learned Isaac Vossius, having obtained permission from the Grand Duke of Tuscany, published the Greek text of the Ignatian Epistles from the volume in the Medicean Library to which Archbp. Usher had already called attention.‡ This manuscript, which Turrianus (Torrès)§ had described as very ancient and very correct, is attributed by Bandini|| to the eleventh century, and contains, together with various Epistles by several other authors, the eight first, and a part of the ninth, of the Ignatian Epistles, in the same order and form as they are found in the Shorter Latin Version discovered by Usher, which manifestly was made from this recension of the Greek, although apparently from a more correct copy than this Medicean transcript.¶

In his edition Vossius divided the Epistles into three classes: the first containing the Epistles of Ignatius, to the Smyrneans, Polycarp, Ephesians, Magnesians, Philadelphians, and Trallians, from the Medicean manuscript, and the Epistle to the Romans from the earlier editions: the second, Epistles falsely attributed to Ignatius, being the Letter of Maria Cassobolita to Ignatius, his Letter to her, from the Medicean manuscript, with the Epistles to the Tarsians, Antiochians, Hero the Deacon, and the Philippians, from the former editions, and the Three Latin Epistles: the third class, Interpolated Epistles, comprises the Longer Recension of the Six Epistles of the first class, that to the Romans not being repeated. The Greek text is printed in parallel columns with the Latin. The Shorter Version, first published by Archbp. Usher, accompanies the two first classes, with the exception of the Epistle to the Philippians, which was not included in that Version: and the old Longer Vulgate Translation accompanied the Interpolated Epistles. The Epistle attributed to St. Barnabas is subjoined, followed by annotations upon the whole.

In the following year, 1647, Archbp. Usher having received the edition of Vossius, published in his *Appendix Ignatiana the Six Epistles which he attributed to Ignatius, according to the text of the Medicean copy, accompanied with a Latin translation, compiled from the ancient Version which he had discovered, and from that of Hieronymus Vairlenius. In his Address to the Reader he complains of not having found the Medicean text very correct, as Turrianus has described it, observing, that nothing further could be done than to remain satisfied with it till a more correct copy should be discovered.†

In 1672, J. B. Cotelerius (Cotelier) published the Ignatian Epistles in his edition of the Apostolic Fathers. He arranged them in the same

To all of these Cotelerius has supplied a new Latin translation. These are followed by the spurious Ignatian Letters, which exist only in Latin; by the ancient Latin Version both of the Longer and Shorter Recensions, and by the Acts of the Martyrdom of Ignatius from Metaphrastes; and by the Latin Acts of Martyrdom first published by Archbp. Usher in his Appendix Ignatiana.

In 1689 T. Ruinart printed, from a manuscript belonging to the collection of the famous J. B. Colbert, Acts of Martyrdom of Ignatius ‡, in which was inserted the Epistle to the Romans, in a shorter form than that of the previous editions, very closely corresponding with the old Latin Version discovered by Archbp. Usher, and evidently belonging to the same recension of the Ignatian Epistles as that which exists in the Medicean manuscript. These Acts, and the Epistles contained therein, were reprinted by J. E. Grabe§ in 1699.

In the same year T. Ittigius (Ittig)|| first published all the Seven Epistles of the Shorter Recension together, six from the Medicean text with the translation of Cotelerius, and the Letter to the Romans from the text of the Colbert manuscript, as edited by Ruinart, and with his Latin translation.¶ To these he subjoined the old Latin Version of the Shorter Re-

In 1709 Dr. Thomas Smith published the Seven Epistles of the Shorter Recension, together with the ancient Latin Version of that Recension, entirely omitting all the other Epistles. ¶

In 1711 W. Whiston edited both the Recensions in parallel columns, the Shorter accompanied by the English Version of Archbishop Wake, and the Longer by a new translation of his own. To this edition he prefixed a dissertation in which, agreeably to the opinion previously announced by the very learned J. conjectural emendations, as no additional Greek manuscript, or other ancient version of these Epistles had been brought to light. Aldrich* had indeed printed again in 1708 all the Ignatian Epistles contained in the Medicean copy, from a transcript made expressly for that purpose by A. M. Salvini; and Dr. Jacobson collated afresh, for his edition of the Apostolic Fathers published in 1838 †, all the manuscript authorities upon which the previously-existing editions of the Seven Epistles had been grounded.

An Armenian Version of the Ignatian Epistles had also been printed at Constantinople in 1783 ‡; but its existence seems to have been unknown to the various editors of the writings of the Apostolic Fathers: at any rate it has not been applied by them to the criticism of the text of Ignatius.

VARIOUS OPINIONS AND CONTROVERSY RESPECTING THE IGNATIAN EPISTLES.

From the first appearance of the Greek Epistles bearing the name of Ignatius down to the middle of the seventeenth century, when the publication of the editions of Usher and Vossius formed a new epoch in their history, a great variety of opinion respecting the genuineness and authenticity of the whole or part of these Letters prevailed. Some, with the Cardinal Baronius* and the Jesuit Halloix †, received them all as the genuine and unadulterated writings of the disciple of St. John; while others, with J. Calvin ‡, did not scruple to denounce the whole as a barefaced and stupid forgery. The Magdeburg Centuriators spoke doubtfully of the whole §. The opinion, however, which seems most generally to have prevailed among moderate and reflecting persons was, that Ignatius did indeed write Epistles; but that those which then bore his name had been much corrupted and interpolated by later hands. Scultetus sums up the arguments respecting them thus: “Rationibus his in omnem partem probe diligenterque excussis, in tertiam nonnulli secesserunt sententiam, statueruntque esse quidem epistolas hasce Ignatii: sed adulteratas, sed interpolatas. * Medullæ Theologiæ Patrum Syntagma. In quo Theologia Præcorum Primitivæ

At the period of the publication of the Shorter Recension by Usher, and of the corresponding Greek text of some of the Epistles by Vossius, and, indeed, even before that time, party feelings with respect to Church Government had begun to operate greatly upon mens' minds; and so far to influence their judgment as to cast a great impediment in the way of candid and impartial criticism respecting the Ignatian Epistles. The strong hierarchical tendency of these Letters, their frequent exaltation of the Episcopal office, and the positive declaration contained therein—Without these (that is, the Bishop, the Presbyters, and Deacons) there is no Church, with other sentences, such as the following:—Let no man do any thing of what belongs to the Church without the Bishop.—Wheresoever the Bishop shall appear, there let the People also be.—It is not lawful without the Bishop, neither to Baptize, nor to celebrate the Holy Communion†—while they necessarily caused great offence to such as had adopted the Presbyterian form of Ecclesiastical government, both on the Continent and in Great Britain, gave, on the other hand, a value to these Epistles in the eyes of their opponents far beyond any other intrinsic merit which they might possess. If these writings were indeed, as they professed to be, the genuine production of the disciple and companion of one of the holy Apostles, their authority, although not so imperative upon Christians as that of the Sacred Scriptures themselves, would undoubtedly carry very great weight; nor could it be rejected without much presumption and consequent spiritual danger. The positive and distinct manner, therefore, in which the method of Church Government, and of the administration of the Holy Sacraments by Bishop, Presbyters, and Deacons, is laid down and insisted upon in these Letters, would be decisive at once as to the question at issue between the two parties. We find, therefore, as we might naturally expect, the one party exerting itself to the utmost to disprove the genuineness of the Ignatian Epistles, and the other not less zealous and strenuous in endeavouring to establish it. Each, in the eagerness to secure its own object, caught only at such points as were favourable to its own views, and thus heedlessly, if not intentionally,

He writes concerning these Epistles in the following terms:—"Quod permirum mihi videretur, nisi apud me constaret, omnes illas Ignatii Epistolas suppositicias esse, vel certe multis locis interpolatas. Stylus tamen, qui nimis rhetoricatur, nec simplicitatem redolet Apostolicam, et præterea multorum rituum mentio, et rerum, morumque quos in Ecclesia nondum ætate Ignatii usus receperat, satis evincunt, non posse illud opus auctori quem ementitur, adscribi. Κυριακῆς observandæ traditio, ἱερέων et ἀρχιερέων de Episcopis et Presbyteris appellatio, Altarium mentio pro mensis, Laicorum et Clericorum distinctio, Judæorum odium, quos non adeo tunc aversabatur Ecclesia Christiana, et alia infinita, quæ alibi notabuntur, inaudita Ecclesiæ eo tempore quo vixit et scripsit Ignatius, id quod dico plane probant. Et sane στιχομετρία vetus præfixa est operi Georgii Syncelli et Theophanis in antiquissimo exemplari, quo recensentur scripturæ ἐκκλησιαζόμεναι et κεκανονισμέναι, item spuria et ἀπόκρυφοι inter τῆς νέας γραφῆς ἀπόκρυφα. Ignatius omnia reponit cum Pastore Hermae, Periodis Petri, Pauli, et Johannis, cum Evangelio secundum Thomam et Clementis operibus. Epistolæ illæ natæ aut suppositæ videntur circa initium aut medium secundi sæculi, quo tempore primus singularis Episcopatus supra presbyteratum introductus fuit. Ideo ut eum commendaret, et confirmaret, in omnibus epistolis septem prioribus usque ad nauseam sæpe iterat et inculcat, Episcopo tanquam Christo esse obediendum. Nihil sine Episcopo in Ecclesia agendum; quem definit, πάσης ἀρχῆς καὶ ἐξουσίας ἐπέκεινα πάντα κρατοῦντα ὡς οἶόν τε ἄνθρωπον κρατεῖν. Quæ si quis Apostolorum genium spirare contendat, næ ille haud unquam trivit illa Apostolica scripta. Sed et falsissimum quod in Epistola ad Trallenses scribit, venerandum esse Episcopum sicut Christum, quemadmodum Apostoli præceperunt. Αἰδέσθε δὲ καὶ τὸν Ἐπίσκοπον ὑμῶν ὡς Χριστὸν, καθὸ ἡμῖν οἱ μακάριοι διατάξαντο Ἀπόστολοι. Ubinam hoc Apostoli præceperunt? Paulus certe in priore ad Timotheum præcipit: τοὺς καλῶς προεστῶτας Πρεσβυτέρους διπλῆς ἀξιοῦσθαι τιμῆς. Qui bene præsumt Ecclesiæ Presbyteros duplici honore dignos esse. Quod ille de omnibus Presbyteris, sive Episcopis, qui plures unam tunc regere solebant Ecclesiam, non de singulari aliquo et locali Episcopo dixit. Quasi idem esset pendere à Christo et pendere ab Episcopo, et quasi nemo posset Christianus cum Christo sentire qui dissentiret ab Episcopo, utriusque mentem in unum conspirare, Christi et Episcopi, ut qui affirmaret, non posse quæ Christi sunt sapere qui contra Episcopi sententiam ullo modo faceret. Quæ toties de Episcopi auctoritate repetita, eo sensu, et illa verborum ὑπεροχῆ, putida sunt, inepta, sed et falsa, et pæne impia. Quæro enim, quis unquam talia in commendationem Episcopalis dignitatis scripserit? Quæ, ut dixi apparet de industria et affectatione composita, ad extollendam Episcopi auctoritatem, circa initia introducti Episcopatus, ut populi, qui antiquæ et Apostolicæ æqualitati presbyterorum assueverant, facilius ac lubentius eum reciperent, nec propter novitatem exosi aversarentur. Quo primum tempore, cœptus est Episcopatus superstrui ac superponi presbyteratui, scriptum illud prodiisse, id argumento est, quod ita Episcopum extollit, ut Presbyteros non deprimat." &c. p. 252.

But a far more able and elaborate attack upon the Ignatian Epistles than any which had yet appeared was published by the very learned Frenchman J. Visitors in 1648, had been designed for the Bishopric of Worcester by Charles the Second after the Restoration; but he died on his way to London in 1660 before the appointment was confirmed. The danger which had threatened the entire constitution of the Church of England by the abolition of Episcopal authority had passed away with the Commonwealth; and in the year 1661 the Bishops having previously had their spiritual authority restored to them, were again reinstated in their seats in Parliament. No external pressure, therefore, rendered it necessary to defend the cause of Episcopacy in England; and consequently the interest respecting the Ignatian Epistles, which had been supposed to afford such important testimony in its favour, abated and died away. Nor has the discussion respecting them ever been renewed again in this country, except by Whiston, who endeavoured to vindicate the Longer Recension and the whole twelve Epistles as genuine, because he believed them to be favourable to the Arian views which he had adopted, and was anxious to defend.

Many of our theological writers have subsequently quoted the authority of the Ignatian Epistles; but none of them seems to have entered again into any critical examination of their genuineness or integrity. The weight of Bishop Pearson's name has been generally considered conclusive; and many authors, without either the inclination or the learning requisite to enter into the question themselves, or even to examine the arguments of that learned prelate, and ascertain how far they are valid, have not scrupled to cite the Ignatian Epistles as unquestionable evidence, whenever the passages which they adduced were favourable to their own opinions. The frequency of the occurrence of this, even in the works of some of our most respectable theologians and controversialists, shews how natural a thing it is for men under such circumstances, when the conclusions coincide with their own wishes and ideas, to rely upon and put forward the authority of some great name rather than undergo the labour of investigation for themselves, and incur the responsibility of propounding conclusions of their own.

Various authors on the Continent, subsequently to the reply of De Larroque to Pearson's Vindiciæ, have expressed, in different works, a judgment more or less favourable to the Ignatian Epistles*; but almost all of them have concurred in the opinion, that even in their Shorter form they exhibit manifest indications of interpolation and corruption. Within the last few years the subject of the Ignatian Epistles has been again brought more prominently forward; and the question touching their genuineness and the two different Recensions has been renewed and discussed with various grades of opinion in Germany. The Longer Recension has again found an advocate*: the Shorter has gained new supporters†. Both have been denied to be perfectly genuine, but still have been acknowledged, although much corrupted and changed from their original condition, to contain in them part, if not the whole, of the genuine text‡; and further, their authenticity has been altogether denied§. All this discussion, however, has been carried on, and this variety of opinion been propounded, without the introduction of any new element of criticism, either from the discovery of additional copies in Greek, or of any unknown ancient version, or from any passages having been found to be cited by early authors which had not been previously known and applied.

DISCOVERY OF THE SYRIAC VERSION.

I have already observed that so early as the year 1644 Archbp. Usher had hinted at the probability of additional light, at some future period, being thrown upon the obscure and difficult subject of the Ignatian Epistles by means of a Syriac Version. He further drew attention to the fact of the existence of such a version from its having been mentioned in a catalogue of manuscripts belonging to a recent Patriarch of Antioch, also bearing the name of Ignatius, which had been brought to England by the learned Henry Saville.||

Ebed Jesu, Metropolitan of Soba, in his catalogue of works in the Chaldee or Syriac language, translated into Latin by Abraham Echellensis, and published in the year 1653, had also spoken distinctly of the writings of St. Ignatius, Bishop and Martyr. In the midst, therefore, of the discussion respecting the Ignatian Epistles, which the publication of the Medicean copy had rather aggravated than allayed, Dr. Fell, Dean of Christ Church, afterwards Bishop of Oxford , began to cherish the hope, formerly expressed by the Primate of Armagh, of solving this difficult question by obtaining a copy of the ancient Syriac or Chaldee version of the Letters of St. Ignatius. He conceived that a favourable opportunity of endeavouring to procure a copy of that translation was now opened to him through the assistance of Robert Huntington, then Chaplain to the British merchants at Aleppo, and afterwards successively Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, and Bishop of Raphoe. Huntington undertook this commission of Dr. Fell with the greatest zeal, as his correspondence with different dignitaries of the Oriental Churches sufficiently proves. In a Letter to Stephen Peter, Maronite Patriarch of Antioch, dated Feb. 24, 1680, he writes: “Majora insuper a tanto Viro speramus beneficia: vel cætera ejusdem Patris (Ephremi Syri) opera, vel beati Ignatii Epistolas, in Syriacam, uti aiunt, linguam versas. Hujus succedis throno, succedis pietati; ideoque tuum est a squalore et vermibus Antiochenæ sedis gloriosum Præsulem vindicare, et tenebris hucusque obrutum Maronitis Tuis et Christiano orbi luce donare et immortalitate. Si inveneris ubicumque Monasteriorum tuorum, Librum hunc, vestrâ dialecto exscriptum, quocumque pretio redimere vellem, ut in Europa jugis Libani liberiore frueretur aurâ, et privilegiis tanto Authore dignis.” † In another to the same Patriarch, dated July 1, 1681, he writes: “Sancti Ignatii Epistolas non alibi reperio, Syriace versas, licet ab Ebed Jesu in Catalogo suo, ut probæ notæ, recensentur: ideoque in te spes mea est, et quod liber cedro dignus Libani jugis debeat resurrectionem suam et immortalitatem.” ‡ In a Letter addressed to John Lascaris, Archbishop of Mount Sinai, dated Feb. 10, 1680, he urges the same inquiry: “Si D. Ignatii Epistolæ, Syro, Græco, vel aliquo alio idiomate, apud vos scriptæ, retineantur, vellem eas quocumque licet pretio redimere.” § And writing again to the same Archbishop on the following day, he says: “Rogavi insuper Catalogum Codicum omnium, qui in inelyta celeberrimi monasterii Bibliotheca latitant, Manuscriptorum; denique Epistolas beatissimi Martyris Ignatii, Præsulis Antiocheni, quocumque idiomate, præsertim Syriaco, exaratas. And in another Letter to the same Archbishop, dated Cairo, Dec. 10, 1681: “Insuper, pluribus literis, et modo appulerint, ad nauseam usque repetitis, alios etiam desideravi Codices, tuo, hoc est æquissimo, prætio redimendos: quales sunt, D. Ignatii Epistolæ, vel Græco, vel Arabico, et præsertim Syriaco, idiomate conscriptæ.” †

Nor did he in his zeal limit his researches to inquiry by Letter only: he also made several journeys in quest of books, and twice undertook a voyage to Egypt for this purpose. On one of these occasions he even proceeded as far as the monasteries in the Desert of Nitria, and visited the Syrian convent dedicated to St. Mary Deipara, which at that time was in possession of two copies of the Three Syriac Epistles, and of a third of that to St. Polycarp. It is evident, however, that the monks did not shew him their collection of manuscripts, as the only book which he particularly speaks of having seen there was a copy of the Old Testament in the Estrangelo character, in two large volumes. ‡ Although all the endeavours of Huntington to obtain the Syriac version of the Epistles of St. Ignatius were unsuccessful, his inquiries tended nevertheless to throw some further light upon the subject of their existence, as the following passage from a Letter of Stephen Peter, the Maronite Patriarch of Antioch, shews: “Ci accenna per causa delle lettere di Santo Ignatio, Patriarcha di questa Antiochena sede, se si ponno trovare nella lingua Sira; è certo che quelli antichi Padri l’havessero tradotte in questa lingua, mà in quanto a noi, l’habbiamo mai viste; e per aggradire alla sua pia domanda, non mancaremo di far tutto il possibile in cercare, se si ponno trovare in questi paesi.” §

The learned Eusebius Renaudot, in his work on the Oriental Liturgies ||, published in 1716, had also called attention to the existence of an ancient Syriac version, from the fact of his having found various passages from the Ignatian Epistles cited in an ancient collection of Canons in that language. I have given the extracts to which he alludes in this volume, pp. 197—201, 232—235. I have also quoted Renaudot’s words relating to them, and made some observations thereon in my notes, p. 344, to which the reader is referred.

In 1725 Jos. Sim. Assemani printed the catalogue of Ebed Jesu, above mentioned, in the original language, and at the same time indicated the existence of a Syriac copy of the Acts of Ignatius' Martyrdom among the treasures of the Vatican.*

In the valuable collection of Syriac manuscripts procured by the late Claudius James Rich during his Residency at Bagdad, and purchased after his decease by the Trustees of the British Museum, is an imperfect volume, containing lives of Saints and Martyrs: among them is found the Fragment of the Martyrdom of St. Ignatius, and of his Epistle to the Romans usually inserted therein, which is printed at pp. 222—225, 252—255 of this work. So early as the year 1839 I had transcribed this fragment; and I further entertained great hopes of being able to procure a complete copy of the Martyrdom of St. Ignatius, in which I concluded the Epistle to the Romans would be comprised, from a very ancient manuscript containing numerous Acts of Martyrs, and among them those of St. Ignatius, which had been obtained from the monastery of St. Mary Deipara of the Syrians, in the Desert of Nitria, by J. S. Assemani, in 1715, and deposited in the Vatican. † I trusted to be able to procure from Rome a copy of one at least of these Epistles; and thus to have some grounds for forming an opinion as to what value we might reasonably expect should be attributed to the Syriac version of the whole collection, should it ever come to light. I was, however, sadly disappointed in this my expectation; for although my application was made and repeated through a channel which I had every ground to suppose would prove successful, the only reply which I could obtain was, that no such book existed. It is, nevertheless, distinctly stated to be in the collection of Syriac Manuscripts in the Vatican both by J. S. Assemani ‡, and also by his cousin, Step. Evod. Assemani. §

But fuller means of investigating this subject, than I had even ventured to hope for, were unexpectedly thrown in my way by the acquisition of several very ancient Syriac manuscripts, procured from the same monastery in the Desert of Nitria, called also the Valley of Scete, or of the Ascetics, by the Rev. Henry Tattam, now Archdeacon of Bedford, during his visit to Egypt in the years 1838 and 1839. ||

|| See an account of this collection of manuscripts, and of the manner in which it

No sooner was this collection deposited in the British Museum than I anxiously examined the contents of every volume, to ascertain if any of the Epistles of St. Ignatius were among them; and I was rejoiced to discover, not only several extracts from these Epistles, cited by different ecclesiastical writers, but also the entire Epistle to St. Polycarp, in a volume of great antiquity.

Several of these manuscripts contained notices of the donors by whom they had been presented to the monks of St. Mary Deipara. Among them were some in the handwriting of Moses of Nisibis, some time Superior of the convent; in which he stated, that in the year of the Greeks 1243, or 931 of our era, he had added to the library no less than two hundred and fifty volumes, which he had procured by donation and purchase during a recent visit to Bagdad. A few of these I was aware had been obtained and transported to the Vatican by Elias Assemani in 1707, and by J. S. Assemani in 1715; but from the accounts given to me by Dr. Tattam, by Lord Prudhoe, now Duke of Northumberland, who had visited this convent in 1828, and by the Hon. Robert Curzon, who had also been a guest of the monks of the Nitrian Desert about nine years later, I had every reason to conclude that there were still lying in obscurity in the Valley of the Ascetics at least two hundred volumes, of an antiquity anterior to the close of the ninth century. Encouraged by finding one Syriac Epistle of St. Ignatius to hope for the discovery of others, and extremely desirous of exploring the remainder of those volumes of such venerable antiquity, and of rescuing them from the obscurity in which they were lying, and from the destruction with which they were threatened, I naturally felt a most intense anxiety that some measures should be speedily taken to endeavour to obtain for the library of the British Museum the rest of the manuscripts belonging to the Nitrian convent. Archdeacon Tattam, equally zealous with myself in the same cause, voluntarily offered his services to undertake another voyage into Egypt, and to endeavour to negotiate for the purchase of them. The present Duke of Northumberland most cordially approved and effectually aided our endeavours; and in the year 1842, the Trustees of the British Museum having applied for and obtained a special grant from the Lords of the Treasury for this purpose, Archdeacon Tattam was obtained for the British nation, in an article, headed British Museum—Manuscripts from the Egyptian Monasteries, in No. CLIII. of the Quarterly Review, pp. 39—69.

shortly afterwards started upon his second expedition into Egypt, in quest of manuscripts. This undertaking was crowned with very great success; and on the 1st of March, in the year 1813, between three and four hundred additional volumes, from the monastery of the Valley of the Ascetics, arrived in the British Museum. I immediately began to examine their contents, and had the rare satisfaction of having my hopes realized by finding among them, not only several additional passages from St. Ignatius, quoted by various authors, but also three entire Epistles—to St. Polycarp, to the Ephesians, and to the Romans—in a volume of very considerable antiquity.

Although Archdeacon Tattam's second journey to Egypt had been attended with such eminent success, and had added so many invaluable stores to the British Museum, he had not exhausted the whole of the rich mine of the Valley of the Ascetics, nor transferred all the literary treasures of the Egyptian Desert to the library of the British metropolis. At the same time as they professed to dispose of the whole of the collection, nearly half of their volumes were concealed and withheld by the monks for some future occasion. In the year 1847 M. Auguste Pacho* was fortunate enough to become the possessor of the remainder of the manuscripts belonging to the Brethren of St. Mary Deipara; and the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having most liberally purchased them from him to complete the collection already deposited in the British Museum, I had the happiness of discovering among them another copy of the Three Epistles of St. Ignatius in one of those volumes which had been presented to the Monastery in the year 931 by the Superior, Moses of Nisibis.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SYRIAC AND THE SHORTER GREEK RECENSION AS TO EXTENT AND ARRANGEMENT.

In viewing the Three Epistles of St. Ignatius now before us as they correspond with the Syriac version, the first thing which strikes our notice is their comparative brevity, even with respect to the Shorter Recension published from the Medicean and Colbert manuscripts. This arises from the omission of words, sentences, and even long passages, found in that Recension, which are not recognised in the Syriac. The first question, therefore, which we are naturally led to consider, is, whether these passages have been omitted by the Syriac translator, or whether they have been introduced into the Greek text subsequently to the period of the Syriac translation, or at least of the transcription of the copy from which it was made. In either case, their nature and extent preclude the possibility either of the omission or addition being the effect of accident, or the result of mere carelessness or wantonness on the part of any transcriber. We can hardly suppose that the Syriac translator, in dealing with a work entitled to such veneration as the Epistles of this holy Martyr, and secondary in importance only to the inspired writings of the Apostles themselves, should have made such omissions simply for the sake of brevity, more especially when these Epistles in themselves are so short. If, therefore, he did presume to omit any thing, he must have done so with some particular object, with the design of promoting some end which he had in view, or of supporting more effectually some doctrine or opinion which the authority of these passages in the Epistles of St. Ignatius seemed to discountenance or disprove. On the other hand, if at any period subsequent to their original composition such passages were inserted into the genuine text of these Epistles, it is altogether unreasonable to suppose that this could have been done without design. It frequently indeed happens that words, or even sentences, added in the margin of a manuscript for the purpose of explanation or illustration, find their way into the text through the ignorance or carelessness of subsequent transcribers, instances of which may perhaps be pointed out in these Epistles; but it is altogether contrary, both to experience and reason, to suppose that such passages as those, which are not recognised in the Syriac translation, could have been introduced into the Greek text otherwise than designedly, and for purposes similar to those for which such omissions would have been made, although with the opposite intention of giving them that additional weight which the authority of St. Ignatius must bring with it.

The examination of one or two of those passages not found in the Syriac translation, which have direct reference to a particular subject, may enable us to draw some probable conclusions from which we may form a tolerably accurate judgment respecting this matter. Taking, therefore, the long passage omitted from the Epistle to the Ephesians, which comprises nearly the whole of chapters II.—VIII., pp. 17—24, we find that this bears immediately upon several very important questions relating both to doctrine and discipline. The leading feature, however, which pervades the whole, is the matter respecting the Clergy. The three orders of the ministry of Christ's Church are distinctly mentioned, the necessity of Episcopacy is maintained, and the duty of union with, and of submission to, the Bishop and Presbytery strongly insisted upon. Again, this subject is referred to in the twentieth chapter of this Epistle, and likewise in the seventh and eighth of that to St. Polycarp, and also in the ninth of that to the Romans, none of which are found in the Syriac version. It seems certain, then, that either it must have been the design of the Syrian translator to omit these passages, which speak in such distinct terms of Episcopacy and the Clergy, because they militated against his own notions, and were repugnant to his own opinions; or, on the other hand, that it has been the object of some interpolator to insert and mingle them with the genuine writings of St. Ignatius, in order that he might give more authority to his own views by alledging them as the testimony of that holy Martyr and disciple of the Apostles.

That they have been omitted by the Syriac translator for any such purpose as that which we have mentioned seems to be highly improbable, from the fact of his having retained the following words in the Epistle to St. Polycarp, in which the same things are also expressly asserted: Ἐὰν γνωσθῆ πλὴν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, ἔφθαρται. Πρέπει δὲ τοῖς γαμοῦσι καὶ ταῖς γαμουμέναις, μετὰ γνώμης τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τὴν ἔνωσιν ποιεῖσθαι, ἵνα ὁ γάμος ᾗ κατὰ Κύριον, καὶ μὴ κατ' ἐπιθυμίαν· πάντα δὲ εἰς τιμὴν Θεοῦ γινέσθω. Τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ προσέχετε, ἵνα καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῖν. Ἀντίψυχον ἐγὼ τῶν ὑποτασσομένων τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, πρεσβυτέροις, διακόνοις· μετ' αὐτῶν μοι τὸ μέρος γένοιτο ἔχειν παρὰ Θεῷ, p. 9. The retention of this one passage, speaking with so much precision and distinctness on this subject, would render all the other omissions, which might have been made with the intention of invalidating it, futile. If the design had been to raise any doubts respecting it, or to weaken the arguments in its favour by alledging the silence of St. Ignatius on this head, it would have been necessary, not to omit part, but all of the passages which refer to it; for even one, only incidentally mentioned, would afford sufficient testimony to establish the existence of the fact, which the omission of all the others could not invalidate, although, if adduced, they may serve to exhibit it with more distinctness and precision.

But the question assumes a different aspect when any particular object is to be enforced and substantiated. A skilful advocate, to make good his cause, will naturally bring forward all the evidence that he can collect, and will summon to his aid every available authority which seems likely to strengthen his cause. Nor will he hesitate, if he be deficient in candour and integrity, to adduce such fictitious documents as appear likely to strengthen his argument, and thereby to effect his purpose, whenever he can do so without fear of detection. That the cause of Episcopacy is strongly advocated, not only in the places now before us, but also in almost all the Epistles to which the name of St. Ignatius has been attached, is acknowledged on all hands. It is therefore plain that these passages, whether they be the genuine words of that holy Martyr, or whether they be the subsequent addition of an interpolator, have been written in a great measure with this object in view. But it has been shewn already that it is highly improbable that they should have been omitted by the Syrian translator, with the design of favouring any purposes or opinions of the opposite tendency; while, on the other hand, the circumstance of St. Ignatius himself having mentioned the three orders of the clergy, and recommended the duty of obedience to them in the passage of the Epistle to St. Polycarp quoted above, would have afforded an interpolator an occasion for urging in stronger terms, and more distinctly and frequently, a subject which really had been adverted to by the author whose name and character he had ventured to assume. Moreover, it is but just to state, that these passages, speaking in such positive terms on this subject, and so constantly and directly referring to it, are the very passages which, of all others, have tended to throw the greatest doubts upon the Epistles of St. Ignatius, and which, independently of their omission from the Syriac, have otherwise afforded to the impugnors of the authority of these Epistles very strong arguments against their genuineness and authenticity. Daillé felt so much confidence in the argument drawn from this consideration, that he styles it *Argumentum Palmarium; and I must confess that the answer of Bishop Pearson to this seems to me to be very far from full and satisfactory.

Further, in the same chapters from the Epistle to the Ephesians which are not recognised by the Syriac, we find sentences bearing upon a matter of no less importance than one of the most essential articles of our faith, the Godhead of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Thus, for instance: ἐν σαρκὶ γενόμενος Θεός (ch. 7. p. 23), ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστός (ch. 18. p. 33). Again, in the last chapter of the Epistle to St. Polycarp: ἐν Θεῷ ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ (p. 13); and further, in the Epistle to the Romans, in the Inscription: Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν; ἐν Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν (p. 39); ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστός (ch. 3. p. 43); Ἐπιτρέψατέ μοι μιμητὴν εἶναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου (ch. 6. p. 49); in all of which this doctrine is expressly mentioned. And not only is it asserted in places like these directly, but also in others, by the mere addition or change of a single word; as, for example, in the inscription of the Epistle to the Ephesians, the simple insertion of the conjunction καὶ, omitted in the Syriac, in the sentence ἐν θελήματι τοῦ Πατρὸς [καὶ] Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, affirms the doctrine of the Godhead of our Lord by limiting τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν to the latter member of the sentence, Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ: † and again, the substitution of Θεοῦ for υἱοῦ in the nineteenth chapter of the same Epistle (p. 35) contains a declaration of the same truth. It is quite evident, therefore, that in all these places this object has been kept distinctly in view; and that either these words must have been omitted and altered by the Syriac translator for the purpose of undermining and weakening this article of our belief, or that they must have been inserted and changed with the design of giving additional force to the arguments upon which this most vital doctrine is based.

But it is most clear that the Syriac translator could not have omitted or altered these passages for the purpose of denying the divinity of our blessed Lord by suppressing the testimony of St. Ignatius to this essential doctrine, or he would not have retained others in which it is as fully intimated, and even directly asserted. Thus, for example, in the Epistle to Polycarp: τὸν ὑπὲρ καιρὸν προσδόκα, τὸν ἄχρονον, τὸν ἀόρατον, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς ὄρατον, τὸν ἀψηλάφητον, τὸν ἀπαθῆ, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς πα-θητὸν, τὸν κατὰ πάντα τρόπον δι' ἡμᾶς ὑπομείναντα (p. 7. l. 1). In the same Epistle, εἰς τὸ Θεοῦ ἐπιτυχεῖν (p. 5. l. 3); and in the Epistle to the Romans, δύσκολόν ἐστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπιτυχεῖν and, καιρὸν τοιοῦτον Θεοῦ ἐπιτυχεῖν (p. 41. l. 5, 6); δι' ὧν ἔνεστιν Θεοῦ ἐπιτυχεῖν (p. 45. l. 4), compared with ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, and μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω (p. 49. l. 3, 6). Again, in the Epistle to the Ephesians: μιμηταὶ ὄντες Θεοῦ (p. 15. l. 10), compared with μιμηταὶ δὲ τοῦ Κυρίου in the same Epistle (p. 29. l. 1). Also, in the Epistle to the Ephesians: μαθητῆς εἶναι Θεοῦ (p. 17. l. 4) with ἔσομαι μαθητῆς ἀληθῶς Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ of the Epistle to the Romans (p. 45. l. 8). Further, in the Epistle to the Romans: Καλὸν τὸ δύναι ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου εἰς Θεὸν, ἵνα εἰς αὐτὸν ἀνατείλω (p. 43. l. 3) compared with ΑΛΛ' ἐὰν πάθω, ἀπελεύθερος γενήσομαι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἀναστήσομαι ἐν αὐτῷ ἐλεύθερος (p. 47. l. 3), and with ἵνα κρείττονος ἐλευθερίας ἀπὸ Θεοῦ τύχωσιν of the Epistle to St. Polycarp (p. 7. l. 9). Again, in the Epistle to the Romans: Ἄρτον Θεοῦ θέλω, ὅς ἐστιν σὰρξ Χριστοῦ (p. 51. l. 3), and also in the same Epistle: ἐκὼν ὑπὲρ Θεοῦ ἀποθνήσκω (p. 45. l. 2). Moreover, in the Epistle to the Ephesians we have directly, ἐν αἵματι Θεοῦ (p. 15. l. 10); and at the close of that to the Romans we find    "Jesus Christ our God."

We see, therefore, that this great doctrine is frequently stated and maintained in these Epistles of St. Ignatius, even as they are exhibited in the Syriac translation; not, indeed, in so direct and formal a manner as in those passages which have been omitted, but equally plainly and fully, and more in accordance with the style of the inspired writings themselves, and the simplicity of the Apostolic times*; just as we might naturally expect that holy Martyr, with this conviction always present in his mind, to write, sometimes calling the author and finisher of his salvation his Saviour; sometimes his Lord; at others, Jesus the Christ, and at others, God. Each and all of these appellations conveyed equally to his mind that great truth which was the foundation of all his hopes—God in the flesh. It would not, therefore, be natural for him to state this truth so frequently in its direct and complex form, unless with the design of opposing some who denied it; nor, indeed, would it be necessary for him to do so in writing to one who had been, as well as himself, a disciple of St. John the Evangelist, or hardly to those congregations of Christians to whom it must have been familiar. The hypothesis, therefore, that the passages bearing upon this subject might have been omitted by the Syrian translator for the purpose of invalidating this great doctrine, which could have been the only probable design of their omission, seems to be altogether untenable.

* We have an illustration of this in the history of the Creeds. In the Apostolic times, and those immediately following, a simple formula, such as that called the Apostles' Creed, was considered a sufficient profession of faith. At the beginning of the fourth century it became necessary to introduce the more complex formula of the Nicene Creed, subsequently the Constantinopolitan, the Chalcedonian, &c. At page 336 I have made some observations upon the period when the term Catholic Church is first found to be in use. I need scarcely remark, that although the copies of the Apostles' Creed generally in use in our own and other Churches have "the holy Catholic Church," the word Catholic is a later interpolation. See Usher de Symbolis, p. 12. The Lord Chancellor King's History of the Apostles' Creed. 8vo. London, 1703, p. 338. Routh's Reliquiæ Sacræ, Vol. v. p. 333.

But, on the other hand, there is no improbability in the supposition that any one wishing to support this doctrine by the authority of St. Ignatius should put this truth into a more direct and positive form, and insert it among his genuine writings, which he might venture to do with less fear of detection, from the fact of its having been so manifestly inculcated by that Apostolic Father. Indeed, the circumstance of this direct and formal affirmation of the Godhead of our blessed Lord, so frequently repeated in the Shorter Recension of these Epistles, has been used as an argument against the authenticity of that Recension; not by any of the opponents of the writings of St. Ignatius, but by advocates of the Longer Edition, because these passages contain that direct and positive assertion of this truth, which does not appear to have been generally made use of till after the Arian heresy and the subsequent decisions of the Council of Nice.*

It would be easy to bring forward many other instances of a similar nature to those which have been already advanced, from such parts of the Greek as are not found in the Syriac translation.

But besides those passages, which have reference to some particular

* The smaller Epistles most frequently change the other common names of our Saviour into God, &c. What can be the meaning of so often changing the usual words, and so frequently calling Christ God—so much more frequently, I mean, than the Scriptures, or any other Remains of the Apostolic age do—but to serve the turns of the Athanasians, who were then busy in advancing the divinity of our Saviour——? Now this cannot in reason be supposed to be Omission in the Larger Epistles; since they still call our Saviour God, as often and in the same manner as the first Christians did, but must be Interpolation in the Smaller: And so must, in all probability, have been designed for the purposes of the Athanasians in the Fourth Century." See Whiston's Dissertation on the Epistles of Ignatius, p. 36. See also Meier, in Ullman, Studien und Kritik. 1836. p. 340.

point of doctrine or discipline, there are various others, for the omission of which it seems hardly possible to assign any plausible reason, although it is very easy to explain why they might have been inserted into the text. Thus, for example, in the Epistle to St. Polycarp, the omission of the word ἀδιαλείπτως after προσευχαῖς σχόλαζε (ch. 1. p. 3); and again, in the Epistle to the Ephesians, of ἀδιαλείπτως from ὑπὲρ τῶν ἄλλων δὲ ἀνθρώπων ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε (ch. 10. p. 27). Had this omission occurred in one instance only, we might readily have supposed it to have been an oversight of the transcriber; but the repetition of the same thing precludes that supposition: and we can hardly avoid the inference that it must have been either inserted or omitted designedly. It is difficult to imagine any ground which the Syriac translator could have had for making such an omission; but it is easy to see how any one, bearing in mind the corresponding passage of St. Paul, ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε (1 Thes. v. 17)*, might have noted this in both instances in the margin, and that in this manner it might have found its way into the text. And not only may we thus account for these words having been introduced into the text, but also they might have been inserted with the intention of more effectually opposing the very heretics which in this same Recension of the Ignatian Epistles are spoken of in that to the Smyrneans, εὐχαριστίας καὶ προσευχῆς ἀπέχονται (ch. 6.), † and to whom reference is again made in the fifth chapter of that to the Ephesians, which is not found in the Syriac, μηδεὶς πλανήσθω· εἰ μὴ τις ἢ ἐντὸς τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου, ὑστερεῖται τοῦ ἄρτου τοῦ Θεοῦ. κ.τ.λ. (p. 21). Other similar additions are, τοῦ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἑαυτὸν ἀνευγκότος προσφορὰν καὶ θυσίαν, also in the Epistle to the Ephesians (ch. 1. p. 17) ‡; from the words of St. Paul: καὶ παρέδωκεν ἑαυτὸν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν προσφορὰν καὶ θυσίαν (Eph. v. 2.); and in that to the Romans, τὰ γὰρ βλεπόμενα πρόσκαιρα· τὰ δὲ μὴ βλεπόμενα αἰώνια (ch. 3. p. 43) §; from St. Paul to the Corinthians (2 Cor. iv. 18.); and in like manner, νηπίοις οὖσιν (pp. 53 and 77), from 1 Cor. iii. 1.

Again, there are others, for the omission of which it seems difficult to give any satisfactory reason; although we may easily perceive how they might have been introduced into the text, by way of explanation or illustration. Such are τῆς Ἀσίας, in the Inscription of the Epistle to the Ephesians; κοσμικὸν ἢ μάταιον, in that to the Romans (ch. 4.

p. 47)*; also ἀνατομαί, διαίρέσεις (ch. 5. p. 49)†; ἄρτον οὐράνιον, ἄρτον ζωῆς (ch. 7. p. 51)‡; οὐχ ὡς παροδεύοντα (ch. 9. p. 53); καὶ ἀένναος ζωῆ (ch. 7. p. 51)§; and εἰς καινότητα αἰδίου ζωῆς, in the Epistle to the Ephesians (ch. 19. p. 35). It would not be difficult to assign also a plausible reason for the addition of the two sentences last mentioned, upon the same ground of opposition to heresy, to which allusion has been already made.

But besides words and sentences like these, there are others which appear to be almost altogether indifferent in themselves, and which, unless we admit that the Syriac translator, thinking these Epistles too long, undertook the task of abridging them—which seems too improbable a supposition to be tenable—it is impossible to assign any cause for their omission, but which, on the other hypothesis, that interpolations have been subsequently inserted into the text, we should naturally expect to find. A cautious interpolator would introduce not merely such things as were directly adapted to uphold his own views on any specific subject, and which for that reason might be the more readily pointed out and detected, but he would further add, as a blind and covering for the rest, other indifferent matter, to which no particular suspicion respecting himself individually could be attached. The production of another copy, to compare with his own in which those particular passages only had been inserted—if any good reason could be shewn, from a knowledge of his peculiar sentiments and opinions, why he might be supposed to have added them—would doubtless render the detection of his fraud much more easy than if these copies were found to differ, not only by the addition of this particular matter, but also by the insertion of various other subjects for which no such direct cause could be alleged. Moreover, in the case of the introduction of spurious passages into the writings of any author, a skilful interpolator would endeavour, as much as possible, to conceal the additions which he made, by using the phraseology of the author, and, so far as it was practicable, even borrowing his very words. This is strikingly apparent through all those parts of the Greek which the authority of the Syriac translator would pronounce spurious. Several peculiar and idiomatic expressions of St. Ignatius are repeated again and again in sentences which otherwise have but little resemblance to his genuine style, as we shall see below||: and indeed the interpolator seems to have gone beyond his mark; so that this has been used by Daillé, in his thirty-first chapter, as one strong argument against the genuineness of the Epistles of St. Ignatius: “Quod scriptor eadem omnibus Epistolis, et quidem interdum iisdem, perpetuo βαπτολογεῖ: neque fere quicquam semel dicat, quod a sanctissimi Martyris sapientia, et gravitate alienum videtur.”*

The argument from the consideration of design respecting the introduction of these passages into the Greek text seems to be conclusive in itself; for many reasons, and those, too, highly probable, may be alleged why, and how, they might have been inserted; but it seems almost impossible to assign any other why they should have been omitted in the Syriac, than that this was done for the sake of abbreviation, which appears to be altogether unfeasible. To this we should add another consideration—that we know of no instances of such abridgment as this in any other early Christian writer; while examples of fabrication, additions, and interpolations, are most numerous, and that especially in the interval between the death of Ignatius and the publication of the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius, in which we find the first mention of Seven Epistles ascribed to the venerable Bishop of Antioch.

Again, there is another internal argument to be adduced, from the structure of these Epistles. In arranging a Greek text from the two Recensions to correspond with the Syriac, the passages which have been removed, even from the Shorter, are very numerous; and in the Epistle to the Ephesians at least two-thirds of the matter has been omitted. Now had these passages so omitted belonged to the original Epistle it seems hardly possible that they could have been taken away in the manner in which they have been, sometimes entire chapters, at others considerable parts, sometimes whole sentences, and at others half sentences, or single words, without interrupting the general tenor of the Epistle, or causing any hiatus, and producing obscurity. But what is now the state of the case? Not only is no obscurity caused, nor the tenor of the Epistle broken, but, on the contrary, several places, which before were unintelligible, become now clear; the whole Epistle runs on uninterruptedly; each sentence adheres closely to that which precedes it; and, what is still more remarkable, all this almost without the necessity of making any grammatical change in the order or construction of the sentences; and further, one passage omitted in the Greek, which Bishop Pearson had previously pointed out as necessary to complete the context, he was to choose one "who shall be called a messenger of God (θεόδρομος), that going into Syria he may glorify your incessant love to the praise of God."*

That this holy Bishop, when carried away from his own flock to receive the crown of martyrdom, should have been solicitous to send another shepherd to watch over and feed the sheep once entrusted to his care, and that, next to his desire to depart and be with the Lord, the wish nearest his heart should have been to provide for their spiritual wants, is most natural, and altogether consistent with his character. We therefore should reasonably expect that he would take all the means in his power to procure such a successor, which, from the fact of his having been put into chains immediately upon his confession before Trajan, he could not do before he left Antioch; and that, being himself a close prisoner, and therefore unable to appoint and duly constitute a suitable person to fill that sacred office, he should seek the help of St. Polycarp, his friend and fellow disciple of St. John, in this necessity. This, therefore, so far from being neglected by him when they met at Smyrna, doubtless occupied much of his attention. He would naturally explain all his own feelings and wishes, and ask the advice and assistance of Polycarp in his endeavours to carry them into effect. Nay, more than this, it seems highly probable that the merits and character of some individual, who might be qualified to fill that important office, should have been duly considered by them; and in this manner his successor might even in some measure have been fixed upon then, and this important matter, so far as it was possible, have been decided upon before these two faithful pastors and affectionate brothers in Christ separated, in the conviction that they should see each other's faces no more till they met in the kingdom of God. What, then, could be more natural and simple than the allusion to this circumstance in the Epistle to St. Polycarp, as it is represented to us in the Syriac? St. Ignatius sends an especial salutation to him who should be deemed worthy to go as his successor to preside over the Church in Antioch, intimating, at the same time, the duty of his obedience to the call, should he from any cause manifest a reluctance to undertake so responsible an office:—"The Christian has no power over himself, but must be ready to be subject to God. I salute him who is deemed worthy to go to Syria in my stead, as I charged thee." Such an allusion as this to a subject which could hardly have failed to occupy their attention when they had met at Smyrna only a very short time before, seems in itself much more probable than that Ignatius, under the circumstances in which he was placed, should have deemed it necessary to give express directions to St. Polycarp as to the manner in which he was to proceed in this matter, such as we find in the seventh and eighth chapters of the Greek, which in themselves seem more consonant to the practice of rather later times: and further, these two chapters contain other matter which appears to carry great improbability, if not contradiction, upon the face of it. Respecting this I refer the reader to what I have stated at pp. 311, 312.

Moreover, we are at a loss to imagine any reason why the Syriac translator should omit such positive directions relative to the appointment of a person to go to Syria, if they really had been written by St. Ignatius, and simply insert this allusion to some previous instructions. But the allusion having been made, we may easily see how an interpolator might make this a handle for introducing spurious matter favourable to his own views.

Another passage in the Syriac, not now found in the Greek, is ܘܢܝܫܘܘܢܐ ܕܘܠܘܘܢܐ ܕܘܠܘܘܢܐ “Ye were diligent to come and see me,” in the Epistle to the Ephesians, p. 17. The insertion of this is necessary for completing the sense of the passage, as Bishop Pearson observed more than a century and a half before the Syriac version came to light*; and the ancient Latin version of the Shorter Recension, which has videre festinastis, shews that it existed in that recension anterior to the later corruptions of the text in the Medicean manuscript.

A third is ܠܥܘܨܩܝܢܐ ܠܗܘܘܢܐ ܘܢܝܫܘܘܢܐ ܕܘܠܘܘܢܐ “Now, therefore, being about to arrive shortly at Rome,” in the Epistle to the Romans, p. 53, which forms a sort of introduction to the remaining part of that Epistle. Of these words we find still traces in περὶ τῶν προελθόντων με εἰς Ῥωμην—ἐγγύς με ὄντα of the last chapter, even as it now stands in the Greek. The passages which follow next in the Syriac do not belong to the Epistle to the Romans according to the Greek Recensions, but constitute the fourth and fifth chapters of that to the Trallians. The question, then, to be considered, is, whether these chapters have been displaced by the Syriac translator, or by some editor of the Greek Epistles who arranged them in their present form.

* See Notes, p. 280, and my Vindiciæ Ignatianæ, p. 24.

In viewing the case simply, they certainly seem to occupy a more appropriate position in the Epistle to the Romans than in that to the Trallians. St. Ignatius, as he drew near to Rome to be devoured by the beasts, according to the edict of Trajan, writes to the Christians there, to tell them that now at length the desire which he had long ago cherished of seeing their faces was fulfilled; that according to all appearances he should soon terminate his earthly course, by martyrdom; that he was most anxious to seal his testimony for Christ with his blood, and to obtain the privilege of many of his Lord's own immediate Disciples—that of suffering for His sake. It seems to be quite evident from the whole tenor of the Epistle that some intimation had been conveyed to him from the Christians at Rome who had influence, that they were anxious to exert it in reversing the decree of the Emperor, and to save him from suffering.* He begs them, therefore, in an earnest and impassioned manner, not to use any such influence which they might possess, but rather to pray that strength might be given him from within and without, to enable him to receive his crown without dread of the ordeal which he must go through to obtain it; and to enforce his request, he insists upon his desire to undergo the trial, and urges the advantage which he should obtain when it was overcome. Moreover, the Romans seem to have spoken of his great spiritual knowledge, and to have pressed it as an argument why he should desire to have his life spared for the benefit of the Church. In the latter part of this Epistle, therefore, as it stands in the Syriac, Ignatius still continues in the same tenor: he allows, indeed, that he has been favoured with much spiritual knowledge, but this also he seems to put forward as an argument on his side why they should consent to his request not to interfere to save him nor attempt to hinder his sufferings, because he was better acquainted with God's providence, and able to see further into His designs, with respect to himself, than they; at the same time adding, that the danger of being puffed up by his greater knowledge required greater humility and circumspection on his part; and finally, he urges this, as well as the danger which it may also throw in their way, as a reason why he should not write to them on heavenly things. And this he seems to have done by way of caution beforehand, lest, upon his arrival at Rome, they should be anxious to exercise too great a curiosity with respect to divine things, which they might have reason to suppose a disciple of the beloved Apostle St. John, then on the point of receiving the crown of martyrdom, might be able to disclose to them. Such seems to be the bearing of this passage of St. Ignatius, than which nothing can be more natural in the place which it occupies in the Epistle to the Romans, as it is found in the Syriac version.

On the other hand, not only do the circumstances under which the journey of St. Ignatius is said to have taken place present so many difficulties as to time and distance as to render it extremely improbable that he should have been able to write any Letter at all to the Trallians from Smyrna*; but, also, it is difficult to understand for what especial purpose these chapters should have been introduced into an Epistle to the Trallians: and they seem to have little or no reference to what precedes or follows. We know of no reason why he should make any allusion to his knowledge of heavenly things when writing to the Trallians; nor even is there any apparent purpose to be gathered from that Epistle for his doing so as it now stands. More than two centuries before the discovery of the Syriac version shewed that these two chapters originally belonged to the Epistle to the Romans; the sagacity of Vedelius pointed out the incongruity of the place which they occupy in that to the Trallians. †

There are also two other places in these chapters themselves in which two or three words are found that have no equivalent in the Greek: one, ܠܗܘܢ ܕܢܘܨܝܢ “such things as these,” to be added after οἱ γὰρ λέγοντες μοι, p. 53, and ܐܝܢܝ ܕܢܘܨܝܢ “for I am cautious,” to precede μήποτε οὐ δυνηθέντες, κ. τ. λ., ibid. In both instances the addition of these words makes the sense more clear; and in the former it is necessary to render the passage intelligible. ‡ There are also a few other very slight alterations in the text of these Epistles, such as νὺν §, at the beginning of that to the Romans; and transpositions, such as by Sea and by Land, in the Syriac, for διὰ γῆς καὶ θαλασσοῦς of the Greek in the same Epistle (p. 47), which, although apparently of little moment, are nevertheless of great critical importance in enabling us to form a correct judgment as to the whole question of the Ignatian Epistles. Respecting these the reader is referred to the notes in their several appropriate places.

DIFFERENCE AS TO STYLE AND MATTER.

A further comparison of the Greek text of the Three Epistles, after the removal and addition of such passages as were requisite to make it conformable to the Syriac, with the Shorter Recension as exhibited in the Medicean and Colbert manuscripts, will supply us with several very important data upon which to found some additional arguments that may enable us to draw still more certain conclusions respecting the whole question of the Ignatian Epistles. If the passages that have been so removed present a difference as to style and matter, from those which have been retained, so remarkable as to have been observed upon by critics about two centuries before the Syriac version came to light and confirmed their observations, we may very reasonably conclude that both of them cannot be by the same hand. If, further, the same writers have urged as objections against these passages so omitted, that they contain references and allusions, which they have pointed out, to facts and circumstances belonging to times subsequent to the latest period at which Ignatius could have written, and these do not exist in what has been retained, we can scarcely be wrong in drawing the inference in favour of the superior claims to antiquity and genuineness of the Syriac Recension, which is free from such objections; nor can we fail to be struck by the sagacity of those critics in making such observations, which other copies of the Letters of Ignatius, at that time unknown and lying in obscurity in the African desert, but transcribed about a thousand years before, have now appeared, nearly two centuries afterwards, to confirm. Moreover, those parts which are common to both of the Greek Recensions and to the Syriac will necessarily have a far better claim to be considered as belonging to the original Letters than such as are only peculiar to any one of these three.

To begin, then, with the Epistle to Polycarp, we find, upon comparing the Three Recensions together, but very little difference between them. In the Shorter Recension of the Greek the six first chapters exhibit scarcely any variation, in no place exceeding the alteration or insertion of a single word; and in the Longer Recension only a few very unimportant insertions have been made. The united testimony, therefore, of all the Three Recensions shews that these six chapters must remain most nearly in their original state, and consequently that they exhibit the style of the author in its purest form, not modified and obscured by the admixture of interpolated matter by another hand.

If we turn next to the Epistle to the Romans, we find that the Shorter Recension of the Greek, compared with the Syriac, is almost free from insertions in the five first chapters, although it has received very considerable additions in the inscription of the Letter as well as towards the end. The difference, also, between the Longer and Shorter Recensions in these five chapters is comparatively slight, amounting to no more than three short insertions in the whole of the three first chapters, one of two words, another of three, and the third of five. The original style, therefore, of this Epistle also has not been altogether obscured. Near the end of this Letter, as it stands corrected and arranged according to the authority of the Syriac, we have two entire chapters transferred from the Epistle to the Trallians as it is found in the Shorter Recension; and the Greek text of these chapters so transferred corresponds almost accurately with the Syriac. These also will serve to illustrate the style, because they supply a considerable passage in which the text of the Syriac and that of the Shorter Recension of the Greek corresponded with each other at a period anterior to the additions and changes in these Epistles which constituted the Longer, generally known as the Interpolated edition of the Greek. These additions, however, are comparatively slight in this place, consisting chiefly of insertions towards the end of the fifth chapter.

If we proceed next to compare the three Recensions of the Epistle to the Ephesians, and assume the Syriac to represent the most ancient text, which the far greater antiquity of the copies in which it is contained might alone justify us in doing, we find the additions and admixture, even in the Shorter Greek, to be so great, that it has been almost entirely changed from its primitive form, and that the original words of the Epistle have been so broken up and mingled with additional matter, that it would have been impossible to recognise and separate them without such aid as that which is supplied by the Syriac copies. The Longer Recension adds still more foreign matter, and further increases the difficulty. We have not, therefore, the same indications, as to the manner and matter of the original Letter of Ignatius, from the combined testimony of the three Recensions in this Epistle as we have in the other two. On the contrary, after the first chapter the insertions have been so many, and the additions so great, as to have amplified it to about four times its original size; and thereby to have completely obscured the primitive form and character of the Epistle, and to have substituted in its place the style of the interpolator by whom these additions were made.

although the fact, so far as my knowledge goes, has never been gained, I have been at some pains to prove the identity of its authorship with that of the Epistle to the Ephesians as it is now exhibited in the Medicean text; and I believe that I have fully and satisfactorily established that point. This being done, I have not deemed it necessary to go through the same process with respect to the Epistles to the Trallians, Philadelphians, and Smyrneans, because they have been universally acknowledged to be the work of the same person as the Epistles to the Magnesians and the Ephesians, as they are all found together in the Medicean manuscript. The same arguments, therefore, as to style and matter, which relate to any one of these five Epistles will be applicable to them all.

From what I have stated above, it is evident that all the three Recensions concur in affording their united testimony in favour of the superior antiquity of the text of the Epistle to Polycarp over the rest of the Letters attributed to Ignatius; and that, if any part of his writings remain at all in their original state, it must be the six first chapters of this, which constitute nearly the entire Epistle. Even before proceeding further, I think I may here venture to express my conviction, that no person with a competent knowledge of the Greek language can read the six first chapters of this, and compare them with the Epistles to the Ephesians, Magnesians, Trallians, &c., without being struck by a difference as to style and matter between it and them, so remarkable as to lead him to infer that they cannot be the production of the same hand. This observation will equally apply to the Greek text of the Epistles to the Ephesians and Romans as I have restored it in conformity with the Syriac version.

But the evidence of this fact will become much stronger, and be apparent even to those who may not be sufficiently acquainted with the language to judge for themselves, if we consider what has been said on this head by learned and able critics many years, nay, even centuries, before the Syriac version came to light. I have already stated* that the difference as to style and matter between the Epistle to Polycarp and the rest—which indeed, as to some parts of it, had been previously observed by Scultetus †, Halloix ‡, and Vedelius §—was considered so clusions. Vossius*, in his notes upon this Epistle, admitted that these grounds for suspicion were well founded, but at the same time he considered the external testimony in favour of this Epistle, commencing even with that of St. Polycarp, to be so strong as to prevent its being shaken by them. And Tillemont† defended it against the condemnation of Archbishop Usher, simply upon the external evidence given in its favour. Daillé observed upon the difference as to style between this and the rest of the Epistles in the following terms:—"Idem est de ea judicium quæ ad Polycarpum scripta est. Ipsa inscriptio, non ut aliarum, spinosa, et intricata, sed clara ac nitida, ab ipso statim limine orationem qualis sequitur, promittit, tersam, et cultam et facilem."‡ Mosheim writes respecting it: "I cannot help looking upon the authenticity of the Epistle to Polycarp as extremely dubious, on account of the difference of the style."§ Schroeckh also expressed a similar opinion.|| The following passage from Whiston relates equally to the Epistle to the Romans and to that to Polycarp:—"I observe, in confirmation of the former assertion, that those Two Epistles, and those only, which were sent on quite different designs from the rest——have the least alterations or omissions of any, I mean that to the Romans, and that to Polycarp, as is very easy to note upon the comparison. This observation at once proves that the Smaller Epistles are no other than an abridgment, and no other than an orthodox abridgment also. For surely these two Epistles were capable enough of Addition and Interpolation, had that been the case here; but because there is no sign that it was so, and because these Epistles alone, by their very nature and occasions, had little that offended the orthodox, our abridger had little cause to make alterations therein. I desire the admirers of the Smaller Epistles to give a clear account of the visible difference there is in this matter between those Two Epistles and the other Five.”*

Although, as I have observed above, the five first chapters of the Epistle to the Romans have not suffered from interpolation in the same manner as the entire Letter to the Ephesians, numerous additions have been made to its Inscription, sufficient to expand it to three times the extent of the Syriac; and in the five last chapters of the Greek, even of the Shorter Recension, not more than one sixth part belongs to the original text which the Syriac translation followed. This will shew us the reason why the difference of style in the five first chapters of this Epistle has not been so distinctly noticed and observed upon as in the case of the Epistle to Polycarp. Still, however, Dr. Hammond† has remarked that this Epistle differed in matter from the rest; and Bishop Pearson also has observed that it is couched in terms abounding with pious fervour beyond any of the rest.‡ Neander likewise has stated that this “Epistle to the Roman Church possesses more decided marks of originality than the others.” Of the others he had previously observed, “that they do not wear at all the stamp of a distinct individuality of character, and of a man of those times addressing his last words to the Churches. A hierarchical purpose is not to be mistaken.”§ Moreover, with respect to the two chapters which, as the Syriac copies shew, have been transferred from the Epistle to the Romans to that to the Trallians, with little or no admixture, and which consequently exhibit a considerable passage of the original and unadulterated text, the difference of style between them and the rest of the Epistle to the Trallians was observed and pointed out by Vedelius more than 220 years before the Syriac text was brought to light.||

rejects and those which it confirms had been observed by various writers long before the Three Genuine Epistles were discovered and published, I will now point out very briefly some of the characteristics of that difference as they appear upon the comparison of the restored text with that of the Medicean Recension.

But it may be necessary first of all to make a very few general observations upon this restored text. If we examine closely the Three Epistles, we find that they are written in a plain, simple, and easy manner, without any affectation of studied phraseology; in short, nervous and detached sentences, with the single exception of the beginning of the Epistle to the Ephesians, where the first two or three sentences are a little involved, and do not run so easily, but seem to indicate that they were written in haste. This indeed appears to be the character of the whole Epistle. They also contain several manifest Aramaisms.* This, which is the case in the style of the writers of the New Testament, we might also reasonably expect in that of one of their successors, who was Bishop of Antioch, where Syriac was the vernacular language. Epithets are but very sparingly used, and those are of a simple form, except in the Inscription of the Epistle to the Romans, where not less than six compound adjectives are found together—ἀξιόθεος, ἀξιοπρεπής, ἀξιωμακάριστος, ἀξιέπαινος, ἀξιομνημόνευτος, ἀξιεπίτευκτος. One of these, ἀξιομακαρίστω, occurs also in the Inscription of the Epistle to the Ephesians, and another, ἀξιόθεα, in the first chapter of that to the Romans; and in that to Polycarp we find ἀξιοπίστοι.† The initial element of all of these is the word ἄξιος; the origin of which seems to be in the very common employment of the root ܐܘܫ in the Syriac; and to this we may probably trace the frequent use of ἄξιος and its derivatives in the writings of the New Testament.

There is not, however, in the whole of the Three Epistles, a single instance of any other compound epithet of which either of its elements is one of the words which constitute the latter part of any of the seven above mentioned commencing with ἄξιος. All the Three Letters begin in the same manner, Ἰγνάτιος, ὁ καὶ Θεοφόρος. This last appellation seems to be nothing more than another name by which Ignatius was generally known. But whatever may be its meaning or purport, it is quite certain that this word occurs nowhere again in the whole of the Three Epistles, nor any other epithet whatever compounded of either of its elements. The Aramaic dialect, although it admits of some compound words, is generally averse to them*: we should not, therefore, expect the employment of many such epithets in the writings of one whose circumstances and position would lead us to look for a colouring of that dialect in any thing which proceeded from his pen. The formation of privatives by prefixing the negative μ , in the same manner as the α privative of the Greeks, is, however, very general in Syriac; and it is remarkable that we find in the Three Epistles very frequent instances of such words. Thus, in the Epistle to Polycarp, ἀκίνητον, ἀκοίμητον, ἀκέραιος, ἀόρατα, ἀφθαρσία, ἄχρονοι, ἀψηλάφητον, ἀπαθή, ἀκαυχησία. In that to the Ephesians, ἄτρεπτον, ἀμώμω, ἀδιηγῆτω, ἀπιστία, ἀπιστοῦσι, ἄγνοια. In that to the Romans, ἀμώμω, ἀνεπποδίστως, ἀκαίρω, ἀδικήμασιν, ἄκοντα, ἀόρατα, ἄφθαρτος. The word ἄμωμος is nothing more than ܐܡܘܡܘܣ μ adopted into the Greek.†

† In my notes upon this word at page 270 I have observed that it does not accurately correspond with the Syriac. The translator seems to have read another word in this place.

If we presume the restored text to represent the genuine words of Ignatius in the Three Epistles, and the additions which are found in the text of the Medicean and Colbert manuscripts to be interpolations introduced by another hand at a later period, unless the interpolator should have been most cautious in the application of every word which he employed, it is by no means improbable that he might have made use of terms and phrases which occur nowhere in the genuine text, even while he was endeavouring to imitate it by borrowing several of the author's peculiar expressions and mixing them up with his own. On the other hand, if we assume the restored text to be an abridgment, it is most highly improbable that not one of those terms peculiar to the passages omitted should occur in the whole extent of the Three Epistles, especially if they relate in no way to doctrine and opinion, and are merely linguistic. If we turn now to the seventh chapter of the Epistle to Polycarp, where the additions begin, we find that the first sentence not only presents a remarkable difference in length and construction from any which precede it, but that it also contains not less than seven words, none of which occur in the whole of the Three Epistles. In the second sentence we find Θεομακαριστότατε and Θεοπρεπέστατον; which epithets, although they occur again in the other Ignatian Epistles, and the second of them frequently, are not once found in the restored text, nor any thing resembling them. It is plain that these compounds, like numerous others in the Ignatian Epistles, have been formed, by taking the first element from *Θεοφόρος, and the second from ἀξιομακάριστος and ἀξιοπρεπής, which occur together in the Inscription of the Epistle to the Romans. Thus, in the ninth chapter of the Medicean text of the Epistle to the Ephesians we find Θεοφόροι, ναοφόροι, χριστοφόροι, ἀγιοφόροι. The frequent employment of such epithets as these has been urged by several able critics as a grave objection against the Ignatian Epistles, because they seem to be unsuited to the simplicity of an Apostolic writer; incongruous with the martyr's character, so far as there are means of judging of it; ill adapted to the circumstances in which he was placed; and altogether dissimilar to what we find in the Epistles of Clement or Polycarp, or any other ancient writer till the fourth century, of whom any fragments have come down to us.† Whatever weight such objections may have, they are certainly not applicable to the Three Epistles. Indeed they rather tend to confirm them, because we can trace the origin of all these particular compounds in an attempt to imitate other expressions in the Three Letters against which the same objections could not be urged, but for which a rational and probable account can be rendered from the idiomatic peculiarity of the writer. This endeavour to imitate on the part of an interpolator, while it proves incontestably the superior antiquity of that which he is trying to copy, at the same time furnishes us with his testimony to the genuineness of the original document which he had taken upon himself to counterfeit.

With respect to the employment of the verb καταξιῶσαι in this seventh chapter I refer the reader to what I have said at p. 309; and I also request him to peruse what I have written at p. 317 respecting the use of the particle οὐν, which also occurs in this chapter; and I must leave him to draw his own conclusions from the absence of this latter word from the restored text of the Three Letters of Ignatius, and the frequency of its use throughout the rest of the Ignatian Epistles. It appears to me that it would have required a far more cautious interpolator than he who has thus dealt with the Epistles of Ignatius seems to have been, who could have been always sufficiently upon his guard to prevent any chance of detection by avoiding, in his own additions, the use of so small a particle as this, which evidently was very familiar to him. It would be tedious to the general reader to enter further into such verbal comparisons in this place. Every one who wishes to investigate this subject thoroughly must examine for himself; and by so doing he will doubtless arrive at results that will be more satisfactory to his own mind than any which I could state here at greater length.

* Archbishop Usher conceives that this appellation of Θεόφορος has also given rise to the story, which afterwards became current, that Ignatius was the child which our Saviour took up in his arms. See Notes below, p. 360.

† Bishop Pearson has the following curious passage:—"Si gentem et Ecclesiam spectes cui præfuit, viro apud Syros tot annos morato, si non apud eodem nato educatoque, maxime convenit plurimum Epithetorum congestio." See Vindiciae, part. ii. p. 9. Had the learned Bishop been better acquainted with the genius of the Syrians and their language he would hardly have ventured to make such an assertion. "Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus."

I have already observed, as Vedelius* and Usher have done before me, that an interpolator, in order to give the colour and appearance of truth to his own additions, would naturally borrow certain expressions peculiar to the genuine writings which he had taken upon himself to imitate. Thus we find immediately, in the seventh chapter of the Epistle to Polycarp, Θεοῦ ἐπιτύχω borrowed from Θεοῦ ἐπιτυχῶν in the genuine text above, p. 5. l. 3, and from the Epistle to the Romans, p. 41. l. 6, and p. 45. l. 4. In the same manner this peculiar expression is twice borrowed in the interpolated parts of the Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. xii. p. 29, and of that to the Romans, ch. ix. p. 53; and so likewise in those to the Trallians, ch. xii. and xiii., to the Magnesians, ch. xiv., to the Smyrneans, ch. xi.; and thus, also, εὔρεθῆναι, which is borrowed here, is repeated over again and again in the interpolated parts of the genuine and in the spurious Epistles. The phrase ὃς δυνίσεται Θεόδρομος καλεῖσθαι in this seventh chapter is copied from μὴ μόνον λέγωμαι Χριστιανός, ἀλλὰ καὶ εὔρεθῶ. ἐὰν γὰρ εὔρεθῶ, καὶ λέγεσθαι δύναμαι of the genuine text to the Romans, p. 43. l. 6; and in the same manner in the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. iv., μὴ μόνον καλεῖσθαι Χριστιανός, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι.

It seems unnecessary that I should carry these remarks further; for this endeavour on the part of the interpolator to throw a cloke over his own additions by imitating some of the genuine phraseology of Ignatius is very strikingly apparent through the whole of the Ignatian Epistles. We have only, therefore, to adopt the arguments of Archbishop Usher † on this head, which he drew from the Six Epistles that he received and turned against the others which he rejected, and apply them in the case of the Three which we receive and the four which we reject, and we shall find them even still more apposite and forcible.

The frequency with which expressions are taken from the restored text of the Recension exhibited in the Syriac, and introduced among those passages which it does not admit, and the other Epistles which it does not acknowledge, while, on the other hand, both the latter abound in terms and constructions which do not occur in the whole of the Three Epistles so restored, seems to me to be quite conclusive as to the fact of their being the production of different hands, and of the greater antiquity of the Three Epistles.

I have observed above that many objections have been raised against the Ignatian Epistles from the inflated and artificial, and apparently affected style in which they are written. I will briefly state some of them in this place. De Saumaise expressed his opinion respecting them in the following terms: "The style, which is too rhetorical, and has no savour of Apostolic simplicity . . . shews that they cannot be the work of that author whose name they counterfeit."* Blondel writes: "Who could believe that a disciple of the Apostles, in bonds, and aspiring to martyrdom, would have been thus pleased with an affected kind of diction, abounding in turgid and pompous epithets, such as do not once occur in any of the writings of the most ancient Fathers which have come down to us, or of which Eusebius has preserved any fragment in his history of the Church?"† I have already mentioned that Daillé characterizes the Epistle to Polycarp as differing from the rest by its terse and easy style. I quote here some of his observations with respect to the Epistles generally: "Multa nos alia hunc scriptorem vocabula diu post Ignatium vixisse docerent si, quis fuerit singulorum sermo, quis verborum usus, perspectum æque haberemus, ac istum duorum nominum, episcopi et presbyteri illis temporibus sensum.—Illa Latina non urgeo, quæ Græcus scriptor parum probabiliter suis epistolis multa inserit, ἐξemplάριον, δεσέρτωρ, ἀκκεπτά, δεποσίτα: pro exemplari, desertore, acceptis, depositis, quæ doctissimus Hammondus et divinatorum et aliorum scriptorum exemplo tuetur, apud quos non paucae extant ejusdem census voces Latinæ. Esse enim hæc affectata assiduus eorum usus arguit. Velim mihi vel apud Paulum, vel apud Petrum aliquid horum, quæ in epistolarum scriptore extant, simile ostendi. Sic ille ad Ephesios loquitur: ἵστέ οὖν συνόδοι πάντες Θεοφόροι, καὶ νοσοφόροι, χριστοφόροι, ἀγνοσόφοροι. Vetus Usserii interpres Latinus ita reddidit: Estis igitur conviatores, Deiferi, et templiferi, et Christiferi, Sanctiferi. Ista vero adeo sunt putida, ut non possim mihi persuadere quin Hammondo, viro in paucis erudito, excitura fuerint nauseam; nisi præcepta animo de scriptoris sanctitate opinio sensus ejus, in aliis acerrimos, in hoc uno religione quadam defixos tenuisset.*

Christ. Aug. Heumann writes thus: “Mihi quidem hæc potissima videntur ac certissima τῆς νοθείας indicia——. vi. Ipsa styli facies. Certe quotiescunque has legi epistolas, (legi autem sæpius) deprehendi omnia in illis esse frigida, jejuna, inepti tumoris affectatæque grandiloquentiæ plena, et nimis vivide sperantia vanum ac planum Græculum.” †

It will be seen at once, upon comparing the Recensions together, that these objections apply only to the passages and the Epistles which the Syriac copies reject. While, therefore, the Syriac version, discovered many years subsequently, tends to shew the sagacity and critical acumen of those who stated them, and to prove the justice and truth of their observations, the text which it exhibits, on the other hand, has also obtained reflectively a very strong argument in its own favour, from the fact of its being found to have been free, at least a thousand years before the Ignatian controversy was mooted, from those objections which have been so skilfully and acutely urged by the critical impugners of these Epistles.

Having made these remarks upon the formal difference between the Syriac and the Shorter Greek Recension of these Epistles, I come now to consider the material difference. I have made some observations respecting the apparent scope and tendency of these Epistles in my notes, pp. 308—336. I shall proceed here to shew that the very grave objections which have been raised against the Ignatian Epistles, from the apparent references and allusions in them to circumstances and events subsequent to the date of the death of Ignatius, are applicable to those passages and Epistles only which do not exist in the Recension which the Syriac version represents. I have already adverted to the fact of objections having been made against these Epistles from the strong hierarchical tendency, more consonant with the age of Cyprian* than that of Ignatius, which runs through both the Shorter and Longer Recensions of the Greek; and that Daillé, whose arguments on this point include all those of such as had preceded him, felt such confidence in the conclusions which he derived from this head against the Ignatian Epistles as to induce him to consider them decisive of the question. †

A still further objection has been urged against the Ignatian Letters, from the apparently manifest reference which they make to the opinions of certain heretics, who were not known till after the martyrdom of Ignatius, such as Saturninus, Theodotus, and Valentinus. No one can read these Epistles without seeing that certain tenets of the Docetæ and of the Phantasiastæ are most distinctly and directly opposed in numerous passages of these Epistles, whether it be that they refer to Saturninus or some other earlier heretics who had promulgated the same opinions. It is also equally certain that the dogmas held by Theodotus are condemned in them, whether they be considered as emanating from himself, or as having been propounded by some heretic still more ancient. These facts Bishop Pearson ‡ allows, even while he is combatting the objections which have been urged from them against the Ignatian Epistles. The allusion to the peculiar tenets of Valentinus in the following words of the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. viii., ὅς ἐστιν αὐτοῦ λόγος αἰδῖος, οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθὼν*, seems to be so very positive and direct, that not only have those who impugned the Ignatian Epistles altogether, such as Blondel †, De Saumaise ‡, Daillé §, Oudin ||, Aubertin ¶,

* Dr. Jacobson, in his note upon these words, after stating that Petau's solution of this difficulty, which is cited by Aubertin in the note below, viz. that σιγή does not signify the Sige of Valentinus, but simply 'silence,' was approved by Cotelerius and Pearson, and that, according to the opinion of the latter, Ignatius refers in this place to the heresy of the Ebionites, adds, "Hunc locum adversus Valentinum urgent non Irenæus, non Eusebius, non Athanasius, non Basilius: quamquam ad ejus hæresim refutandam verba illa ὅς ἐστιν αὐτοῦ λόγος αἰδῖος erant opportunissima." Doubtless they are most admirably suited to refute the heresy of Valentinus. Why, then, should Irenæus, Eusebius, Athanasius, and Basil, have neglected to avail themselves of these words of such weight and authority, bearing the name of a disciple of the Apostles? Surely the reason that will most readily suggest itself is, either that they were ignorant of their existence, or did not believe them to be genuine. Dr. Jacobson has borrowed this idea from Bishop Pearson, and indeed expressed it in great part in that Prelate's own words. See Vindiciæ, part ii. p. 20. Nothing can be more weak and defective than the learned Bishop's argument in this place. He begs the whole question, and assumes that Irenæus was acquainted with this Epistle to the Magnesians, and that the words above mentioned cannot therefore refer to the heresy of Valentinus, because he has not so applied them.

¶ I quote here the words of Aubertin at length for two reasons; one, because they contain a very lucid statement of this objection; and the other, because the following observation of Bishop Pearson may lead any one ignorant of them to form a wrong judgment of what Aubertin had written:—"Non ita disputavit Salmasius, non Albertinus, qui scriptas fuisse has Epistolas ante Irenæi libros ultro fatebantur, neque eas Irenæo incognitas fuisse vel somniabant." See Vindiciæ, part ii. p. 30. Aubertin, it will be seen, although he did not deny that Ignatius had written some Epistles, pronounced these, respecting which the Bishop is writing, to be supposititious. "Antiquitati tamen ab aliquo in Episcopatus gratiam, cui commendando totæ sunt, fucum factum fuisse, satis apertè colligitur ex epistola ad Magnesianos in illo codice Florentino, Latinaque Versione supra memorata. more ancient, urges this fact as undoubtable, and draws from thence the inference in favour of the Longer Recension, because it does not contain this passage which manifestly refers to a heresy subsequent to the age of Ignatius. Whiston † also has taken the same view of this matter.

dicto non siluit qui dicebat, quod est Verbum sine tempore, per quod facta sunt tempora, verbum quod labia nullius aperuit captum, clausitve finitum? Verum hæc solutio præcedenti non est potior. Quid enim nos vetat dicere Augustinum in hisce verbis ad Valentinianorum nugas alluisse? Annon ipsemet alibi de Valentino observat illum asseruisse, "triginta αἰῶνας, id est, secula extitisse, quorum principium sit profundum et silentium, quod profundum etiam Patrem appellant? Valentinus certè docuit, Christum ex Sige seu silentio processisse, tum velut è termino quodam temporis, tum velut ex vero generationis principio, id est, tanquam ex matre. Fieri ergo potuit Augustinum loco citatò ad aliquam dramatis istius partem respexisse. Sed quicquid sit de Augustino, Authorem de quo litigamus utramque delirii hujus Valentiniani partem expresse spectasse, videtur apertissimum. Non enim tantummodo de Christo Domino ait, ὁς ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ λόγος αἰῶνος, οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθὼν, sed etiam in præcedentibus asseruerat, nos in illum credere ἀπὸ ἐνὸς πατρὸς προελθόντα. Quibus in verbis, cum mens ipsius sit Christum ab æterno ex Patre tanquam ex principio verè generanti processisse, liquidum est illum quoque intelligere, Christum non ex silentio tanquam ex principio vere generanti, hoc est, velut ex matre produsse. Qui autem ei in mentem venire tum potuisset contendere ac decidere, Christum ex solo Patre processisse tanquam ex principio verè generanti, non autem ex sige seu silentio tanquam ex matre, ne aliqui antea fuissent, aut tunc essent, utrumque generationis illud principium, infrunitum adeò, Domino assignantes? Nemo autem antè Valentinum binum illud principium ei legitur tribuisse. Proprius ejus Character est, ut suprà observabamus. Unde redit argumentum, Authorem hujus Epistolæ Valentino esse posteriorem, ac proinde non Ignatium Antiochenum præsullem. Non negaverim Ignatium epistolas aliquas scripsisse; id enim indicat Polycarpus in epistola ad Philippenses, si tamen genuina est et sincera prorsus, quandoquidem in veteribus Ignatii actis nulla est Epistolarum ipsius mentio, ut idem Usse-rius agnoscit: Sed, si quas scripsit, illæ perierunt, et plures aliæ sub ipsius nomine circa medium secundi seculi compositæ sunt, ac incautè et absque examine a veteribus receptæ. Id autem solius amore veritatis observamus. Cujuscumque enim sint Epistolæ quæ jam habentur, in controversia de qua agimus, ex nobis suffragantur, ut jam sumus ostensuri. † In the same Smaller Epistle to the Magnesians, in the very same place, these words are added: οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθὼν "non a silentio progrediens"; that Christ is the Eternal Word, not proceeding from σιγή, that famous female origin of things so much alluded to by Marcellus, the heretic of the fourth century, but taken at first from the old heretic Valentinus of the second. This allusion, at the highest, to the Valentinian σιγή, is so plain at the first sight, that the greatest patrons of these Smaller Epistles are ashamed directly to deny it, though it be so very strong, and, indeed, almost an undeniable argument against them. One cannot but pity the mistakes and prejudices of the greatest men, when one sees no less a man than Bishop Pearson himself labouring, in four several most learned chapters, to assoil

§ De Hæresibus.

One conclusion I think we may assuredly draw from this fact, that the person, whoever he might have been, to whom the arrangement of the Longer Recension in its present form is due, felt this to be a solid objection against the genuineness of these Epistles, and therefore cautiously endeavoured to obviate it by removing this passage and substituting another. I have pointed out several similar instances in my notes.*

It would exceed the limits which I have felt it necessary to prescribe to myself were I to enter at greater length upon the question before us in this place. I must leave it to those who have the leisure and the inclination to examine and judge for themselves how far the answers of Bishop Pearson to these specific charges are complete and satisfactory. I only observe, that if the objections be maintained and stand good, they are decisive as to the spuriousness of those passages at least to which they apply.

The Syriac version, however, cuts the knot, and solves the difficulty at once, by presenting to us a collection of Epistles attributed to Ignatius, in which none of these passages occur that have tended to throw such strong doubts and suspicions upon the other bodies of Letters which had previously borne his name. Whatever age is to be attributed to the Syriac version, the antiquity of the manuscripts in which it is found proves that it was in existence in the East at least about eleven hundred this grand objection, and yet with so little success; for the only valuable answer which he is able to betake himself to at the last is this, that the $\sigma\iota\gamma\eta$ of Valentinus might be known in the world before the death of Ignatius; whereas it is certain that Hyginus, in whose Pontificate Irenæus assures us Valentinus first came to Rome, began not till A.D. 126, ten years after the lowest date for the death of Ignatius; and it is almost equally certain, from Tertullian, a contemporary author, and very near the place also, that Valentinus was alive, and at Rome, in the Pontificate of Eleutherus, or between A.D. 170 and 185, and so could not be a noted heretic before A.D. 116. Nay, the same Tertullian elsewhere assures us that Valentinus was Marcion's scholar for some little time; which Marcion yet came not to Rome till A.D. 130, and then learned of Cerdon for some time himself, before he set up for a master; so that Valentinus could not be a famous heretic, at the soonest, till about twenty years after the death of Ignatius; no, not even at Rome, the seat of his fame for heresy; much less at Smyrna and Magnesia in Asia, where alone this Epistle of Ignatius was concerned with him. Nay, it was in probability still somewhat longer ere his fame was spread abroad, since Justin Martyr, about twenty-two years after the death of Ignatius, does not vouchsafe to name him among those noted heretics which are enumerated by him, though he does it a few years afterward. Dissertation upon the Epistles of Ignatius, p. 15.

years before the Ignatian controversy was agitated by the learned of the West. Probably its real age may be considerably greater. Its discovery about two hundred years subsequently has afforded a very forcible confirmation to the propriety and justice of the critical observations of the scholars of the seventeenth century. This cannot surely be a mere accident or fortuitous coincidence. It must have its foundation in the truth of the facts, or in the reason of the case.

If we assume the Recension of which the Syriac version is the representation to be the genuine and authentic Epistles of Ignatius, it will follow of necessity that the passages not contained in them, and against which these objections have been urged, are the additions of a later hand, and that the verbal and material criticism was just and true which pointed them out as spurious. This is obviously the most reasonable account which can be given for this striking coincidence.

If, on the other hand, we assume the manifestly untenable hypothesis, that the Recension exhibited in the Syriac collection of the Three Epistles is only an abridgment of another, comprising the Seven of the Shorter Recension, the argument against the passages and Epistles rejected by it will be nearly tantamount, as in the other case. For since this peculiar omission could not have been the effect of accident or inadvertency, it will shew at least that the person who, only a few centuries after the death of Ignatius, undertook the task of abridgment in the East, must have felt the force of these objections, and in rejecting those particular passages and expressions must have been influenced by the same critical spirit and feeling as led the learned of the West, without any knowledge of his previous opinions or labours, to condemn them as spurious more than a thousand years after he had completed his task.

EXTERNAL TESTIMONIES TO THE EPISTLES OF IGNATIUS.

The arguments which have been hitherto adduced respecting the comparative claims of the Three Epistles exhibited in the Syriac version and the Seven of the Shorter Recension have had reference only to their contents; and are therefore of the kind called internal. I come now to consider the external evidence furnished by the testimony afforded to these Epistles by ecclesiastical writers who have either spoken of them or cited them.

In another part of this volume I have given the Testimonies respecting Ignatius, and the quotations from the Ignatian Epistles, as cited by various authors, in Greek and Latin, down to the tenth centure. These, with the addition of the Syriac extracts which follow, are all that at present exist, so far, at least, as my own knowledge extends. It appears to be needless that I should make any reference to those which are of more recent date than the fifth century*; because it is evident, from the passages cited by Theodoretus †, that the Ignatian Epistles at that period had assumed a form sufficiently near to that in which we find them in the Medicean manuscript to justify us in considering both as belonging to the same Recension. It is manifest, however, from the comparison of the quotations made by Theodoretus, that the copy which he followed differed very considerably from the Medicean text; for we find more than twenty-five variations, and some of them very important, in the space of about twenty-five lines of an ordinary printed edition of these Epistles. ‡

About the close of the fourth century we have a Homily of John Chrysostom in commemoration of St. Ignatius §, his predecessor on the episcopal throne of Antioch. In this frequent allusion is made to the Epistle to the Romans; and a few words of it are also directly quoted. In the Homily, De Uno Legislatore, attributed to the same author, a passage from the Epistle to Polycarp is likewise cited. || Both of these quotations are from the Greek text as it corresponds with the Syriac version. In the whole of his very extensive writings which have come down to us Chrysostom has not cited one word from any other of the Ignatian Epistles, nor from any of those parts of the two above mentioned, which the Syriac rejects. ¶ His testimony, therefore, so far as it goes, applies solely to the Recension exhibited in the Three Syriac Epistles.

Of precisely the same kind is the testimony afforded by Basil. In the extract from his Homily, In Sanctam Christi Generationem , there is a manifest allusion to a passage of the Epistle to the Ephesians.

* The remark of Basnage on this head seems to be just: "Quæ, si verum volumus, ingens testimoniorum strues ad eruditionem Vindicis (Pearson) declarandam facere potest, ad probandum non potest. Cùm testimonia autorum, qui post tertium floruerunt seculum, prioribus innitantur, nec plus sit in eo suffragio virium, quam in Polycarpi, Irenæi, Origenis, Eusebii; potuisset ergo celeberrimus Vindiciarum autor, et sibi, et lectoribus tanti laboris exhauriendi dare immunitatem." Annales Politico-Ecclesiastici. † See pp. 171, 172.

¶ The other extracts which I have given from Chrysostom at p. 170, although supposed by some to relate to Ignatius, have evidently no reference to any of the Ignatian Epistles before us.

Whether this was suggested to him from his own knowledge of that Epistle, or whether he borrowed it from Origen, who had quoted the same words before him, the positive evidence supplied thereby relates only to the Syriac Recension in which those words occur. In all the rest of his works which have come down to us Basil has never made any mention of Ignatius, nor cited, nor even alluded to any other of those Epistles which have been attributed to him.

Jerome mentions Ignatius upon several occasions; but it seems to be extremely probable that he never saw any of those Letters which bear his name. In his catalogue of ecclesiastical writers, which, according to the authority of Bishop Pearson, was compiled about A.D. 393*, he has copied the account relative to the Bishop and Martyr of Antioch which Eusebius had given about sixty years before. In doing this he has blundered in omitting one sentence; but the rest of the narrative he has taken almost word for word from the history of Eusebius, as Vossius and the learned Prelate above mentioned have observed: "Et reliqua Eusebiana fere omnia, tacito Eusebii nomine transcripsit." † That Jerome's knowledge of the Ignatian Epistles was but inaccurate is evident; for in his third book against the Pelagians ‡ he cites words from the Epistle attributed to St. Barnabas, and says that they belonged to Ignatius. § He likewise refers to one passage from the Epistle to the Ephesians in his Commentary on the Gospel of St. Matthew ||; but this same passage had been cited before by Origen in his sixth Homily on St. Luke ¶: and this very Homily was translated into Latin by Jerome.  This will furnish a sufficient account of the source whence

 See Fabricius' Bibliotheca Græca, Vol. v. p. 228. Grabe supposed that Jerome borrowed this from the Commentary on Matthew attributed to Theophilus of Antioch: "Et hodiernum prostant libri iv. Commentariorum Allegoricorum Theophili, quos eosdem esse cum iis, quos Hieronymus se legisse ait, tam loco cito, quam in proœmio commentariorum in Matthæum, exinde probabile redditur, quod in Comment. ad cap. i. de causis, ob quas ex desponsata virgine natus sit Christus, tractans, easdem iisdem, quibus Theophilus verbis, assignet. Unde ex Latina Theophili versione ea descripsisse videri poterat." See Grabe, Spicilegium, Sæc. ii. p. 221. Grabe has borrowed this from Bishop Pearson, who, in order to give additional weight to his arguments (Vindiciæ, par. i. ch. ii. p. 5), cleverly insinuates that Jerome read these words in Theophilus, where they are cited without any mention of Ignatius; and that, having also found them in Ignatius' own Epistle, he attributed them to their true source, and mentioned the name in his own Commentary on St.

he probably obtained his knowledge of these words of St. Ignatius. In like manner he appears to have become acquainted with the words of the Epistle of St. Barnabas, above mentioned, because they also have been cited by Origen* at the end of his first book against Celsus; and Jerome was well versed in Origen's works, and translated several of them into Latin. † He also once again mentions the name of Ignatius ‡; but if any thing can be gathered from that passage as to any acquaintance on his part with the Ignatian Epistles, it will certainly better apply to the Longer Recension of the Greek than the Shorter. §

The account given by Rufinus does not profess to be any thing more than a translation of that of Eusebius; and therefore adds nothing to the testimony of the latter.

About the middle of the fourth century we find, in a treatise attributed to Athanasius, De Synodis Arimini et Seleuciæ, a passage cited from the seventeenth chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians, which is not recognised by the Syriac. || Whether that great champion of orthodoxy did or did not cite this passage is of very little importance for the argument before us. There seem, however, to be many grounds to induce us to draw the negative inference.

In the first place, the treatise in which it is found presents certain difficulties on account of incongruity of time, the only solution of which proposed by Montfaucon, the editor of Athanasius' works, is, that a long passage relating to subsequent events must have been inserted after its original composition. ¶ The learned

Matthew: "Legit Theophilum cujus sententiam ex Ignatio decerptam autori suo reddidit." Vindiciæ, par. ii. ch. ii. p. 21. The learned Prelate, however, well knew that these same words had been cited by Origen in his Commentary on St. Luke, with the name of Ignatius distinctly mentioned. Of the fact of Jerome having read them there he was perfectly aware; and in another part of his book, where his argument required it, he has written to prove that Jerome had translated this part of Origen's works. Ibid., par. i. ch. vii. Surely this looks more like the work of a skilful advocate of a particular cause, than of an ingenuous inquirer after the truth.

Cave* also finds much reason to question the truth of a statement respecting Eusebius, which Athanasius must have made, if the above-mentioned treatise, as it now stands, be certainly the work of that author. But what appears to me to throw the greatest doubt upon the matter is, that Athanasius, in the passage to which we are referring, is represented as adducing the testimony of no less a person than St. Ignatius, the disciple of the Apostle, to the fact of our Lord being called ἀγένητος; while in several other parts of his works he repudiates this expression, stating at one time that it was borrowed from the Heathen Philosophy, and at another that it was an invention of the Arians to enable them more cunningly to disseminate their pernicious doctrine with respect to the person of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.† Indeed, the very passage from the Ignatian Epistles which we are discussing bears so directly upon the question that was often urged by the Arians, ἐν τῷ ἀγένητον, ἢ δύο; that from this cause only it might create in some minds a suspicion of its having been introduced into the Epistle to the Ephesians subsequently to the time when that question began to be urged by the Arians. Nor should it be forgotten, that in the Longer Recension, which is supposed to have an Arian tendency, this passage has been so modified as to give it quite a different bearing.

* "All which considered makes me the more wonder at what Athanasius tells us (De Syn. Arim. et Seleuc. s. 17) our Eusebius expressly affirmed in a Letter to Euphration, that Christ is not true God. Pity it is, that the Epistle itself is not now extant, that we might have viewed his genuine sense. Sure I am, the proposition, as it is represented by Athanasius, is plainly contrary to, and inconsistent with, the most mature and deliberate declarations of his mind in all his writings extant at this day." Further, it is to be observed, that in the words as they appear to be cited by Athanasius, we read γενητός and ἀγένητος, made and unmade; while in the Medicean text and in Theodoretus we find γεννητός and ἀγέννητος, begotten and unbegotten. I may also remark here, that none of the authors who have cited this passage entirely coincide with the Medicean text; and that no two of them agree with each other.

It is also certain that Athanasius has nowhere else cited any of the Ignatian Letters, although in his controversies he might have found in them much matter to strengthen and support his several arguments, had these epistles been familiar to him.

He was not, however, a man of any extensive learning and research, as Philostorgius has objected against him, and as even Gregory of Nazianzum in his panegyric of him allows.* No one perhaps was better versed in the Holy Scriptures themselves; and on several occasions he cites, but with a reservation †, the Pastor of Hermas; I do not, however, find that he has quoted upon any occasion the authority of Clemens Romanus, or of Polycarp, or of Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Origen, &c. All these considerations taken together render it far from improbable that the passage from the Ignatian Epistles inserted in the treatise De Synodis is due to another hand than that of the celebrated Athanasius.

We come now to the evidence of Eusebius. He speaks distinctly of seven Epistles, and the testimony thus afforded by him has chiefly influenced the writers on the Ignatian question to select that number from the eleven attributed to Ignatius in the Recension exhibited in the Medicean manuscript, and in the two copies of the old Latin version corresponding with it, which was discovered and first published by Archbishop Usher. It is not at all my desire, nor is it indeed necessary for my present purpose, to state here any of those objections which have been urged against the authority of Eusebius on this matter, from the alleged fact of his having received other documents as genuine, without due and sufficient examination. I will only take his testimony respecting the Ignatian Epistles as it stands, and examine how far it applies to the subject which we are now considering.

In commencing his account of the martyrdom of Ignatius, and of the Letters which he is said to have written during his journey to Rome, Eusebius does not venture to make a positive assertion, but prefaces his notice with the guarded expression Λόγος δ' ἔχει. Further, it seems to be quite evident, from the following passages, that he did not esteem the genuineness and authenticity of the Epistles of St. Ignatius and St. Polycarp to be equally established with that of the first Epistle of St. Clement to the Corinthians, which was universally acknowledged : καὶ ὁ Πολύκαρπος δὲ τούτων αὐτῶν μέμνηται ἐν τῇ ψευδομένη αὐτοῦ πρὸς Φιλιππησίους ἐπιστολῇ (B. iii. ch. 36) ; ὥσπερ οὖν ἀμίλια τοῦ Ἰγνατίου ἐν αἷς κατελέξαμεν ἐπιστολαῖς, καὶ τοῦ Κλήμεντος ἐν τῇ ἀνωμολογημένῃ, παρὰ πᾶσιν, ἣν ἐκ προσώπου τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐκκλησίας τῇ Κορινθίων διετυπώσατο (ibid. ch. 37) ; Ἡ μὲν οὖν τοῦ Κλήμεντος ὁμολογουμένη γραφή, πρόδηλος. Εἴρηται δὲ καὶ τὰ Ἰγνατίου καὶ Πολυκάρπου (ibid. ch. 38.)

It appears, however, to be manifest that Eusebius was desirous of establishing, as far as he could, the authority of these Epistles, probably because they seemed to afford evidence to the Apostolical succession in several churches, an account of which he professes to be one of the chief objects of his history. Thus, immediately after the notice which he gives of the Epistles of Ignatius, he adduces, in confirmation of them, the fact that a passage from the Epistle to the Romans had been cited by Irenæus, and that Polycarp, the master of Irenæus and the friend of Ignatius, had spoken of the latter having written to him, in his own Letter to the Philippians. In a later part of his history * he refers again to the circumstance of Irenæus having made mention of Ignatius, and having cited his words.

Whether Eusebius was cognizant of the fact that two passages from the Epistles of Ignatius had been quoted by Origen, one from the Epistle to the Ephesians, which he himself also adduces in his Quæstiones ad Stephanum †, and the other from the Epistle to the Romans; or whether he considered Origen too remote from the age of Ignatius, and too near to his own to be considered one of the Ancients (τοὺς ἀρχαίους) ‡; I have no means of determining. I can only observe, that although Origen has cited the first Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians more than once, this circumstance is not brought forward by the author of the Ecclesiastical History in evidence of the genuineness and authenticity of that Letter.

It is certain, however, that Eusebius does not adduce the testimony of any other ancient writer than that of Polycarp and Irenæus in support of the Ignatian Epistles; and it is also manifest that their evidence, so adduced, applies only to two Epistles, those to the Romans and Polycarp.

Among the records assigned to the age immediately subsequent to the time of the Apostles are two Epistles, attributed to St. Clement of Rome, both of which are addressed to the Corinthians. Respecting the former of these, in addition to the passages which I have cited above, Eusebius writes in the following terms:—Τούτου δὴ οὖν τοῦ Κλήμεντος ὁμολογουμένη μία ἐπιστολὴ φέρεται, μεγάλη τε καὶ θαύμασια· ἦν ὡς ἀπὸ τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐκκλησίας τῇ Κορινθίων διευτύσατο, στάσεως τηνικάδε κατὰ τὴν Κόρινθον γενομένης. ταύτην δὲ καὶ ἐν πλείσταις ἐκκλησίαις ἐπὶ τοῦ κοινοῦ δεδημοσιευμένην πάλαι τε καὶ καθ' ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἔγνωμεν. καὶ ὅτι γε κατὰ τὸν δηλούμενον τὰ τῆς Κορινθίων κεκίνητο στασεως, ἀξιόχρεως μάρτυς ὁ Ἡγήσιππος.* In another part of his History he brings forward the testimony of Irenæus † to the first Epistle of Clement, in the same manner as he has done in the case of the Epistles of Ignatius.

Of the second Epistle he writes in the following terms:—Ἰστέον δ', ὡς καὶ δευτέρα τις εἶναι λέγεται τοῦ Κλήμεντος ἐπιστολῆ· οὐ μὲν ἔθ' ὁμοίως τῇ προτέρα καὶ ταύτην γνώριμον ἐπιστάμεθα, ὅτι μηδὲ τοὺς ἀρχαίους αὐτῇ κεχρημένους ἴσμεν. ‡ From these words it is plain, if he does not positively reject the second Epistle, that he speaks doubtfully of it, because it had not been used and cited by such ancient writers as Irenæus, Hegesippus §, and Dionysius of Corinth ||, who had mentioned the first Epistle of St. Clement. But the same arguments which apply in the case of the Epistles assigned to St. Clement ought surely to hold equally good with respect to those attributed to St. Ignatius. Of the Seven which Eusebius mentions as bearing the name of the latter of these two Apostolic Bishops none are supported by any authority that he brings forward from ancient writers but two, the one to the Romans, and the other to Polycarp. The testimony of Origen might also have been alledged in support of the Epistle to the Ephesians, and also as an additional confirmation of that to the Romans. But Eusebius has not cited, and apparently he could not cite, the testimony of any ancient author respecting any other of the Ignatian Letters than these three, which are precisely the Epistles, and they only, which constitute the Syriac collection. If he, therefore, be consistent with himself, the other four Ignatian Epistles must be considered by him in the same light, and be placed in the same category as the second Letter attributed to St. Clement. Indeed it seems to have much higher claims to attention than those four Ignatian Epistles. Dionysius of Corinth, before the end of the second century, in a Letter to the Romans, addressed to Soter, their Bishop, writes in the following terms:—Τὴν σήμερον οὖν κυριακὴν ἁγίαν ἡμέραν διηγάζομεν, ἐν ἣ ἀνεγνώκαμεν ὑμῶν τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἣν ἔξομεν αἰεὶ ποτε ἀναγινώσκοντες νοθευεῖσθαι. ὡς καὶ τὴν προτέραν ἡμῖν διὰ Κλήμεντος γραφεῖσαν.* If we are to understand τὴν προτέραν in this place in the same sense as τῇ πρώτῃ, also referring to the very same Epistle in the passage that I have just quoted, which is certainly its most natural and obvious signification, these words of Dionysius evidently imply the existence at his time of another Epistle of Clement addressed to the Corinthians; and therefore furnish, by way of inference, very ancient testimony to the second Epistle attributed to St. Clement. This evidence Eusebius might either have overlooked, or not have thought it prudent to advance, because it was inferential, and not direct.† In the last of the so-called Apostolic Canons two Epistles of Clement are mentioned immediately after the Epistles of St. James and St. Jude; and in the celebrated Codex Alexandrinus, one of the most ancient copies of the Holy Scriptures in existence, both of the Epistles of St. Clement are appended to the inspired writings of the Apostles.

* See Eusebius, Book iv. c. 23.

† Step. Le Moyne, inferring that these words implied a contradiction to Eusebius' own statement respecting the Second Epistle attributed to St. Clement in the passage which I have quoted above, was led to suppose that the text of Eusebius was corrupted in this place, and proposed to read τὸ προτέρον for τὴν προτέραν. See In Varia Sacra Notæ, p. 1067. Dr. Routh agrees with the inference which Le Moyne has drawn, but sees no necessity for any change in the reading if we take τὴν προτέραν, in contradistinction to the Epistle of Soter and the Romans, received by the Corinthians at a subsequent period. For my own part, I must confess that I hold with "Viri doctissimi, qui hunc locum urgent, ut duas Clementi epistolas adscribant," upon the grounds which I have stated. See Reliquiæ Sacræ, edit. alter. Vol. i. p. 188.

It is also worthy of observation, that the passages from the Ignatian Epistles cited by Eusebius present several variations from the text of the Medicean and Colbert manuscripts.*

Passing from Eusebius we come to Origen †, in the third century. As I have already observed, he makes two quotations from Ignatius; one from his Epistle to the Ephesians, and the other from that to the Romans, both as they are found in the Syriac Recension.

I have given, among the testimonies of the second century, a passage from a Commentary attributed to Theophilus of Antioch, in which allusion is made to some words in the Epistle to the Ephesians. I have adduced this testimony, because it is so alleged by Bishop Pearson. It seems, however, to be fully established, that this Commentary is not the production of the Bishop of Antioch who was the fourth in succession after Ignatius ‡, to whom the learned Bishop of Chester would fain have ascribed it. § If, however, it were of any authority on the subject before us, it would serve to afford additional evidence in confirmation of the Syriac Epistles, and of them only.

In this century we have the testimony of Irenæus, who cites the Letter of Ignatius to the Romans; and we have also the evidence of the Epistle attributed to Polycarp, in which mention is made of Ignatius having written to him.

To these I would add, that the Apostolic Constitutions, be their age what it may, evidently seem to have followed in many things the Epistle of Ignatius to Polycarp, and to have expanded and amplified several ideas which are found in it. ||

All the external evidence, therefore, which can be adduced respecting the Epistles of Ignatius, either from citations drawn from them, or reference made to them by any ancient writer for more than two centuries after the death of that holy Martyr, applies directly to the Three Epistles contained in the Syriac Recension, and to those three only.

But it may be asked, ought not this testimony to Three Epistles of the number mentioned by Eusebius to be considered sufficient to establish the authenticity of all the Seven which he enumerates, since these are all found together in the Medicean manuscript, and in all the other copies in existence, with the exception of the Syriac? To this I reply, that if the arguments which I have already advanced with respect to a difference in style and matter between the restored text of the Three Epistles and the rest be valid, they are decisive at once as to this question, because they prove these Three Epistles, to which alone the testimony of the most ancient writers directly applies, to be both by a different hand, and to be more ancient than the others, independently of any external testimony to this fact afforded by those authors who lived most near to Ignatius' own time.

And further, the negative arguments which several learned critics have long ago urged against the Ignatian Epistles, seem to be sufficient to shew that the Seven of the Shorter Greek Recension were not known either to Irenæus or to Origen, while at the same time it is proved that these writers were acquainted with the Syriac Recension by the positive argument which is supplied from the fact of their having quoted it.

In his treatise against heresies, which is chiefly directed against Valentinus*, Irenæus combats at the same time the errors of the Docetæ, of the Ebionites, of Menander, of Saturninus, &c. And in conducting his argument, he not only alleges the authority of the Holy Scriptures; but also frequently cites the testimony of earlier Christian writers †, without, however, indicating their names, an instance of which is afforded us in the very passage which he has cited from the Epistle of St. Ignatius to the Romans. Now, the well-known words of the Epistle to the Magnesians quoted above are most admirably adapted to refute some particular tenets of the heresy held by Valentinus, as Dr. Jacobson has remarked. ‡ Moreover, we have already seen that Bishop

* "Porro autem ut hanc Valentinianam hæresim ex corruptis superiorum hæreticorum fontibus profluxisse planum faciat, explicatâ primum Regulâ veritatis, clare paucisque exponit quæ fuerint Simonis Magi, Menandri, Saturnini, Basilidis, Carpocratis, Cerinthi, Ebionæorum, Nicolaitarum, Cerdonis, Marcionis, Tatiani variorumque Gnosticorum—impia commenta propudiosaque dogmata." Pearson has declared that the Ignatian Epistles contain numerous passages directed expressly against the Docetæ and the Ebionites; and he allows, also, that they combat the same errors as were held by Saturninus and Theodotus, although he maintains that these were not the first promulgators of them; but that they originated in some other heretics still more ancient.* Should we not, then, most reasonably expect that Irenæus, who was accustomed to cite the authority of earlier Christian writers, would not have neglected to apply this most apposite and forcible testimony of St. Ignatius, the noble martyr for Christ, the renowned Bishop of the famous city of Antioch, the disciple of the Beloved Apostle, and the affectionate friend of his own master, St. Polycarp? Irenæus' own position and circumstances would almost preclude the chance of his being ignorant of these Epistles, if they really existed; the fact, therefore, of his never having cited or alluded to any of those Epistles or passages which are peculiar to the Medicean Recension seems manifestly to prove that he was not acquainted with them. On the other hand, the quotation which he has made from the Letter to the Romans according to the Syriac Recension, and the circumstance of that Recension consisting of only three simple Epistles, which furnish no direct arguments against the heresies that he was refuting, appear to render his testimony to the collection embracing only those three Epistles unexceptionable.

At page 335 I have stated what appear to me to be very strong grounds to prove that the Epistle to the Smyrneans was either unknown to Origen, or rejected by him as spurious; and consequently to draw the same inference respecting the rest of the Medicean text. It does not seem to be necessary that I should carry this negative argument against the Shorter Greek Recension further, by alleging various considerations tending to shew that most probably it was unknown to Justin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus, Tertullian, &c.: this has been done with very great learning and acuteness by Daillé†, who has adapted and directed his arguments against both the Shorter and the Longer Recension of the Greek. The discovery of the Syriac Epistles confirms the correctness of the principles upon which he reasoned up to a certain point; but it also shews that he extended his premises too far to embrace conclusions to which they could not apply. The same may be said of his great antagonist, Bishop Pearson, who also pressed the positive arguments which he adduced beyond the limits to which they could justly reach. The one exhibits very cogent reasons to shew that the Ignatian Epistles, according to either of the Recensions of the Greek, could not have been known to those writers of the second and third centuries of the Christian era, of whom any remains are come down to us; and he therefore drew the overstrained conclusion, that they were altogether a forgery and had in them no foundation of truth. The other adduced sufficient testimony to prove that some Epistles of that Holy Martyr were in the hands of a few of those ancient authors; but he also urged his arguments too far, when he maintained that such testimony was sufficient to establish the authenticity of all the Seven subsequently enumerated by Eusebius, and exhibited in the Medicean text.

So far as the arguments of each of these able scholars seem to be strictly valid and legitimate, they exactly apply to the Three Epistles of the Syriac Recension. These do not contain certain passages which, as Daillé most skilfully argued, could not have been known to those early writers who even had cited some words of St. Ignatius; and they do contain those passages which, as Bishop Pearson ably urged in their defence, had been quoted and attributed to him by authors who lived very near to the period when the recollection of his suffering was most recent.

The notice that I have given in the preceding pages of the manuscripts in which the Three Syriac Epistles of St. Ignatius are found will shew that the external testimony supplied by them is entitled, on the ground of antiquity, to far greater attention than that of the manuscripts in which the Shorter Recension of the Greek, and its corresponding Latin version, are contained. There is also another consideration which should not be omitted. The copies of the Shorter Recension contain, in addition to the Seven enumerated by Eusebius, five other Epistles, four attributed to St. Ignatius, and one addressed to him, which almost all the advocates of the Seven Letters are unanimous in condemning as spurious.

Although I entirely dissent from the principles of criticism which have led them to reject those Epistles, while the others were received, I am quite satisfied that they have judged rightly in condemning them as supposititious. There is, however, no evidence whatever to shew that the author or collector of the Ignatian Epistles, whoever he might have been, drew any distinction between them as to authenticity, or esteemed one better or more genuine than another. Indeed, if we are to take the copies of the Longer Recension into account, the additional evidence afforded by the manuscripts in which they are comprised, is certainly stronger in favour of the Epistles which have been rejected, than of those which have been accepted.* If the copies in which the Seven Epistles are found contain others which are spurious, the collector of the Ignatian Letters, who has admitted these spurious Epistles, without any distinction, into his collection, must either have been ignorant or dishonest. If he were incompetent to judge and determine which were genuine and which were supposititious, why might not some of the Seven admitted by him be spurious as well as the rest? and if he were dishonest, why might not his falsifications extend even to some of them also as well as to the other Four? It has been assumed that these Four Letters were not in existence at the time of Eusebius, because he has not spoken of them: but one obvious reason why he should have omitted to mention them is the fact, that they contain no information respecting the Episcopal succession, which, as I have remarked, was one of the chief objects of his history; and surely there is as much tact displayed by the collector and arranger of the Ignatian Epistles in selecting the name of the Antiochians and Hero †, to whom there was an antecedent probability, from his intimate connection with them, that Ignatius would be anxious to write, as in choosing the Trallians, Magnesians, and Philadelphians, whose acquaintance with that holy Martyr is but clumsily accounted for in the Letters addressed to them bearing his name, and indeed, as I have shewn elsewhere, is highly improbable. ‡ Although Eusebius has spoken of Letters sent to these parties, he has supplied no means of forming an estimate of their contents sufficient for us to decide whether all the Epistles which he mentions were identical with the Medicean text.§

No such objection as this can apply to the Syriac collection. It contains but Three Epistles, and those Three are precisely the only Letters concerning which any evidence exists in antiquity for more than two centuries after the death of the author to whom they are assigned.

§ Whiston has instituted a comparison between the passages quoted by Eusebius from the Ignatian Epistles, and the text itself of both the Greek Recensions, for the purpose of shewing that they agree better with the Longer than the Shorter Recension; "whereby it is evident, that if we keep strictly to the Medicean Greek and Eusebius' own text, the citations agree with the Larger copy in ten places, and with the Smaller only in three." See Dissertation on the Epist. of Ignatius, p. 54.

GENUINENESS OF THE THREE EPISTLES EXHIBITED IN THE SYRIAC VERSION.

If the arguments which I have hitherto advanced with respect to the Ignatian Epistles have appeared as forcible to my readers upon the perusal as they have done to myself in the inquiry, there can remain little doubt upon their minds as to the spuriousness of those passages and Epistles which are not acknowledged by the Syriac version. If, therefore, so much of that which has been attributed to St. Ignatius be proved to be false, it will certainly not be an unreasonable desire to carry the investigation still further, and to inquire what grounds there may be to receive the Three Epistles which still remain as the genuine and authentic Letters of the celebrated Bishop and Martyr of Antioch; inasmuch as there have been other objections raised during the Ignatian controversy which apply in the whole or in part especially to these.

We have seen above that the chief objection alleged against the genuineness of the Epistle to St. Polycarp has been grounded upon the fact of its presenting a remarkable difference in style from the rest of the Ignatian Letters, and the consequent inference that it must be spurious if they were authentic and uncorrupted. This, however, becomes, on the contrary, a strong argument in its favour, if the rest, from which it differs, be proved to be spurious or adulterated, while all the other external evidence for this Epistle continues unshaken, and the united testimony of the Three Recensions, and of all the existing manuscript copies, shews that if any thing of the Ignatian Epistles remains in its primitive and simple state, it must be that portion of the Letter to Polycarp in which this difference of style is observable.

Another objection has been urged against this Epistle, from the circumstance of its containing admonitions addressed directly to the Smyrneans, while it bears only the inscription of a private Letter to their Bishop.* This, it has been stated, is altogether improbable; for Ignatius, at the very same time as he wrote privately to Polycarp, sent also another public Epistle to the Church at Smyrna. This objection likewise falls to the ground, when it is proved that the Epistle to the Smyrneans is supposititious. The Letter, although indeed inscribed with the name of Polycarp, was evidently intended not less for the edification of his flock than for himself. That it was not an unusual practice to write an Epistle, common both to the Bishop and the Church under his charge, we learn from the instances supplied to us by Eusebius in the Epistles of Dionysius of Corinth. In one, which he directed to the Gnostians*, he gives advice to their Bishop Pinytus; and another, which he sent to the Romans, was addressed personally to Soter, their Bishop. †

As I read the Letter to Polycarp it suggests to my mind at once the impression that it must have been written at his own request, which he probably made when Ignatius touched at Smyrna. The age ‡ and character of the holy Bishop of Antioch, and the circumstance of his being then on his way to Rome to receive the crown of martyrdom, after the good confession of faith which he had testified before the Emperor Trajan, would necessarily create a great veneration for him in the minds of all the Christians at Smyrna; and consequently dispose them to give the deepest and most serious attention to any word of exhortation and advice which he might offer to them. The close state of restraint under which he was held by the soldiers who had the custody of him, would probably have prevented him from being able to give, personally or by word of mouth, any admonition or instruction to the Church at Smyrna; and Polycarp, who at that time could only have been a young man §, anxious that both himself and his flock should have the benefit of his parting advice, and perhaps, also, desirous that his own teaching might be upheld by the authority of so venerable and holy a servant of Christ, might have urged a request to Ignatius, the result of which was the Letter before us. Another reason for supposing it probable that this

‡ There are no data to enable us to form an accurate calculation of the age of St. Ignatius. Cave considers that at the time of his martyrdom, fixing the date of this at A.D. 107, he was "then probably above fourscore years old." See Life of Ignatius, §. v. If the period of his martyrdom be fixed, as Bishop Pearson wishes, at A.D. 116, he would probably have been more than ninety years old when he touched at Smyrna.

§ He suffered martyrdom A.D. 166; and must, therefore, at the lowest calculation, have survived Ignatius fifty years. His own words in the Acts of Martyrdom state that he had been in Christ eighty-six years. If this is to be referred to the period of his birth, and not to his baptism, as some have supposed, he could not have been more than twenty-seven years old if we take the former date for the death of Ignatius, or than thirty-six if we take the latter. See Clinton's Fasti Romani, p. 157. See, also, the Chev. Bunsen's Ignatius von Antiochien und seine Zeit, p. 23.

Letter was written at the desire of Polycarp seems to suggest itself from the fact of Ignatius alleging no apology for offering his admonition and exhortation in this Epistle as he does in the Letter to the Ephesians.*

Let us now turn to the Epistle itself, and see how it bears out this hypothesis. At the beginning of the Letter, after commending Polycarp, and expressing his joy at having had the satisfaction of meeting him, he at once exhorts him to use still greater diligence in his Christian course, to ask for more wisdom, to be vigilant, to be firm, to be more earnest than he was, with a degree of freedom which the probable difference of their ages seems to render quite consistent. He proceeds also to offer him additional advice with respect to his conduct towards those who were under his charge; he exhorts him to maintain his own position, to resist the propagators of false doctrine; to accommodate himself to different characters and circumstances. He bids him propound to his flock certain instructions as to their separate and relative duties; and then, turning his discourse, and addressing the people directly, he admonishes them to attend to their Bishop, through whom their instructions must come, that God also may look upon them; and after a few further words of Christian advice, which he closes with an exhortation to them to be long-suffering towards one another in meekness, and with his salutation, ὀναίμην ὑμῶν διὰ παντός, he reverts to Polycarp, and finishes his Letter with an allusion to certain instructions which he had given to him upon some previous occasion, doubtless when they met at Smyrna.

Others may view this matter in a different light; but to me all this appears to fall in so easily, and to accord so well with all the circumstances taken together, so far as we have the means of knowing or judging of them, that I cannot look upon it otherwise than as a strong internal confirmation of the genuineness of this Epistle, and of the general tradition respecting the fact of Ignatius' journey towards Rome.

Another objection urged against this Epistle has been drawn from the Latin words which are found in it. † To this Dr. Hammond ‡ has replied, by shewing that such terms are not unfrequent in the writers of the New Testament; and that they would necessarily become current in those countries which were under the Roman Government, as Syria and Palestine were at that period. In the justness of this reply Daillé* acquiesces. But so far as I am able to judge, the very employment of these Latin words, desertor, accepta, deposita †, affords a strong incidental evidence to the truth of Ignatius' journey to Rome, and to the genuineness of this Letter in which they are found. It will be seen that all these are military terms; and what could be more probable or natural, under such circumstances, than that they should have readily occurred to one who had now travelled for several days in the company, and under the strict guard, of the ten Roman soldiers whom he speaks of in his Epistle to the Romans. Our thoughts and expressions are frequently suggested to us by the objects with which we are surrounded, or by the scenes through which we have lately passed; and thus, also, in the former part of the Letter, we find Ignatius speaking of a ship, the pilot, the tempest, and the haven, all of which ideas would easily and naturally present themselves to one who had just made a voyage by sea from Seleucia. In the Epistle to the Ephesians he expressly mentions his bonds, and speaks of the wild beasts which he expected to encounter at Rome. In that to the Romans he refers more than once to the beasts to whose merciless rage he had been condemned, and compares the harsh conduct of the ten soldiers, under whose custody he was in bonds, to the savage attack of the fierce brutes which awaited him: he also alludes to his having travelled by sea and by land. All these things afford indirect testimony to the truth of the circumstances under which it is stated that he made his journey to Rome. They are the internal evidence supplied by these Three Epistles themselves to the narrative which we receive from other and external sources; and their mutual coincidence and correspondence tends reflectively to confirm both the general truth of the narrative and the authenticity of the Epistles themselves.

The removal of those passages from the Epistle to the Ephesians which do not exist in the Syriac, has at the same time removed numerous objections which have been raised against it. The one urged by the Magdeburg Centuriators generally against the Ignatian Epistles, from the want of any apparent occasion which could have led Ignatius to write them, no longer applies to this addressed to the Ephesians.

It is plain that the Christians of that city had sent a message of kindness to the condemned Bishop of Antioch when he arrived at their port, through their own Bishop, Onesimus; and that this, while it called for an acknowledgment of the same on his part, afforded him an opportunity and occasion of writing to them.*

The same Centuriators, Blondel, Scaliger †, and, more recently, Baur ‡, have seen cause to doubt respecting the narrative of the journey of Ignatius to Rome, and consequently to suspect the whole collection of Letters which he is said to have written during that journey, chiefly from the route which he is stated to have taken; because they did not conceive it probable that he should have been sent by such a circuitous way, but rather that he would have been despatched by a shorter and more direct course, as in the case of St. Paul. It is evident, however, that such an objection as this has little or no weight, if it be certain that it was usual to make the journey by both routes, and that the one which Ignatius is stated to have taken was not much less frequented than the other.§ Whatever might have been the reason for his travelling by this way—whether it might have been inconvenient to send him at that time directly by sea, or whether, as Chrysostom || suggests, this route was fixed upon in order that the Martyr's constancy might be the more effectually tested by the length of the journey, and his firmness might be shaken by the protracted expectation of the ordeal which awaited him, it is quite needless and unimportant to speculate upon. All that I think it requisite to observe here is, that if it were ordered that he should travel by the route which he is stated to have taken, he would necessarily have touched at Ephesus ¶ or Smyrna, or at both of these cities, as it is apparent was the case here. This circumstance, while it affords an answer to the general objection of the Centuriators, presents us at the same time with a most satisfactory reason why an occasion should have occurred for him to write an Epistle to the Bishop of one of these two cities, and to the Church of the other. This is certainly not the case with respect to the Epistles addressed to the Magnesians, Trallians, and Philadelphians, whose locality was far removed from the way by which Ignatius must have passed.* And, as I have observed above, the Epistle to Polycarp being intended not less for the Smyrneans than for their Bishop, a separate Letter addressed to them would have been unnecessary; and consequently in the circumstances of restraint under which Ignatius represents himself to have been held, it is highly improbable that he should have written one.

The chief objection which has been urged against the Epistle to the Romans has been grounded upon the great earnestness and warmth with which Ignatius is there represented as desiring and striving after martyrdom. This has been supposed to be inconsistent with the character of one of the immediate disciples of the Apostles, † It will be apparent, however, at once, that this objection has no other force than in the standard of propriety as to the character and conduct of such a man, which the author of this objection might choose to set up in his own mind. To this, however, I trust that I have given a sufficient reply at p. 321, to which I must refer the reader. I may also remark, that this, which has been accounted as a defect by some, has, in the estimation of others, given a vigour and personality ‡ to this Epistle which the rest, according to the Medicean text, did not appear to possess.

The two chapters which have been transferred from the Epistle to the Trallians of the Shorter Greek Recension, and restored to their true position in that to the Romans, in conformity with the Syriac, have also been objected against as being inconsistent with the modesty which we should expect to meet with in a Bishop of the Apostolic times. § I may offer the same reply here as in the alleged case of too great a desire for martyrdom displayed in the same Letter. It will be seen, however, that these two chapters have a very different aspect in their present position from that which they bore in the place which they occupied in the Epistle to the Trallians.

I believe that I have now adverted to the chief objections which have been raised against the Three Epistles as they stand in the Syriac. Several of them, it will have been observed, in the present altered state of these Epistles become a confirmation of their genuineness instead of impugning it; others have no weight but in the imagination of those who have alleged them; and none of them, it is probable, would ever have been raised, had there not been really found to exist in the Seven Letters of the Shorter Greek Recension so many solid and palpable grounds for doubting their genuineness, that those who undertook to disprove the authenticity of the Ignatian Epistles were led on by the heat of controversy to push their attacks to the utmost, and to see objections in expressions and circumstances which otherwise would never have suggested themselves.

Upon the whole, therefore, the Three Epistles, as they are now restored by the aid of the ancient Syriac Version, appear to have as strong and substantial claims to be considered and received as genuine and authentic as any writings whatever of Christian antiquity. The grounds of their credibility are not at all affected by any of the forcible negative arguments which have been urged against the Ignatian Epistles generally; and they remain uninjured by any of the attacks which have been directed against the two Recensions of the Greek. This of itself affords a very strong presumption in their favour. The chain of external evidence likewise dates from the very period at which they were written. They are mentioned by Polycarp himself: they have been also cited by Irenæus, his disciple, in the second century, and quoted by Origen, the most learned, and one of the most inquisitive of Ecclesiastical writers of the third, if not indeed of any age of the Fathers of the Church. They are found in the vernacular tongue of the holy Martyr who wrote them, bearing the impress of having been translated into that language during the earliest ages of Christianity, immediately touching upon the time of the death of Ignatius*;

* This seems to be certainly evinced by the language of the Syriac Epistles. I quote here the testimony of Dr. Lee to this fact, as my own opinion may be questioned as that of one biassed by the subject before us: "Mr. Cureton generally speaks of this translation as being very close and literal. Close and literal it certainly is; but not so much so as to deserve the character of very close and literal. From all I have been able to discover in it, I think it must be of a piece in this respect with the Peshito translation of the New Testament; giving as nearly as necessary both the words and order of these in the original, and this in language as nearly approximating to that of the Peshito as well could be. Still the servile closeness of the Philoxenian version is quite another thing, as indeed the language of that version is ———. Our translation of these Epistles was made at a time when a far better taste prevailed in the Church, and when an honest appeal to the plain and obvious truths of Holy Writ was the order of the day; the later, when heresy and schism had made the letter of the text all-important, and when scarcely and they are contained in three manuscripts of very great antiquity, far exceeding the age of those upon the authority of which any other Patristic writings have been made public, with the single exception of the Epistles of Clement from the famous Codex Alexandrinus.

There is also another consideration which I ought not perhaps to omit in this place, because it affords incidental evidence of no inconsiderable moment to the genuineness of these Epistles; which is, that the discovery of this Syriac version fulfils in a manner various predictions which the acuteness of several critics had announced respecting the genuine Epistles, should they ever be brought to light. Archbishop Usher*, as I have stated above, looked forward to the recovery of the Syriac version as a means in all probability calculated to throw much light upon the very difficult and intricate question of the Ignatian Epistles. Tenzel † expressed his conviction, that unless a fresh and genuine copy should be discovered—intimating at the same time his expectation that it must come from Asia—all hope of restoring the Epistles of Ignatius to their original and genuine state must be abandoned. Griesbach ‡ any thing beyond this was sought after. This latter version was therefore probably made as late as the sixth century; the former, not later perhaps than the close of the second, or beginning of the third, and before any extensive interpolations had found their way into the Greek copies." See Dr. Lee's Letter to the Editor of the British Magazine, Vol. xxxi. p. 280.

† "Optimus dijudicandi modus consistit in diligenti Manuscriptorum Codicum antiquorum bonæque notæ collatione, quorum ope interpolata et corrupta facile agnoscuntur et ab auctoris verbis distingui possunt. At in Ignatianis hoc artificium locum non habet. Per universam quippe Europam, quantum constat, non reperitur codex melior Florentino sive Mediceo. Cujus defectus cum supra monstrati sint, tum nisi ex Asia, aut aliunde novus ac genuinus emergat, de restituendis in integrum Ignatii Epistolis plane desperandum erit." See Exercitationes Selectæ. 4to. Lips. 1692, p. 61.

‡ "Forsitan etiam duplex illa Ignatianarum Epistolarum recensio invenustis hujusmodi studiis suam debet originem. Quid? si utraque, quæ nobis superest, recensio dicatur paraphrasis esse Epistolarum Ignatii genuinarum, plane deperditarum? Non desunt enim in utraque interpolationum ac immutationum vestigia. A diversis Christianorum sectis, quarum altera tamen multo audacior fuit altera, concinnatæ videntur editiones. Opuscula Academica. 8vo. Jenæ, 1824. Vol. i. p. 26. It is a remarkable fact, that a great number of spurious or interpolated works of the early ages of Christianity are found in two Recensions, a Shorter and a Longer, as in the instance of the Ignatian Epistles. Thus we find the two Recensions of the Clementines, the two Recensions of the Acts of St. Andrew, mentioned by Griesbach (loco citato). In the same manner we have the Acts of St. Thomas (see Thilo's Notitia uberior novæ Codicis Apocryphi Fabriciani editionis, p. lxxi.), The Journeying of St. John, The Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, &c. See Birch's Auctarium Codicis Apocryphi. 8vo. Havniæ. p. 1804.

pointed out the probability that both the Greek Recensions might be a paraphrase or expansion of the genuine Letters of Ignatius which once existed in a shorter form, made by different sects of Christians for their own peculiar purposes. Semler* observed that the Epistles of Ignatius were certainly known to Irenæus; but that they could not at that period have contained any of those sentences directed against the Valentinian heresy, and that these must have been added subsequently. Ziegler† expressed his belief that when all the spurious and interpolated parts should be removed from the Ignatian Epistles, the original matter remaining would be but small. And Baumgarten-Crusius‡ propounded an opinion, that it was not improbable that another and different Recension from the two hitherto known might yet come to light.

How, then, are all these anticipations fulfilled by the discovery of the Ancient Syriac Version, of which this present volume gives the result? Another Recension of the Ignatian Epistles, hitherto unknown, is now brought to light—less both in number and in quantity than those previously known—exhibiting the basis or foundation of an original work, which had been amplified and augmented into the two collections of the Greek Recensions—known to Irenæus, but not containing any reference whatever to the heresy of Valentinus—found, indeed, in a monastery of the African desert, but carried from Asia, and deposited there nearly a thousand years ago; and this in a Syriac version, which has indeed thrown a new and full light upon the whole of the difficult subject of the Ignatian Epistles.

To regard all these coincidences as a mere matter of chance is utterly opposed to all the most certain rules and calculations of probabilities. They can, therefore, only have their origin in the propriety and accuracy of the criticism which foretold them, and in the truth and certainty of the facts by which the prediction is fulfilled.

* “Mihî sufficit, jam Irenæum scivisse Epistolas Ignatii——prodierunt sub finem sæculi 2. aut sub initium sæculi 3: nec potuit Irenæus aliquid ipse reperire, quod Valentinianæ opinioni opponeret; quales tamen sententiæ plures in istis epistolis postea insunt.” Paraphrasis in Epist. 2 Petri. Halæ, 1784. Præfat.

† “Eine sobere Kritik könnte zwar noch spätere Interpolationem annehmen, um wenigsten, den Grundstoff für den Ignatius zu retten, aber es scheint in der That wenig damit geholfen zu seyn, denn ich bin mit andern Gelehrten der Meinung, dass kaum noch ein Ganzes übrig bleiben dürfte, so bald man alle verdächtige Stellen heraus wirft.” *Versuch einer pragmatischen Geschichte der kirchlichen Verfassungformen in den ersten sech Jahrhunderten. Dignum est enim omnimodis vos glorificare Jesum Christum, qui et vos glorificavit: ut in una perfectione perfecti sitis, in eodem sensu, et in eadem scientia, ut idipsum dicatis omnes de eo ipso; ut subjecti Episcopo et Presbyterio, secundum omnia sanctificati.

Me autem oportebat a vobis commoneri, fide, monitione, patientia, longanimitate. Quoniam dilectio non permittit me tacere de vobis: propterea præveni rogare vos ut concurratis dispositioni Dei; quia et Jesus Christus omnia secundum dispositionem Dei Patris agit: sicut et ipse in quodam loco dicit; Ego quæ placita sunt ei facio semper. num Presbyterium ita coaptatum sit Episcopo, quomodo chordæ in cithara colligatæ. Ita et ipsi in concordia et consona dilectione, cujus dux et custos est Jesus Christus. Et qui sunt sigillatim, omnes unus chorus fiant: ut consonantes facti in unanimitate, conjunctionem Dei in similitudinem morum recipientes, in unitate unum effecti consensu, Deo Patri et dilectissimo filio ejus Jesu Christo Domino nostro, secundum quod ipse Patrem rogans dicit: Da illis, Pater sancte, ut sicut ego et tu unum sumus, ita et hi in nobis unum sint. Utile est enim vos sine macula in unitate conjunctos Deo, imitatores esse Christi; cujus et membra estis.

V. Si enim ego in parvo tempore talem consuetudinem habui circa Episcopum vestrum, quæ non humana sed spiritualis fuit; quanto magis vos beatifico, qui pendetis ad eum, quomodo Ecclesia ad Dominum Jesum, et ipse Dominus ad Dominum suum et Patrem: ut omnia in unitate sibi consonantia sint? Nemo oberret. Si quis non fuerit intra altare, fraudabitur pane Dei. Si enim unius aut duorum oratio tantam habet virtutem, ut Christus in eis consistat: quanto magis immaculati sacerdotis, et sancti populi supplicatio, consonanter adscendens ad Deum, persuadet præstare eis omnes petitiones in Christo? Qui ergo a talibus separatur, et non convenerit in congregationem sacrificiorum, Ecclesiam primogenitorum descriptorum in cælo; lupus est in grege ovium, mansuetam demonstrans figuram. Festinate ergo, dilectissimi, subditi esse Episcopo, et Presbyteris, et Diaconis. Qui enim istis subditus fuerit, Christo obedit qui eis hoc concessit. Qui vero eis non consenserit, Jesu Christo non consentit. Qui autem Filio non consenserit, non videbit vitam; sed ira Dei manebit super eum. Hujusmodi ergo temerarius est, horribilis et superbus, qui non est subditus potioribus. Superbis enim, inquit, Deus resistit; humilibus autem dat gratiam. Et iterum, Superbi inique gesserunt usque valde. Dicit etiam Dominus sacerdotibus; Qui enim vos audierit, me audit; et qui me audierit, audiet illum qui me misit: et qui vos spernit, me spernit; qui autem me spernit, spernit eum qui me misit.

VI. Quando ergo videtis tacere Episcopum, plus eum timete. Omnem itaque quem mittit paterfamilias pro sua dispensatione, sic nos oportet suscipere, quemadmodum ipsum qui mittit.

Utile igitur est vos in immaculata unitate esse; ut et Deo semper participetis.

V. Si enim ego in parvo tempore talem consuetudinem tenui ad Episcopum vestrum, non humanam existentem sed spiritualem: quanto magis vos beatifico, conjunctos sic ut Ecclesia Jesu Christo, et ut Jesus Christus Patri; ut omnia in unitate consona sint? Nullus erret; si quis non sit intra altare, privatur pane Dei. Si enim unius et alterius oratio tantam vim habet: quanto magis illa quæ Episcopi et omnis Ecclesiæ? Qui igitur non venit in idem, hic jam superbit et seipsum condemnavit. Scriptum est enim: Superbis Deus resistit. Festinemus igitur non resistere Episcopo; ut simus Deo subjecti.

 Dominum oportet contemplari, Domino assistentem. Prospectorem enim *verum, et acutum in operibus suis, regibus oportet assistere, et non assistere hominibus infirmis. Ipse autem Onesimus laudat vestram in Deo bonam dispensationem: quia omnes secundum veritatem vivitis; et quia nulla hæresis inter vos habitat. Sed nec obeditis alicui, nisi soli Jesu Christo vero pastori et doctori: et estis, quemadmodum Paulus vobis scripsit, unum corpus, et unus spiritus; quoniam in una spe fidei conclusi estis. Unus enim Dominus, una fides, unum baptisma, unus Deus et Pater omnium, qui super omnes, et per omnes, et in omnibus. Vos ergo estote tales, qui a tali eruditi estis; hoc est, a Paulo Christifero, et Timotheo fidelissimo.

Quidam autem fallaces consueverunt dolo maligno nomen Christi circumportare; sed aliquanta indigna Deo agentes, et contraria doctrinæ Christi sapientes, ad interitum suum sibimet ipsis consentiunt: quos oportet vos tanquam bestias declinare. Justus, inquit, declinans evadet in æternum: extraneus etenim atque alienus erit ab impiorum perditione. Sunt igitur canes muti, non valentes latrare, rabidi occulte: quos observare oportet, insanabilem languorem habentes. Medicus autem noster est solus verus Deus, ingenitus et invisibilis, Dominus omnium, Unigeniti vero pater et genitor. Habemus autem medicum etiam Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, ante secula Filium unigenitum, et in principio Verbum, postea vero et hominem ex Maria Virgine: Verbum enim, inquit, caro factum est. Incorporalis in corpore, impassibilis in corpore passibili immortalis in corpore mortali, vita in corruptione; ut de morte et corruptione liberet et curet animas nostras, et sanet eas infusas morbo impietatis et iniquis desideriis.

VIII. Nullus ergo vestrum seducatur: quod et de vobis confido: unum etenim omnes estis. Quando enim nihil in vobis fuerit, quod vos potuerit coinquinare, et tormentum superinducere; secundum Deum vivitis: et erit Christi subjectio vestra, et Ecclesiæ Ephesiorum quæ est auxiliatrix et multum laudabilis.

Episcopum igitur manifestum quoniam ut ipsum Dominum oportet respicere. Ipse igitur quidem Onesimus superlaudat vestram divinam ordinationem: quoniam omnes secundum veritatem vivitis, et quoniam in vobis neque una hæresis habitat; sed neque auditis aliquem amplius quam Jesum Christum loquentem in veritate.

VII. Consueverunt enim quidam dolo malo nomen circumferre, sed quædam operantes indigna Deo: quos oportet vos ut bestias declinare. Sunt enim canes rabidi, latenter mordentes: quos oportet vos observare, existentes difficile curabiles. Unus medicus est, carnalis et spiritualis, genitus et ingenitus, in carne factus Deus, in immortalis vita vera, et ex Maria et ex Deo, primo passibilis et tunc impassibilis, Dominus Christus noster.

VIII. Non igitur quis vos seducat; quemadmodum neque seducemini, toti existentes Dei. Quum enim neque una lis complexa est in vobis, potens vos torquere; tunc secundum Deum vivitis. Peripsima vestri et castificer a vestra Ephesiorum Ecclesia, famosa in sæculis.

ad eucharistiam et gloriam Dei. Quando enim assidue hoc ipsum agitur, expelluntur virtutes Satanæ, qui actus suos convertit in sagittas ignitas ad peccatum. Vestra autem concordia, et consonans fides ipsius est interitus; et consentaneis ejus tormentum. Nihil enim melius est, quam pacem habere in Christo: in qua omne telum evacuatur aëriorum et terrestrium spirituum. Non est enim nobis colluctatio adversus carnem et sanguinem; sed adversus principatus et potestates, et adversus mundi rectores tenebrarum harum, adversus spiritualia nequitiae in cœlestibus.

XIV. Ergo nolite vos vulnerare in aliqua contagione Diaboli; sicuti et Paulus dicit; habentes in Christum fidem et dilectionem: quæ est principium vitæ et finis. Principium quidem vitæ est fides, finis vero ejus est dilectio: ambæ vero simul junctæ, in unitate factæ, hominem Dei perficiunt: sed et cætera omnia, quæ in benevolentia sequuntur, consummant. Nemo fidem annuncians debet peccare: neque dilectionem possidens debet fratrem suum odire. Qui enim dixit, Diliges Dominum Deum tuum ex toto corde tuo; ipse iterum ait, Et proximum tuum sicut teipsum. Qui enim annunciant esse se Christi, non ex quibus dicunt tantummodo, sed ex quibus agunt, agnoscuntur. Ex fructu enim arbor cognoscitur.

XV. Melius est igitur tacere et esse; quam dicere et non esse: quia non in verbo est regnum Dei, sed in virtute. Corde enim creditur ad justitiam; ore autem confessio fit ad salutem. Bonum est igitur docere; sed si fecerit ea quæ dixerit. Qui enim docuerit et fecerit; hic magnus vocabitur in regno cœlorum. Dominus autem noster et Deus Jesus Christus, qui est filius Dei vivi, primo videlicet fecit, et sic docuit: sicut testificatur Lucas; cujus laus est in Evangelio per omnes Ecclesias Nihil enim latet crebrius convenire in gratiarum actionem Dei, et in gloriam. Quum enim crebro in idipsum convenitis, destruuntur potentiae Satanæ; et solvitur proditio ipsius in concordia vestrae fidei. Nihil est melius pace; in qua omne bellum evacuatur cœlestium et terrestrium.

XIV. Quorum nullum latet vos: si perfecte in Jesum Christum habeatis fidem et charitatem; quæ sunt principium vitæ et finis. Principium quidem fides; finis autem charitas. Hæc autem duo, in unitate facta, Deus est: alia autem omnia in bonitate sequenda sunt. Nullus fidem repromittens peccat, neque charitatem possidens odit. Manifesta est arbor a fructu ipsius: sic repromittentes Christiani esse, per quæ operantur manifesti erunt. Non enim nunc repromissionis opus, sed in virtute fidei, si quis inveniatur in finem.

XV. Melius est silere et esse; quam loquentem non esse. Bonum docere, si dicens facit. Unus igitur Doctor, qui dixit, et factum est: sed et quæ silens fecit, digna Patre sunt. Qui verbum Jesu possidet, vere potest et silentium ipsius audire, ut perfectus sit: ut per quæ loquitur operetur, et per quæ silet cognoscatur. Nihil latet τὸν Κύριον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ κρυπτὰ ἡμῶν ἐγγὺς αὐτοῦ ἐστὶ. Πάντα οὖν ποιῶμεν, ὡς αὐτοῦ ἐν ἡμῖν κατοικοῦντος, ἵνα ὦμεν αὐτοῦ ναοὶ, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν ἡμῖν Θεός. Χριστὸς ἐν ἡμῖν λαλείτω, ὡς καὶ ἐν Παύλῳ· τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον διδασκέτω ἡμᾶς τὰ Χριστοῦ φθέγγεσθαι, παραπλησίως αὐτῷ.

Ις'. Μὴ πλανᾶσθε ἀδελφοί μου, οἱ οἰκοφθόροι βασιλείαν Θεοῦ οὐ κληρονομήσουσιν· εἰ δὲ οἱ τοὺς ἀνθρωπίνους οἴκους διαφθείροντες, θανάτῳ καταδικάζονται· πὼς μᾶλλον οἱ τὴν Χριστοῦ ἐκκλησίαν νοθεύειν ἐπιχειροῦντες, αἰώνιαν τίσουσι δίκην; ὑπὲρ ἧς σταυρὸν καὶ θάνατον ὑπέμεινεν ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ μονογενὴς υἱός· οὐ τὴν διδασκαλίαν ὁ ἀβεθήσας, λιπανθεὶς καὶ παχυνθεὶς, εἰς γέενναν χωρήσει. Ὅμοίως δὲ καὶ πᾶς ἄνθρωπος, ὁ τὸ διακρίνειν παρὰ Θεοῦ εἰληφώς, κολασθήσεται, ἀπείρω ποιμένι ἐξακολουθήσας, καὶ ψευδῆ δοξᾶν ὡς ἀληθῆ δεξάμενος. Τίς κοινωνία φωτὶ πρὸς σκότος, ἢ Χριστῷ πρὸς Βελίᾳ; ἢ τίς μερὶς πιστοῦ πρὸς ἀπιστον, ἢ ναῶ Θεοῦ μετὰ εἰδώλων; φημι δὲ καὶ γὰρ, τίς κοινωνία ἀληθείας πρὸς ψεῦδος, ἢ δικαιοσύνης πρὸς ἀδικίαν, ἢ δόξης πρὸς ψευδοδοξίαν;

ΙΖ'. Διὰ τοῦτο μῦρον ἔλαβεν ὁ Κύριος ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς, ἵνα ἡ ἐκκλησία πνέῃ τὴν ἀφθαρσίαν. Μῦρον γὰρ, φησὶν, ἐκκενωθὲν ὀνομά σου· διὰ τοῦτο νεάνιδες ἠγάπησάν σε, εἴλκυσάν σε· ὀπίσω εἰς ὄσμην μύρων σου δραμούμεθα. Μὴ ἀλειφέσθω τις δυσωδίαν διδασκαλίας τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου. ἢ ἁγία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησία μὴ αἰχμαλωτισθῆ ὑπὸ τῆς πανουργίας αὐτοῦ, ὡς ἡ πρώτη γυνή. διὰ τί λογικοὶ ὄντες, οὐ γινόμεθα φρόνιμοι; διὰ τί ἔμφυτον τὸ περὶ Θεοῦ παρὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ λαβόντες κριτήριον, εἰς ἄγνοιαν καταπίπτομεν, καὶ ἐξ ἀμελείας ἀγνοοῦντες τὸ χάρισμα ὃ εἰλήφαμεν, ἀνοήτως ἀπολλύμεθα;

Dominum: sed etiam occulta nostra coram ipso sunt. Omnia ergo faciamus tanquam ipso in nobis habitante: ut simus ejus templa, et ipse habitet in nobis. Dominus itaque Christus in nobis loquatur, sicut et in Paulo: Spiritus Sanctus nos doceat quæ sunt Christi respondere, adjuncti illi.

XVI. Nolite errare, fratres mei; et ne sitis masculorum concubitores: quia hujusmodi regnum Dei non possidebunt. Qui enim habitacula humana corrumpunt morti condemnabuntur. Quomodo non magis qui Christi doctrinam corrumpere conantur, sempiternam damnationem percipient; propter crucem et mortem, quam sustinuit dominus Jesus unigenitus Dei filius? cujus doctrinam quicumque depraverit, abjectus et pollutus in gehennam projicietur. Similiter autem et omnis homo, qui spernit quod a Deo accepit, damnabitur. Qui imperitum pastorem secutus fuerit, et falsam gloriam tanquam veram susceperit, particeps Christi esse non poterit. Quæ enim societas luci cum tenebris? aut Christo cum Belial? Aut quæ pars fideli cum infideli? aut templo Dei cum idolis? Dico autem et ego: Quæ communicatio veritati ad mendacium? aut quæ societas justitiæ cum injustitia? aut veræ gloriæ cum falsa gloria?

XVII. Propterea unguentum accepit Dominus in capite; ut Ecclesia fragret in corruptione. Unguentum enim exinanitum est nomen tuum; propterea adolescentulæ dilexerunt te, attraxerunt te naribus: post te in odorem unguentorum tuorum curremus. Ne ungatur quis fœtore doctrinæ hujus sæculi: sancta Dei Ecclesia non captivetur ab astutia illius, sicut prima mulier Eva. Quapropter cum simus rationabiles, non efficiamur stulti. Quare plantationem, quam a Deo per Christum accepimus, non custodimus; sed in judicium per ignorantiam ex negligentia incidimus? ignorantes gratiam quam accepimus, et nescienter perimus?

XVIII. Quia crux Christi infidelibus quidem scandalum est; fidelibus autem salus et vita æterna. Ubi sapiens? ubi scriba? ubi conquisitor? ubi exultatio dictorum? Filius autem Dei

XVII. Propter hoc unguentum in capite suo recepit Dominus; ut spiret Ecclesiæ in corruptionem. Non ungamini fœtore doctrinæ principis seculi hujus: non captivet vos ex præsentis unire.* Propter quod autem non omnes prudentes sumus; accipientes Dei cognitionem, qui est Jesus Christus?  in utero concipiet, et pariet filium: et voordinationem, quæ tradita est Prophetis a Deo.

 manifestata sunt. Stella in cælo fulsit super omnes, quæ ante ipsam erant:
 et lux ejus inæstimabilis, et nova at-Cætera autem sidera simul cum sole et

 in cælo resplenduit super omnia astra,

Omnes in omnibus, in gratia, in ejus nomine congregamini communiter; in una fide Dei Patris, et Christi Jesu, Filii ejus unigeniti, et primogeniti totius creationis, secundum carnem quidem ex genere David: eruditi a Paracleto: obedientes Episcopo et Presbyterio imprævaricabili sensu: frangentes panem, qui est medicamentum immortalitatis, antidotum non moriendi, sed vivendi in Deo per Jesum Christum; catharticum expellens malum, sit in nobis.

XXI. Pro animabus vestris ego efficiar, et quem misistis in honorem Dei ad Smyrnam: unde et scribo vobis, gratias agens Domino, diligens Polycarpum, quomodo et vos. Memores mei estote, sicut et vestri Jesus Christus, qui est benedictus in secula. Orate pro Ecclesia Antiochenis, quæ est in Syria: unde et vincetus ducor ad Romam, qui sum ultimus illorum fidelium; unde dignus effectus sum in honorem Dei has sufferre catenas. Incolumes estote in Deo Patre, et Domino Jesu Christo, communi spe, in Spiritu Sancto. Amen.

XX. Si me dignificet Jesus Christus in oratione vestra, et voluntas sit; in secundo libello, quem scripturus sum vobis, manifestabo vobis quam inceperam dispensationem in novum hominem Jesum Christum, in ipsius fide et in ipsius dilectione, in passione ipsius et resurrectione: maxime, si Dominus revelet mihi. Quoniam qui secundum virum communiter omnes in gratia ex nomine convenitis in una fide, et in Jesu Christo (secundum carnem ex genere David, filio hominis et filio Dei) in obedire vos Episcopo et Presbyterio indiscerpta mente; unum panem frangentes, quod est pharmacum immortalitatis, antidotum ejus quod est non mori sed vivere in Jesu Christo semper.

XXI. Unanimis vobiscum ego, et quos misistis in Dei honorem in Smyrnam: unde et scribo vobis, gratias agens Domino, diligens Polycarpum ut et vos. Mementote mei, ut vestri Jesus Christus. Orate pro Ecclesia quæ in Syria: unde ligatus in Romam abducor, extremus existens eorum qui ibi fidelium; quem admodum dignificatus sum in honorem Dei inveniri. Valet in Deo Patre, et in Jesu Christo communi spe nostra. Amen.

Jerem. i. 7. Hieremias audit a Domino: Noli dicere quia juvenis sum ego. Salomon quoque et Josias [in juventute mirifici et sapientes in operibus suis apparuerunt.]

3 Reg. iii. Salomon quidem, duodecimo anno aetatis suae regnare incipiens, arduam et interpretabilem mulierum pro parvulis quaestionem terribili iudicio dissolvit. Josias vero, octo annorum existens, aras et monumenta subvertere coepit, lucos excidere, et templa dejicere; quae non Deo, sed daemonibus fuerant consecrata. Nam et pseudo-sacerdotes interfecit, ut corruptores et seductores hominum; non divinitati, [sed diabolo] servientes. Propter quod non est contemnenda juvenus, cum Deo adiacuerit: sed illa aetas quae sententiae nocet, etiam si inveterata fuerit dierum malorum. Juvenis fuit et Christoferus Timotheus: sed audite, qualia ei scripsit magister. Nemo, inquit, juventutem tuam contemnat: sed forma esto fidelium, in verbo, in conversatione. Δύο γὰρ λέγω χαρακτήρας ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐρίσκεσθαι· καὶ τὸν μὲν νομίσματος, τὸν δὲ παραχάραγματος. Ὁ θεοσεβῆς ἄνθρωπος, νόμισμά ἐστὶν ὑπὸ Θεοῦ χαραχθέν· ὁ ἀσεβῆς, ψευδώνυμον νόμισμα, κίβδηλον, νόθον, παραχάραγμα, οὐχ ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, ἀλλ' ὑπὸ διαβόλου ἐνεργηθέν. Οὐ δύο φύσεις ἀνθρώπων λέγω, ἀλλὰ τὸν εἶνα ἄνθρωπον, ποτὲ μὲν Θεοῦ, ποτὲ δὲ διαβόλου γίνεσθαι· εἴαν εὐσεβῆ τις, ἄνθρωπος Θεοῦ ἐστίν· εἴαν δὲ ἀσεβῆ τις, ἄνθρωπος τοῦ διαβόλου, οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς φύσεως, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῆς ἐαυτοῦ γνώμης γινόμενος. qui non potest ab aliquo contemni. Hic autem non ab homine, sed a Deo habet promotionem. Dicit enim Deus Samueli [de contemptoribus ejus:] Non te spreverunt, sed me. Nam et Moyses [populo adversus se murmuranti] ait: Non enim adversus nos murmurastis, sed adversus Dominum Deum. Nemo enim inultus remansit, qui se contra potiores extulit.

Denique in lege, Dathan et Abiron Moysi resistentes, vivi ad inferos depositi sunt. Sed et Chore, et qui conspiraverunt cum eo adversus Aaron, ducenti quinquaginta igne consumti sunt. Absalon etiam, parricida existens, [divino judicio] arbori appensus est: sed et cor ejus, quod mala cogitaverat, sagittis infixum est. Nam et Achab et Dadan, nihilominus propter similem causam capite plexus est. Ozias quoque leprosus factus est; qui contra sacerdotes sacerdotium arripere ausus est. Saul [etiam sacrificare præsumens, regali dignitate] dehonorus est; non expectans principem sacerdotum Samuelem. Oportet ergo et nos revereri potiores.

IV. Et dignum est, non solum vocari [nos] Christianos, sed etiam esse. Non enim dicere, sed esse facit beatum. Quidam autem Episcopum quidem vocant; et præter ipsum omnia faciunt. Talibus ergo etiam ipse [Christus] dicit, qui et verus et primus est Episcopus et solus natura Pontifex: Quid me vocatis, Domine, Domine; et non facitis quæ dico? tales enim non bonæ scientiæ, sed derisores et simulatores mihi esse videntur.

V. Quoniam vero negotia finem habent, et adjacet quidem vita ex observatione, mors vero ex inobedientia; et [necesse est ut] unusquisque in locum, quem sibi de prædictis elegerit, in futuro esse præcipiatur: fugiamus itaque mortem, et eligamus vitam. Duos enim characteres dico in hominibus inveniri: unum quidem verum monetæ signaculum, alium vero adulterinum. Pius enim homo et religiosus vera moneta est, quæ a Deo formata vel expressa est. Impius vero et irreligiosus falsa moneta est, noxia, adultera, prava; quæ non a Deo, sed a Diabolo facta est. [Hæc autem asserens,] non duas naturas hominum esse dico: sed unum eundemque hominem; qui aliquando quidem Dei, aliquando autem Diaboli efficitur. Si quis [igitur] pius fuerit, homo Dei est: si quis vero impius extiterit, Diaboli est; non ex natura, sed ex sua sententia factus. Infideles enim imaginem habent Principis nequitiae: fideles autem formam habent auctoris omnium

V. Quia igitur finem res habent, et proponuntur duo simul, mors et vita; et unusquisque in proprium locum iturus est. Quemadmodum enim sunt numismata duo, hoc quidem Dei, hoc autem mundi: et unumquodque ipsorum proprium characterem superpositum habet; infideles, mundi hujus, fideles autem, in charitate characterem Dei Patris, et Christi Jesu filii ejus. Propter quod si non elegerimus pro veritate mori in passione ipsius; vita ejus non est in nobis.

VI. Et quoniam in præscriptis personis multitudinem [vestri] contemplatus sum, in fide et dilectione: moneo ut unanimes in Deo omnia facere festinetis; assidente Episcopo in loco Dei, et Presbyteris in loco consistorii Apostolorum, et Diaconis dulcissimis mihi, quibus creditum est ministerium Christi Jesu; qui ante secula genitus est a Patre, Deus Verbum, unigenitus Filius: et in consummatione seculorum ipse permanet. Regni enim ejus non erit finis; inquit Daniel propheta. Omnes in concordia invicem diligamus: et secundum carnem nemo consideret proximum suum, sed secundum Christum Jesum. Nihil sit in vobis, quod vos possit separare: sed adunamini Episcopo; subjecti per ipsum Deo in Christo.

VII. Sicuti ergo Dominus sine Patre nihil facit: non enim possum, inquit, a me ipso facere quicquam: sic etiam et vos sine Episcopo; sive Presbyter, sive Diaconus, sive Laicus. Non [ergo] aliquid rationabile vobis videatur extra ipsius sententiam: tale etenim iniquum est, et Deo inimicum. Omnes in idipsum ad orationem simul convenite. Una deprecatio sit communis, unus animus, una spes, dilectio immaculata, in fide Christi Jesu; qua nihil [aliud] melius est. Omnes adunati ad templum Dei concurrite, sicut ad unum altare; sicut ad unum Jesum Christum, Pontificem ingeniti Dei Patris.

SHORTER.

Dei Patris per Jesum Christum; per quem nisi voluntarie habeamus mori in ipsius passionem, vivere ipsius non est in nobis.

VI. Quia igitur in præscriptis personis omnem multitudinem speculatus sum; in fide et dilectione, moneo, in concordia Dei studete omnia operari; præsidente Episcopo in loco Dei, et Presbyteris in loco consessionis Apostolorum, et Diaconis mihi dulcissimis habentibus creditam ministrationem Jesu Christi; qui ante secula apud Patrem erat, et in fine apparuit. Omnes igitur eandem consuetudinem Dei accipientes, veneremur adinvicem; et nullus secundum carnem adspiciat proximum, sed in Jesu Christo adinvicem semper diligite. Nihil sit in vobis, quod possit vos partiri; sed uniamini Episcopo et præsentibus, in typum et doctrinam incerruptionis.

VII. Quemadmodum igitur Dominus sine Patre nihil fecit, unicus existens, neque per seipsum neque per Apostolos; sic neque vos sine Episcopo et Presbyteris aliquid operemini. Neque tentetis rationabile aliquid apparere proprie vobis: sed in idipsum una oratio, una deprecatio, unus intellectus, una spes, in charitate, in gaudio incoinquinato; quod est Christus Jesus, quo melius nihil est. Omnes ut in unum templum concurrite Dei, ut in unum altare; in unum Jesum Christum, ab uno Patre exeuntem, et in unum existentem et revertentem.

VIII. Nolite errare in aliena gloria; neque intendatis fabulis, et genealogiis interminatis, et Judaicis inflationibus; Vetera enim transierunt; et ecce facta sunt omnia nova. Si enim nunc usque secundum legem Judaicam et circumcisionem carnis vivamus; negamus nos gratiam accepisse. Sancti enim Prophetæ secundum Jesum Christum vixerunt; ideoque et persecutionem passi sunt, inspirati gratia ad manifestationem incredulis, quia unus est Deus omnipotens, qui manifestavit seipsum per Jesum Christum Filium suum, qui est Verbum ipsius, non prolativum scilicet, sed substantiale, non locutio articulata vocis, sed operatio Deitatis; substantia scilicet genita, in omnibus bene complacens substitutori.

IX. Si ergo ex antiquis Scripturis conversi ad vacuum spem venerunt, expectantes Christum: sicuti ipse Dominus docet, dicens: Si crederetis Moysi, crederetis utique et mihi; de me enim ille scripsit. Nam et Abraham, inquit, pater vester exultavit, ut videret diem meum; et vidit, et gavisus est: Ante Abraham enim, [inquit,] ego sum: Quomodo nos poterimus vivere sine ipso? cui et Prophetæ servi fuerunt, spiritu prævidentes eum, et tanquam magistrum expectabant, et sperabant ut Dominum et Salvatorem, dicens; Ipse veniet, et salvabit nos. Non ergo sabbatizemus Judaice, ut feriis gaudentes. Qui enim non operatur, [inquit,] non manducet. [Et iterum:] In sudore vultus tui manducabis panem tuum; dicunt Eloquia. Sed unusquisque vestrum sabbatizet spiritualiter, meditationi Legis congaudens, non corporis dimissione, fabricationem Dei admirans, [velut Judæus;] non omnia comedens, et tepidum bibens, et mensurate ambulans, et saltationes atque plausum manuum nunc habens. Sed pro sabbatizatione diem festum celebret omnis Christianus Dominicam resurrectionem, regalem, eminentissimam omnium dierum: de qua Propheta expectans dicebat; In finem, pro octava: in qua die, et vita nostra exorta est, et mortis in Christo facta victoria, quem filii perditionis negant, inimici scilicet Salvatoris, quorum deus venter est; qui terrena sapiunt; amatores voluptatum, et non Dei; speciem quidem pietatis habentes, virtutem autem ejus abnegantes: Christum mercantes verbum, Dei in tabernis prædicantes, et [Dominum] Jesum [Christum] vendentes, mulierum corruptores, aliena concupiscentes, et pecuniarum amatores: a quibus eruamini, misericordia Dei faciente, per Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum.

SHORTER.

VIII. Non erretis extraneis opinionibus, neque fabulis veteribus, inutilibus existentibus. Si enim usque nunc secundum Judaismum vivimus; confitemur gratiam non recepisse. Divinissimi enim Prophetæ secundum Christum Jesum vixerunt. Propter hoc et persecutionem passi sunt, inspirati a gratia ipsius, ad certificari impersuados, quoniam unus Deus est, qui manifestavit seipsum per Jesum Christum filium ipsius; qui est ipsius Verbum æternum, non a silentio progrediens; qui secundum omnia beneplacuit mittenti ipsum.

IX. Si igitur in veteribus rebus conversati, in novitatem spei venerunt, non amplius sabbatizantes, sed secundum Dominicam viventes, in qua et vita nostra orta est per ipsum et mortem ipsius, quod quidam negant; per quod mysterium accepimus credere, et propter hoc sustinemus, ut inveniamur discipuli Jesu Christi, solius Doctoris nostri, quomodo nos poterimus vivere sine ipso? cujus et Prophetæ discipuli existentes, spiritu ipsum ut Doctorem expectabant; et propter hoc quod juste expectabant, præsens suscitavit ipsos ex mortuis.

Quod et completum est primo in Antiochia Syriæ: ubi adquisierunt discipuli nomen Christianum, Petro et Paulo fundantibus Ecclesiam. Abjicite ergo malum vetus fermentum, quod corrumpit et putrefacit; et percipite novum gratiæ fermentum. Exultate in Christo; ut non alienus dominetur vestri. Ineptum est [enim] Jesum Christum lingua [tantum] proferre; et Judaismum in animo habere. Non enim Christianitas in Judaismum [credidit; sed Judaismus in Christianitatem.] Omnes denique gentiles æqualiter crediderunt, et omnis lingua Christum confessa, ad Dominum collecta est: et facti sunt lapidei corde filii amici Dei Abrahamæ; et in semine ejus benedicti sunt omnes, qui in vitam æternam deputati sunt in Christo.

XI. Hæc autem, dilectissimi mihi, [taliter scribens,] non agnovi aliquos ex vobis sic habere: sed sicut minimus vestrum, volo vos conservatos esse, ut non incidatis in hamos inanis gloriæ; sed ut ad plenum instructi sitis in Christo: qui ante secula genitus est a Patre, postea autem factus ex Maria virgine, sine colloctione viri; et inhabitans sancte [et sine querela,] omnem infirmitatem omnemque languorem curavit in populo, et signa atque prodigia pro beneficiis hominum fecit, et illis qui longe erant, et eis qui prope in multitudinem, unum et solum verum Deum Patrem suum annuntiavit: et passionem pertulit, et ab interfectoribus suis Judæis sub Pontio Pilato Præsidente, et Herode Rege crucem sustinuit; et mortuus est, atque resurrexit; et in cælos ascendit ad illum qui misit eum, et sedet ad dexteram ejus, venturusque est in consummatione seculi in gloria paterna judicare vivos et mortuos, et reddere unicuique secundum opera sua. Hæc qui in pleno cognoverit et crediderit, beatus est: quomodo et vos amici Dei, et amatores Christi estis, in plenitudine spei nostræ; a qua nulli vestrum averti contingat.

X. Non igitur non sentiamus benignitatem ipsius. Si enim nos persequatur secundum quod operamur; non amplius sumus. Propter hoc, discipuli ejus effecti, discamus secundum Christianismum vivere. Qui enim alio nomine vocatur amplius ab hoc, non est Dei. Deponite igitur malum fermentum inveteratum et exacuens; et transponite in novum fermentum, qui est Jesus Christus. Salvificemini in ipso, ut non corrumpatur aliquis in vobis, qui ab odore redarguemini. Inconveniens est Jesum Christum perfari, et Judaizare. Christianismus enim non in Judaismum credidit, sed Judaismus in Christianismum: ut omnis lingua credens in Deum congregaretur.

XI. Hæc autem, dilecti mei, non quia cognovi aliquos ex vobis sic habentes: sed, ut minor vobis, volo præservari vos, ut non incidatis in hamos vanæ gloriæ: sed certificemini in nativitate et passione et resurrectione facta in tempore ducatus Pontii Pilati; quæ facta sunt vere et firmiter a Jesu Christo spe nostra, a qua averti nulli vestrum fiat.

XII. Adquisivi vos in omnibus: siquidem dignus ero. Si enim vinctus sum, sed ad solutionem [omnium] vestrum non sum [vinctus.] Scio [enim] quia non inflamini: quia Jesum habetis in vobis. Et magis cum laudavero vos, scio quia reveremini: sicut scriptum est, quoniam Justus sui accusator [est in primordio sermonis.] Et, Dic tu, [inquit,] primus peccata tua ut justificeris. Et, Cum feceritis, [inquit,] omnia quæ mandata sunt vobis, dicite, Servi inutiles sumus. Quoniam in hominibus qui se exaltaverit, delinquit ante Deum. Dicit enim Deus: Propitius factus sum peccatori. Propter quod magni illi, Abraham et Job, terram et cinerem semetipsos ante Deum nominaverunt. et David; Quis sum ego, [ait,] coram te Domine? [Nam] et Moyses, supra omnes homines mansuetissimus, dicit ad Deum: Gracilis voce, et tardus lingua sum ego. Humiles ergo estote et vos ipsi, ut exaltemini. Qui enim se humiliaverit, exaltabitur; et qui se exaltaverit, humiliabitur.

XIII. Studete itaque confirmari in dogmatibus Domini et Apostolorum: ut ex omnibus quæ facitis dirigamini in viam rectam, carne et spiritu, fide et dilectione; cum honore digno Episcopo vestro, et corona digno atque spirituali Stephano Presbytero vestro, et secundum Deum Diaconis. Subjecti estote Episcopo, et invicem, quomodo Jesus Patri: ut laus sit in vobis secundum Deum.

XIV. Videns vos repletos omnibus bonis; compendiose rogavi vos in dilectione Jesu Christi. Mementote mei in orationibus vestris, ut Deum merear adipisci; et Ecclesiæ quæ est in Syria, cujus non sum dignus vocari Episcopus. Subjicimini Episcopo et ad invicem, ut Jesus Christus Patri secundum carnem, et Apostoli Christo et Patri et Spiritui; ut unio sit carnalis et spiritualis.

XIV. Sciens quoniam Deo pleni estis, compendiose deprecatus sum vos. Mementote mei in orationibus vestris, ut Deo fruam; et ejus quæ in Syria Ecclesiæ, unde non dignus sum vocari. EJUSDEM EPISTOLA AD TRALLIANOS.

Scripta ex Smyrna.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, dilectæ a Deo Patre et [Domino] Jesu Christo Ecclesiæ sanctæ, quæ est in Trallis, electæ et Deo dignæ, pacificatæ in carne et Spiritu Jesu Christi, spei nostræ, in passione per crucem et mortem atque resurrectionem: quam et saluto in plenitudine Apostolicæ formæ, et opto plurimum [in Deo] gaudere.

I. Immaculatum animum et sine dolo in perseverantia, cognovi vos habere, non in usitationem, sed in possessionem: secundum quod significavit [mihi] Polybius Episcopus vester, qui pervenit, voluntate Dei Patris et Jesu Christi Filii ejus, cooperatione Spiritus, ad Smyrnæ; et sic mihi congratulatus est victo in Christo Jesu, ita ut omnem plenitudinem vestram in ipso conspicerem. Suscipiens ergo [eum] secundum Deum, vestram benevolentiam per ipsum agnovi: inveniens vos imitatores esse Jesu Christi Salvatoris [nostri.]

SHORTER.

AD TRALLESIOS.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, dilectæ Deo Patri Jesu Christi Ecclesiæ sanctæ, existenti in Trallesiis Asiæ, electæ et Deo dignæ, pacem habenti in carne et sanguine [et] passione Jesu Christi, spei nostræ, in ea quæ in ipsum resurrectione: quam et saluto in plenitudine, in Apostolico caractere, et oro plurimum gaudere.

I. Incoquinatam mentem et inseparabilem in sustinentia, cognovi vos habentes, non secundum usum, sed secundum naturam: quemadmodum ostendit mihi Polybius Episcopus vester, qui adventit, voluntate Dei et Jesu Christi, in Smyrnæ; et sic mihi congavissus est victo in Christo Jesu, ut ego omnem multitudinem vestram in ipso specularer. Recipiens igitur eam quæ secundum Deum æquanimitem per ipsum, gloriatus sum inveniens vos, ut cognovi, imitatores Dei.

Β'. [Ὅτ' ἂν γὰρ] τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑποτάσσεσθε ὡς Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ, φαίνεσθέ μοι οὐ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ζῶντες, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς ἀποθανόντα, ἵνα πιστεύσαντες εἰς τὸν θάνατον αὐτοῦ, [τὸ ἀποθανεῖν ἐκφύγητε.] Ἀναγκαῖον οὖν ἐστίν, ὡς περ ποιεῖτε, ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν πράσσειν ὑμᾶς· ἀλλ' ὑποτάσσεσθαι καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ, ὡς τοῖς ἀποστόλοις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τῆς ἐλπίδος ἡμῶν, ἐν ᾧ διάγοντες εὐρεθησόμεθα. Δεῖ δὲ καὶ τοὺς διακόνους, ὄντας μυστήριον Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, κατὰ πάντα τρόπον [πάσιν] ἀρέσκειν· οὐ γὰρ βρωμάτων καὶ ποτῶν εἰσιν διάκονοι, ἀλλ' ἐκκλησίας Θεοῦ ὑπηρεταί· δέον οὖν αὐτοὺς φυλάσσεσθαι τὰ ἐγκλήματα ὡς ἡμεῖς.

Γ'. [Ὁμοίως πάντες] ἐντρέψωσαν τοὺς διακόνους, ὡς Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, ὡς καὶ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, [ὄντα υἱὸν] τοῦ Πατρὸς· τοὺς δὲ πρεσβυτέρους ὡς συνέδριον Θεοῦ, καὶ ὡς σύνδεσμον ἀποστόλων. Χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται· [περὶ ᾧ] πέπεισμαι ὑμᾶς οὕτως ἔχειν. Τὸ γὰρ ἐξεμπλᾶριον τῆς ἀγάπης [ὑμῶν] ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔχω μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ ἐν τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑμῶν, οὗ αὐτὸ τὸ κατάστημα μεγάλη μαθητεία, ἣ δὲ πραότης αὐτοῦ δύναμις· ὃν λογίζομαι καὶ τοὺς ἀθέους ἐντρέπεσθαι, ἀγαπῶντας, [ὡς οὐ] φείδομαι [ἑαυτὸν πότερον, δυνάμενος γράφειν ὑπὲρ τούτου, εἰς τοῦτο ᾤθηθην, ἵνα ᾧν κατάκριτος] ὡς ἀπόστολος ὑμῖν διατάσσομαι.

Β'. Τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑποτάσσεσθε ὡς τῷ Κυρίῳ· αὐτὸς γὰρ ἀγρυπνεῖ ὑπὲρ τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν, ὡς λόγον ἀποδώσων Θεῷ. Διὸ καὶ φαίνεσθέ μοι οὐ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ζῶντες, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς ἀποθανόντα, ἵνα πιστεύοντες εἰς τὸν θάνατον αὐτοῦ, διὰ τοῦ βαπτίσματος κοινωνοὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως αὐτοῦ γένησθε. Ἀναγκαῖον οὖν ἐστίν, ὅσα περ ποιεῖτε, ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν πράττειν ὑμᾶς. Ἄλλ' ὑποτάσσεσθε καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ, ὡς ἀποστόλοις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τῆς ἐλπίδος ἡμῶν, ἐν ᾧ διάγοντες, ἐν αὐτῷ εὐρεθησόμεθα. Δεῖ δὲ καὶ τοὺς διακόνους ὄντας μυστηρίων Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ, κατὰ πάντα τρόπον ἀρέσκειν· οὐ γὰρ βρωτῶν καὶ ποτῶν εἰσι διάκονοι, ἀλλ' ἐκκλησίας Θεοῦ ὑπηρεταί· δέον οὖν αὐτῶν τὰ ἐγκλήματα φυλάττεσθαι, ὡς πῦρ φλέγον. Αὐτοὶ μὲν οὖν ἑστῶσαι τοιοῦτοι.

Γ'. Ἑμεῖς δὲ ἐντρέπεσθε αὐτοὺς ὡς Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, οὗ φύλακές εἰσι τοῦ τόπου· ὡς καὶ ὁ ἐπίσκοπος τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν ὅλων τύπος ὑπάρχει· οἱ δὲ πρεσβύτεροι, ὡς συνέδριον Θεοῦ, καὶ σύνδεσμος ἀποστόλων Χριστοῦ. Χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία ἐκλεκτῆ οὐκ ἔστιν, οὐ συνάθροισμα ἀγίων, οὐ συναγωγὴ ὁσίων· πέπεισμαι δὲ καὶ ὑμᾶς οὕτω διακείσθαι. Τὸ γὰρ ἐξεμπλᾶριον τῆς ἀγάπης ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔχω μετ' ἑμαυτοῦ, ἐν τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑμῶν· οὗ αὐτὸ τὸ κατάστημα μεγάλη μαθητεία, ἣ δὲ πραότης αὐτοῦ δύναμις· ὃν λογίζομαι καὶ τοὺς ἀθέους ἐντρέπεσθαι. Ἀγαπῶν ὑμᾶς, φείδομαι συντονώτερον ἐπιστεῖλαι, ἵνα μὴ δόξω τισὶν εἶναι προσάντης, ἢ ἐπιδείξω. Δέδεμαι μὲν διὰ Χριστὸν, ἀλλ' οὐδέπω Χριστοῦ ἄξιός εἰμι· ἐὰν δὲ τελειωθῶ, τάχα γιγνήσομαι.

LONGER.

II. Episcopo subjecti estote, sicut Domino. Ipse enim vigilat pro animabus vestris; tanquam rationem redditurus Deo. Propter quod videmini mihi non secundum hominem vivere, sed secundum Christum Jesum, qui pro nobis mortuus est; ut credentes in morte ejus, per baptismum communicantes resurrectionis ejus efficiamur. Necessarium est enim, vos nihil præter Episcopum facere, [neque aliquid agere.] Sed et Presbyteris subditi estote, ut Apostolis Jesu Christi, spei nostræ; in quo perseverantes, in ipso inveniamur. Oportet ergo et Diaconis, qui sunt in ministerium Jesu Christi, in omni modo placere. Non enim in cibo et potu sunt ministri, sed ministri Ecclesiæ Dei. Oportet ergo præcepta eorum observare, sicut ignem ardentem. Ipsi vero sint tales.

III. Vos autem reveremini eos, tanquam [Dominum] Jesum Christum: quoniam custodes sunt loci ejus; sicut Episcopus forma est Patris omnium: Presbyteri vero sicut consessus Dei, et conjunctio Apostolorum Christi. Sine ipsis [enim] ecclesia electa non est, neque collectio sanctorum, neque congregatio sancta. Confido enim et vos sic consistere. Exemplum autem charitatis [vestræ] accepi, et habeo penes meipsum in Episcopo vestro: quoniam ipsius institutio magna doctrina est. Nam et mansuetudo ejus virtus est, quam arbitror etiam illos, qui sine Deo sunt, revereri. Quia autem diligo vos, parco frequentius vobis scribere; ne videar aliquibus contrarius aut tædiosus esse. Vincit sum enim pro Christo: sed nondum Christo dignus sum. Si autem consummavero; forsitan ero.

SHORTER.

II. Quum enim Episcopo subjecti estis ut Jesu Christo, videmini mihi non secundum homines viventes, sed secundum Jesum Christum, propter vos mortuum; ut credentes in mortem ipsius, mori effugiatis. Necessarium igitur est, quemadmodum facitis, sine Episcopo nihil operari vos: sed subjici et Presbyterio ut Apostolis Jesu Christi, spei nostræ; in quo conversantes inveniamur. Oportet autem et Diaconos, [ministros] existentes mysteriorum Jesu Christi, secundum omnem modum omnibus placere. Non enim ciborum et potuum sunt ministri; sed Ecclesiæ Dei ministri. Opportunum igitur vos observare accusationes, ut ignem.

III. Similiter [et] omnes revereantur Diaconos, [ut mandatum Jesu Christi;] et Episcopum, ut Jesum Christum, existentem filium Patris; Presbyteros autem, ut concilium Dei et conjunctionem Apostolorum. Sine his Ecclesia non vocatur: de quibus suadeo vos sic habere. Exemplarium enim charitatis vestræ accepi, et habeo cum meipso in Episcopo vestro; cujus ipsa compositio magna est disciplinatio, mansuetudo autem ipsius potentia: quem existimo et impios revereri. Diligentes quod non parco ipsum aliqualem, potens scribere pro illo; in hoc existimet, ut existens condemnatus, velut Apostolus vobis præcipiam.

κακῶ τὸ ἀγαθὸν κεραυνύς. Λέγουσι γὰρ Χριστὸν, οὐχ ἵνα Χριστὸν κηρύξωσιν, ἀλλ' ἵνα Χριστὸν ἀθετήσωσι· καὶ οὐ νόμον συστήσουσιν, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἀνομίαν καταγγείλωσι. Τὸν μὲν γὰρ Χριστὸν ἀλλοτριῶσι τοῦ Πατρὸς· τὸν δὲ νόμον τοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ τὴν ἐκ Παρθένου γέννησιν διαβάλλουσιν· ἐπαισχυνόμενοι τὸν σταυρὸν, τὸ πάθος ἀρνοῦνται, καὶ τὴν ἀνάστασιν οὐ πιστεύουσι· τὸν Θεὸν ἀγνωστον εἰσηγοῦνται· τὸν Χριστὸν ἀγένητον νομίζουσι· τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα, οὐδὲ ὅτι ἐστὶν ὁμολογοῦσι. Τινὲς δὲ αὐτῶν, τὸν μὲν Υἱὸν ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον εἶναι λέγουσι· ταῦτ' οὖν εἶναι Πατέρα, καὶ Υἱὸν, καὶ Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον· καὶ τὴν κτίσιν, ἔργον Θεοῦ οὐ διὰ Χριστοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐτέρου τινὸς ἀλλοτρίας δυνάμεως.

Δ'. Οὐχ ὡς ἀπόστολος διατάσσομαι· ἀλλ' ἐμαυτὸν μετρῶ, ἵνα μὴ ἐν καυχῇσι ἀπόλωμαι. Καλὸν δὲ τὸ ἐν Κυρίῳ καυχᾶσθαι. Καὶ ἐρρωμένος ὦ τὰ κατὰ Θεὸν, πλείον με δεῖ φοβεῖσθαι, καὶ μὴ προσέχειν τοῖς εἰκῇ φυσιοῦσί με· οἱ γὰρ με ἐπαινοῦντες μαστιγοῦσιν· Ἄλλ' οὐκ οἶδα εἰ ἄξιός εἰμι· ὁ γὰρ ζῆλος τοῦ ἐχθροῦ πολλοῖς μὲν οὐ φαίνεται, ἐμὲ δὲ πολεμεῖ. Καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ, οὐ καθ' ὅτι δέδεμαι, καὶ δύναμαι νοεῖν τὰ ἐπουράνια, καὶ τὰς ἀγγελικὰς τάξεις, καὶ τὰς τῶν ἀγγέλων καὶ στρατειῶν ἐξαλλαγὰς, δυνάμεών τε καὶ κυριοτήτων διαφορὰς, θρόνων τε καὶ ἐξουσιῶν παραλλαγὰς, αἰῶνων τε μεγαλοτήτας, τῶν τε Χερουβείμ καὶ Σεραφεὶμ τὰς ὑπεροχὰς, τοῦ τε Πνεύματος τὴν ὑψηλότητα, καὶ τοῦ Κυρίου τὴν βασιλείαν, καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσι τὸ τοῦ παντοκράτορος Θεοῦ ἀπαράθετον. Ταῦτα γινώσκων ἐγὼ, οὐ πάντως ἤδη τετελείωμαι, ἢ μαθητῆς εἰμι οἷος Παῦλος καὶ Πέτρος· πολλὰ γὰρ μοι λείπει, ἵνα Θεοῦ μὴ ἀπολειφθῶ.

Εἰσὶ γὰρ τινες ματαιολόγοι καὶ φρεναπάται, οὐ Χριστιανοὶ ἀλλὰ χριστέμποροι, ἀπάτη περιφέροντες τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ καπηλεύοντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, καὶ τὸν ἰὸν προσπλέκοντες τῆς πλάνης τῇ γλυκεῖα προσηγορίᾳ, ὥσπερ οἰνομέλιτι κώνειον κεραυνύντες, ἵνα ὁ πίνων, τῇ γλυκυτάτῃ κλαπέις ποιότητι τὴν γευστικὴν αἴσθησιν, ἀφυλάκτως τῷ θανάτῳ περιπαρῇ. IV. Non sicut Apostolus præcipio : sed metior meipsum ; ne in gloria-tione [mea] peream. Bonum est enim in Domino gloriari. Et si salvatus fuero apud Deum ; plus me oportet timere, et non attendere ad eos qui magnificent me. Illi vero qui me laudant, [potius] flagellant. [Eligo enim pati :] sed nescio si dignus sum. Zelus enim inimici multis non videtur : me autem impugnat. Debeo ergo esse mansuetus ; ut dissolvatur princeps hujus seculi Diabolus.

V. Nunquid non poteram vobis secretiora scribere ? Sed timeo ne parvulis vobis constitutis lesionem imponam. Et ignorescite mihi : quia non valetis ferre [onera vinculorum,] quemadmodum ego vincus sum. Et possum quidem intelligere cœlestia : Angelorum scilicet atque Archangelorum ordines, Militiarum diversitates, Virtutum et Dominationum differentias, Sedium atque Potestatum distantias, Æternorum magnificentias, Cherubin et Seraphin excellentias, Spiritus sublimitatem, Domini regnum, et super hæc omnia omnitenentis Dei incomparabilitatem. Hæc [igitur] ego cognoscens, non omnino perfectus sum aut discipulus esse possum qualis Paulus, aut Petrus. Multum enim mihi restat, ne a Deo derelinquar.

VI. Rogo autem vos, non ego, sed dilectio Christi Jesu, ut idipsum dicatis omnes, et non sint in vobis schismata ; sitis autem perfecti in eodem sensu, et in eadem scientia. Sunt enim quidam vaniloqui et mentis seductores, non Christiani sed Christum mercantes, seductione circumferentes nomen Christi, et cauponantes verbum Evangelii, et venenum erroris commiscentes dulci blandimento, sicut œnomelli virus admiscentes ; ut qui biberit illius potus gustabilem sensum, dulcedine captus, inobservanter morti addicatur. Monet autem quidam antiquorum ; ut nemo bonus dicatur, qui malum bono admiscuerit. Nominant enim Christum ; non ut Christum prædicent, sed ut Christum spernant ; et [legem præferunt ;] non ut legem statuunt, sed ut legi contraria annuncient. Christum enim alienant a Patre : legem vero Christi, et nativitatem ex Virgine abjiciunt : crucem erubescens, et passionem negantes, et resurrectioni non credentes. Deum incognitum profitentur ; Christum ingenitum putant ; et neque quia est Spiritus [Sanctus,] confitentur. Quidam vero eorum Filium hominem purum esse dicunt : alii autem ipsum dicunt esse Patrem, ipsum Filium, ipsunque Spiritum [Sanctum :] et creaturam non opera Dei esse per Christum [dicunt,] sed alterius cujusdam extraneæ virtutis.

IV. Multa sapio in Deo : sed meipsum mensuro, ut non in gloria-tione perdar. Nunc enim me oportet plus timere, et non attendere inflantibus me. Dicentes enim mihi, flagellant me. Diligo quidem enim pati : sed non novi si dignus sum. Zelus enim multis quidem non apparet, me autem plus oppugnat. Indigeo igitur mansuetudine ; in qua dissolvitur princeps seculi hujus.

V. Nonne possum vobis supercœlestia scribere ? Sed timeo ne parvulis existentibus vobis damnum apponam. Et condonate mihi : ne forte, non potentes capere, strangulemini. Etenim ego, non secundum quodcumque ligatus sum, sed potens scire cœlestia, et loci positiones Angelicas, et constitutiones, principationes, visibiliaque et invisibilia ; præter hoc, jam et discipulus sum. Multa enim vobis deficiunt, ut Deo non deficiamus.

VI. Deprecor igitur vos ; non ego, sed charitas Jesu Christi ; solo Christiano alimento utamini ; ab aliena autem herba recedite, quæ est hæresis, [quæ et inquinatis] implicat Jesum Christum : quemadmodum mortiferum pharmacum dantes cum vino mellito ; quod qui ignorat, delectabiliter accipit, et in delectatione mala mori.

VII. Cavete ergo a talibus; ne sumatis laqueos animabus vestris: et vitam vestram inexplorabilem apponite omnibus hominibus; ne efficiamini muscipula explorationis, et sicut retia extensa. Qui enim sibi non parcat in operibus suis, frater est pollutus semetipsum. Si ergo et vos deponatis naturalem superbiam, inflatilem et tumidam extollentiam; possibile erit vobis inseparabiles esse a Deo. Prope est enim [Dominus] timentibus eum: et, In quem, inquit, respiciam, nisi in humilem, et quietum, et trementem verba mea? Veneramini autem et Episcopum vestrum, sicut Christum, secundum quod vobis beati Apostoli præceperunt. Qui [enim] intra altare est [constitutus,] mundus est: propter quod obedite Episcopo [vestro,] et Presbyteris. Qui vero extra [altare] est [constitutus,] extra Episcopum est et Presbyteros et Diaconos aliquid agens: qui talis fuerit, pollutus est conscientia, et est deterior infideli. Quid est enim Episcopus, nisi omnem principatum et potestatem illorum omnium tenens; quemadmodum deceat hominem tenere, imitorem Dei factum secundum virtutem? Quid est Presbyterium, nisi constitutio sancta, consilarii et confessores Episcopi? Quid etiam Diaconi, nisi imitatores Christi, [ministrantes Episcopo sicut Christus Patri, et] operantes illi operationem mundam et immaculatam? quomodo sanctus Stephanus beatissimo Jacobo, et Timotheus et Linus Paulo, et Anacletus et Clemens Petro. Qui igitur istis inobediens fuerit, hic sine Deo omnino erit, et impius, et contemnens Christum, et ordinationem ipsius minorans.

VIII. Ego vero hæc vobis mando, non quod aliquos inter vos tales agnoverim; nec permittat Deus aliquando aliquid hujusmodi in auribus meis introire, qui Filio suo non pepercit propter sanctam Ecclesiam: sed prævidens seditiones Iniqui, præmonitione conforto vos, sicut filios meos charissimos, et fideles in Domino: præpotans vos medicamine præmuniente contra imminentem pestilentiam; quam [etiam] vos [tanquam] morbum fugite, beneplaciti in Christo Domino nostro. Vos ergo succincti mansuetudine, imitatores estote passionum [Christi,] et dilectionis ejus, qua dilexit nos, dans semetipsum pro nobis redemptionem; ut nos sanguine suo mundaret antiquæ impietatis, et vitam nobis præstaret, incipientibus nobis jam perire pro malitia quæ erat in nobis. Nemo ergo vestrum adversus proximum aliquid habeat: dicente Domino; Dimittite, et dimittetur vobis. Nolite occasionem dare gentibus; ne propter aliquos paucos insipientes verbum [Domini] et doctrina blasphemetur; [ne in vobis compleatur quod] propheta ex persona Dei [ad hujusmodi] dicit; Quoniam per vos nomen meum blasphematur in gentibus.

SHORTER.

VII. Observemini igitur a talibus. Hoc autem erit a vobis non inflatis, et existentibus inseparabilibus a Deo, Jesu Christo, et Episcopo, et ordinibus Apostolorum. Qui intra altare est, mundus est: [qui vero extra altare est, non mundus est:] hoc est; qui sine Episcopo et Presbytero et Diacono operatur aliquid, iste non mundus est in conscientia.

VIII. Non quia cognovi tale quid in vobis; sed præservo vos, existentes meos dilectos; prævidens insidias Diaboli. Vos igitur mansuetam patientiam resumentes, recreate vosmetipsos in fide, quod est caro Domini, et in charitate, quod est sanguis Jesu Christi. Nullus vestrum adversus proximum [aliquid] habeat. Non occasiones detis gentibus; ut non propter paucos insipientes ea quæ in Deo multitudo blasphemetur. Væ enim, per quem in vanitate nomen meum in aliquibus blasphematur.

IX. Obturate ergo aures vestras, quando vobis quis sine Jesu Christo Filio Dei loquitur: qui factus est ex [semine] David, per Mariam; qui vere natus est ex Deo et ex Virgine: quia hoc ipsum est quod et Deus. Suscepit enim

Joh. i. 14. vere corpus: Verbum, [inquit] caro factum est; et

Joh. viii. 46. habitavit sine peccato [in nobis.] Quis enim, inquit, ex vobis arguet me de peccato? Manducavit [enim] vere et bibit; [et] crucifixus est, et mortuus sub Pontio Pilato. Sed [et secundum placitum voluntatis suæ] vere crucifixus est, et [vere] mortuus, videntibus cœlestibus et terrestribus et infernis: cœlestibus quidem, tanquam incorporalibus naturis: terrestribus vero, [ut] Judæis et Romanis, et [cæteris] hominibus, qui tunc eodem tempore præsto erant, quando crucifixus est Dominus: infernis autem, ut multitudine eorum qui cum Domino

Mat. xxvii. 52. resurrexerunt; Multa, inquit, corpora sanctorum dormientium resurrexerunt [de] monumentis patefactis. Descendit enim in infernum solus; ascendit vero cum multitudine: et dirupit macceriam, quæ erat a seculo, et medium parietem ejus dissolvit; et resurrexit tertia die, resuscitante eum Patre; et post dies quibus conversatus est cum Apostolis, assumptus est ad Patrem: et sedit ad dexteram ejus; expectans donec ponantur omnes inimici ejus sub pedibus ipsius. Die ergo Parasceve, tertia hora accepit sententiam a Pilato, permittente Patre; sexta [vero] crucifixus est; nona [autem] emisit spiritum: ante solis [vero] occasum [depositus est de cruce, et] sepultus [in monumento novo.] Sabbato [vero] mansit sub terra in sepulchro, in quo posuit eum Joseph ab Arimathia. Dominica autem die resurrexit a mortuis; secundum quod dictum

Lebr. i. 13. x. 12, 13. est ab eo: Sicut fuit Jonas in ventre ceti tribus diebus et tribus noctibus; sic erit Filius hominis in corde terræ tribus diebus et tribus noctibus. Continet ergo dies Parasceve passionem [ejus], Sabbatum [vero] sepulturam [et requiem,] Dominica [autem] resurrectionem.

X. Quidam autem, tanquam sine Deo, [increduli et] infideles dicunt, eum putative [tantum] fuisse hominem, [et] non verum corpus suscepisse; atque putative passum et mortuum. Ego [vero pro passione et morte Domini mei] vincetus sum; et opto ad bestias pugnare. [Si enim putative et non vere passus est atque mortuus;] ergo ego gratis moriturus sum, mendacia de cruce Domini confingens. [Sed] et Propheta superflue [dixit:] Videbunt in quem compunxerunt: et plangent super seipsos, tanquam super dilectum; [et dolebunt dolore, tanquam super primogenitum.] Ergo infideles illi [et increduli] non minus sunt, quam illi qui eum crucifixerunt. Ego autem sic devovi spem habere in eum, qui pro me vere mortuus est: quia alienum est ab eo mendacium. Vere etenim peperit Maria corpus, Deo in eo habitante; et vere natus est Deus Verbum ex Virgine, corpus similiter nobis passibile [sine peccato] induens. Vere [conceptus est in utero, et] factus est in vulva; formans et faciens sibi corpus ex Virgine, sine [semine scilicet et] colloctione viri: portatusque in utero, sicut et nos tempore [portati sumus]: et vere lactatus est, et nutritus sicut nos, et cibo et potu, sicuti et nos, usus est: et triginta annos agens baptizatus est a Johanne, in veritate et non in phantasmate: et tribus annis prædicavit Evangelium, et fecit signa et prodigia coram falsis Judæis: et a Pilato præside Judex judicatus est, flagellatus est, colaphis cæsus est, consputus est, spineam coronam purpureamque vestem portavit, condemnatus est, crucifixus est vere, [voluntarie complacens,] non phantastice; neque fallaciter mortuus est, sed vere; sepultus est, et resurrexit a mortuis: sicut ipse alicubi orans [Patrem] dicebat: Tu autem, Domine, resuscita me, et reddam illis: et Pater, qui semper eum exaudit, respondens ait: Exsurge Deus, judica terram; quoniam tu hæreditabis in omnibus gentibus. Qui ergo resuscitavit eum Pater, ipse etiam nos per eum resuscitaturus est, non sine vera vita, [hoc est, non sine ipso,] qui ait: Ego sum vita: qui credit in me, licet moriatur, vivet; et omnis qui vivit, et credit in me, non morietur in æternum. Fugite autem illas sine Deo hæreses: Diaboli enim sunt adinventio, serpentis auctoris malorum, qui per mulierem seduxit Adam patrem generis nostri.

XI. Fugite vero et malas soboles ejus: Simonem [dico,] primogenitum generis ipsius, et Menandrum, et Basilidem, et totam collectionem malignitatis ipsius, et illos hominis cultores [Hebionitas;] quos maledictos esse Jeremias propheta asseruit. Fugite quoque et illos immundissimos falsi nominis Nicolaitas, amatores libidinis, malos calumniatores: [non enim talis fuit Apostolorum minister Nicolaus.] Fugite etiam ipsius Nequissimi nepotes, Theodotum [scilicet] et Cleobulum: qui generant fructum mortiferum; de quo si quis degustaverit, statim morietur, non morte temporali, sed æterna. Hi [autem omnes] non sunt plantatio Dei Patris;

SHORTER.

X. Si autem, quemadmodum quidam sine Deo existentes, hoc est, infideles, dicunt, secundum videri passum esse ipsum; ipsi existentes secundum videri: ego quid vincetus sum? quid autem [et] oro cum bestiis pugnare? Gratis igitur morior. Ergo non reprehendor mendacii a Domino.

XI. Fugite ergo malas propagines, generantes fructum mortiferum; quem si gustet quis, statim moritur. Isti enim non sunt plantatio Patris:

Φιλάνθρωπος γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ πάντας ἀνθρώπους θέλει σωθῆναι, καὶ εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν ἀληθείας ἐλθεῖν· διὸ τὸν ἥλιον αὐτοῦ ἀνατέλλει ἐπὶ πονηροὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς, καὶ βρέχει τὸν ἕτερον ἐπὶ δικαίους καὶ ἀδίκους· οὗ τῆς χρηστότητος θέλων καὶ ἡμᾶς εἶναι μιμητὰς ὁ Κύριος, λέγει, Γίνεσθε τέλειοι, καθὼς καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν ὁ οὐράνιος τέλειός ἐστιν.

Δ'. Ἐγὼ πέποιθα εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐν Κυρίῳ, ὅτι οὐδὲν ἄλλο φρονήσετε· διὸ καὶ θαρρῶν γράφω τῇ ἀξιοθέῳ ἀγάπῃ ἡμῶν, παρακαλῶν ἡμᾶς μιᾷ πίστει, καὶ ἐνὶ κηρύγματι, καὶ μιᾷ εὐχαριστίᾳ χρῆσθαι· μία γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ σὰρξ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἐν αὐτοῦ τὸ αἷμα τὸ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐκχυθέν· εἰς καὶ ἄρτος τοῖς πᾶσιν ἐθρίφθη, καὶ ἐν ποτήριον τοῖς ὅλοις διενεμήθη· ἐν θυσιαστήριον πάσῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ εἰς ἐπίσκοπος, ἅμα τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ, καὶ ταῖς διακόνοις, τοῖς συνδούλοις μου· ἐπέπερ καὶ εἰς ἀγέννητος, ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ· καὶ εἰς Μονογενὴς Υἱός, Θεὸς λόγος καὶ ἄνθρωπος· καὶ εἰς ὁ Παράκλητος, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας· ἐν δὲ καὶ τὸ κήρυγμα, καὶ ἡ πίστις μία, καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα ἐν, καὶ μία ἡ ἐκκλησία, ἣν ἰδρύσαντο οἱ ἅγιοι ἀπόστολοι ἀπὸ περάτων ἕως περάτων, ἐν τῷ αἵματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, οἰκείους ἰδρῶσι καὶ πόνοις. Καὶ ἡμᾶς οὖν χρεῖ, ὡς λαὸν περιούσιον, καὶ ἔθνος ἅγιον, ἐν ὁμοιοῖα πάντα ἐν Χριστῷ ἐπιτελεῖν. Λί γυναῖκες, τοῖς ἀνδράσιν ὑποτάγητε ἐν φόβῳ Θεοῦ· αἱ παρθένοι, τῷ Χριστῷ ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ, οὐ βδελυσσόμεναι γάμον, ἀλλὰ τοῦ κρείσσονος ἐφιέμεναι· οὐκ ἐπὶ διαβολῇ συναφείας, ἀλλ' ἐνεκα τῆς τοῦ νόμου μελέτης. Τὰ τέκνα, πειθαρχεῖτε τοῖς γονεῦσιν ἡμῶν, καὶ στέργετε αὐτοὺς, ὡς συνεργοὺς Θεοῦ εἰς τὴν ὑμετέραν γέννησιν. Οἱ δοῦλοι, ὑποτάγητε τοῖς κυρίοις ἐν Θεῷ, ἵνα Χριστοῦ ἀπελείθεροι γένησθε. Οἱ ἄνδρες, ἀγαπάτε τὰς γυναῖκας ἡμῶν, ὡς ὁμοδούλους Θεῷ, ὡς οἰκείον σῶμα, ὡς κοινωνοὺς βίου, καὶ συνεργοὺς τεκνογονίας. Λί παρθένοι, μόνον τὸν Χριστὸν πρὸ ὀφθαλμῶν ἔχετε, καὶ τὸν αὐτοῦ Πατέρα ἐν ταῖς εὐχαῖς, φωτιζόμεναι ὑπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματος. Ὁναίμην ἡμῶν τῆς ἀγιοσύνης, ὡς Ἠλία, ὡς Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναυῆ, ὡς Μελχισεδέκ, ὡς Ἐλισσαίου, ὡς Ἰερεμίου, ὡς τοῦ βαπτιστοῦ Ἰωάννου, ὡς τοῦ ἠγαπημένου μαθητοῦ, ὡς Τιμοθέου, ὡς Εὐδοίου, ὡς Κλήμεντος, τῶν ἐν ἀγνείᾳ ἐξεληθόντων τὸν βίον. Οἱ πατέρες, ἐκτρέφετε τοὺς ἑαυτῶν παῖδας ἐν παιδείᾳ καὶ νοουθεσίᾳ Κυρίου· καὶ διδάσκετε αὐτοὺς τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα καὶ τέχνας, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀργία χαίρειν· Καλῶς δὲ, φησὶν, ἐκτρέφει πατὴρ δίκαιος, ἐπὶ υἱῷ συντηῶ εὐφραιθήσεται ἡ καρδία αὐτοῦ. Οἱ κίριοι, εἰμνηστικῶς τοῖς οἰκέταις προσέχετε, ὡς ὁ ἅγιος Ἰὼβ ἐδίδαξε· μία γὰρ φύσις, καὶ ἐν τὸ γένος τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος· ἐν γὰρ Χριστῷ, οὔτε δούλος, οὔτε ἐλεύθερος. Οἱ ἄρχοντες, πειθαρχεῖambulaverit : ipse non est Christi, nec passionis ejus particeps ; sed est fraudator et corruptor vineæ Christi. Tali ne commisceamini, ne simul cum eo pereatis : nec si pater sit, vel filius, aut frater, aut domesticus. Non enim, inquit, parcat oculus tuus super eum. Qui ergo odio habent Deum, oportet etiam vos eos odire, et super inimicos ejus tabescere. Non quidem [nos] persecui eos aut percutere oportet, secundum Gentes, quæ non noverunt Deum : sed inimicos arbitrari, et separari ab eis, et monere eos, et ad pœnitentiam provocare ; si forte audiant et adquiescant. Amator enim hominum est Deus noster ; et vult omnes homines salvos fieri, et ad agnitionem veritatis venire. Propter quod [et] Solem suum oriri facit super bonos et malos, et pluit super justos et injustos. Cujus utilitatis etiam nos Dominus volens esse imitatores, dicit : Estote perfecti, sicut et Pater vester cœlestis perfectus est.

IV. Ego confido de vobis in Domino, quia nihil aliud sapietis. Propterea fiducialiter scribo Deo dignæ dilectioni vestræ : rogans vos ut instetis uni fidei, uni prædicationi ; una gratiarum actione utentes. Una enim est caro Domini Jesu, et unus ejus sanguis qui pro nobis effusus est, unus etiam panis pro omnibus confractus, et unus calix totius Ecclesiæ : et unus Episcopus, simul cum [omni] Presbyterio, et Diaconis conservis meis. Quia et unus est ingenitus Deus Pater, et unus unigenitus Filius, Deus Verbum et homo, et unus Paracletus, Spiritus veritatis. Una etiam prædicatione, et fides una, et unum Baptisma, et una Ecclesia ; quam fundaverunt sancti Apostoli, a finibus usque ad fines, in sanguine Christi, propriis sudoribus et laboribus. Et vos ergo oportet, sicut populum sacerdotalem, et gentem sanctam, in concordiam omnes in Christo consummari. Mulieres [vero] viris vestris subditæ estote in timore Dei : Virgines Christo in incorruptione, non execrantes nuptias, sed meliora diligentes ; non in eriminatione contagii, sed propter legis meditationem. Filii, subditi estote parentibus vestris : et diligite eos, tanquam cooperarios Dei ad vestram generationem. Servi, subditi estote dominis [vestris] in Deo ; ut Christi liberti efficiamini. Viri, diligite uxores vestras, sicut conservas in Deo, ut proprium corpus ; sicut socias vitæ, et cooperatrices ad filiorum procreationem. Virgines, solum Christum præ oculis habete, et ejus Patrem in animabus vestris, illuminatæ a Spiritu [Sancto.] Memor sum sanctitatis vestræ, sicut Helia, sicut Jesu Nave, sicut Melchisedech, sicut Helisæi, sicut Hieremiæ, sicut Johannis Baptistæ, sicut dilectissimi discipuli, sicut Timothei, sicut Titi, sicut Euodii, sicut Clementis ; [vel] eorum qui in castitate de vita exierunt. Non detraho autem cæteris beatis qui nuptiis copulati fuerunt ; quorum nunc memini. Opto enim Deo dignus ad vestigia eorum in regno ipsius inveniri ; sicut Abraham et Isaac et Jacob, sicut Joseph et Isaias, et cæteri Prophetæ, sicut Petrus et Paulus, et reliqui Apostoli, qui nuptiis fuerunt sociati : [qui] non libidinis causa, sed posteritatis subrogandæ gratia, conjuges habuerunt. Patres nutrite filios vestros in eruditione et disciplina Domini : et docete eos sacras litteras, et artes honestas ; ut non otio gaudeant. Bene enim, inquit, nutrit pater justus ; in filio autem sapientiæ lætabitur cor ejus. Domini, benigne in domesticos [vestros] intendite ; sicut sanctus Job docuit. Una enim est natura, et unum genus hominum. In Christo autem neque servus est, neque liber.

Principes,

circumambulatur, iste passioni non concordat.

IV. Studete igitur una gratiarum actione uti. Una enim caro Domini nostri Jesu Christi, et unus calix in unionem sanguinis ipsius, unum altare, et unus Episcopus, cum Presbyterio et Diaconis conservis meis : ut quod facitis, secundum Deum faciatis.

Principes, subditi estote Cæsari; milites, Principibus: Diaconi, Presbyteris [et] sacerdotibus. Presbyteri [vero] et Diaconi atque omnis clerus, simul cum omni populo et militibus atque principibus, [sed] et Cæsare, [obediunt] Episcopo. Episcopus [vero] Christo; sicut Christus Patri: et ita unitas per omnia servatur. Sint autem viduæ non vagæ, neque gulosæ, neque protervæ, sed pudicæ et sobriæ, sicut Judith et Anna. Hæc autem non sicut Apostolus præcipio: Quis enim sum ego? aut quæ domus patris mei? ut æqualem me illis dicam: sed sicut commilito vester, obedientiæ ordinem continens.

V. Fratres mei, valde pronus sum ad dilectionem vestram, superexsultans de unanimitate vestra. Moneo [enim] vos; non ego; sed Dominus Jesus per me, in quo vinctus sum. [Adhuc] magis timeo, quia nondum perfectus sum: sed oratio vestra faciet me perfectum apud Deum, ut eum in quo vocatus sum, merear adipisci; confugiens ad Evangelium tanquam ad corpus Jesu Christi, et ad Apostolos tanquam ad Presbyterium Ecclesiæ. Et Prophetas quidem diligo, ut Christum prænunciantes; continentes ejus spiritum, sicut et Apostoli. Sicuti enim Pseudo-prophetæ et Pseudo-apostoli unum eundemque malignum, et seductorem, et populum errare facientem Spiritum assumpserunt: sic iterum [veri] Prophetæ et [veri] Apostoli unum eundemque sanctum, bonum, principalem et verum atque doctorem, per Christum acceperunt Spiritum. Unus enim Deus veteris et novi Testamenti: Unus et Mediator Dei et hominum; ad facturam intelligibilem et sensibilem, et providentiam gerens omnium. Unus quoque et Paracletus, qui operabatur in Moyse et Prophetis et Apostolis. Omnes enim sancti in Christo salvati sunt, in ipsum sperantes, atque ipsum expectantes: et per ipsum salutem adepti sunt; qui erant digni dilectione, et digni laude, sanctificati a Christo Jesu, testificantes in Evangelio spei communis.

SHORTER.

V. Fratres mei, valde effusus sum diligens vos, et superexultans corrobore vos: non ego autem, sed Jesus Christus, in quo vinctus timeo magis, ut adhuc existens imperfectus. Sed oratio vestra me perficiet, ut in qua hereditate propitiationem habuero, possim; confugiens Evangelio ut carni Jesu, et Apostolis ut Presbyterio Ecclesiæ. Sed et Prophetas diligamus; propter et ipsos in Evangelium annunciassent, et in Christum sperare, et ipsum expectare: in quo et credentes salvati sunt, in unitate Jesu Christi existentes digne dilecti, et digne admirabiles sancti, a Jesu Christo testificati, et connumerati in Evangelio communis spei.

Πᾶσιν οὖν μετανοοῦσιν ἀφίει ὁ Κύριος, εἰὰν μετανοήσωσιν εἰς ἐνότητα Θεοῦ, καὶ συνέδριον τοῦ ἐπισκόπου. Πιστεύω τῇ χάριτι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὃς λύσει ἀφ' ὑμῶν πάντα δεσμόν· παρακαλῶ δὲ ὑμᾶς μηδὲν κατ' ἐριθείαν πράσσειν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Χριστομαθίαν. Ἐπεὶ ἤκουσά τινῶν λεγόντων, ὅτι εἰὰν μὴ ἐν τοῖς ἀρχαίοις εὖρω, [ἐν] τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ οὐ πιστεύω· καὶ λέγοντός μου αὐτοῖς, ὅτι [γέγραπται, ἀπεκρίθησάν μοι, ὅτι πρόκειται.] Ἐμοὶ [δὲ] ἀρχεῖά ἐστὶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, τὰ ἄθηκτα ἀρχεῖα ὁ σταυρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ ὁ θάνατος, καὶ ἡ ἀνάστασις αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ· ἐν οἷς θέλω ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ ὑμῶν δικαιωθῆναι.

LONGER.

Ζ'. Εἰ γὰρ κατὰ σάρκα με ἠθέλησάν τινες πλανῆσαι, ἀλλὰ τὸ πνεῦμά μου οὐ πλανᾶται· παρὰ γὰρ Θεοῦ αὐτὸ εἶληφα· οἶδε γὰρ πόθεν ἔρχεται καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγει, καὶ τὰ κρυπτὰ ἐλέγχει. Ἐκραύγασα γὰρ μεταξὺ ὧν ἐλάλουν μεγάλη φωνῇ· οὐκ ἐμὸς ὁ λόγος, ἀλλὰ Θεοῦ· Τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ προσέχετε, καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ, καὶ τοῖς διακόνοις. Εἰ δὲ ὑποπτεύετε με, ὡς προμαθόντα τὸν μερισμὸν τινῶν, λέγειν ταῦτα· μάρτυς μοι δι' ὃν δέδεμαι, ὅτι ἀπὸ στόματος ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἔγνω. Τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ἐκήρυξέ μοι, λέγον τάδε· Χωρὶς ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν ποιεῖτε· τὴν σάρκα ὑμῶν ὡς ναὸν Θεοῦ τηρεῖτε· τὴν ἔνωσιν ἀγαπάτε, τοὺς μερισμοὺς φεύγετε· μιμηταὶ γίνεσθε Παύλου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀποστόλων, ὡς καὶ αὐτοὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

Η'. Ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν τὸ ἴδιον ἐποίουν, ὡς ἄνθρωπος εἰς ἔνωσιν κατηγορισμένος· ἐπιλέγων καὶ τοῦτο, ὅτι οὐ διάστασις γνώμης, καὶ ὀργή, καὶ μῖστος, ἐκεῖ Θεὸς οὐ κατοικεῖ. Πᾶσιν οὖν τοῖς μετανοοῦσιν ἀφήσιν ὁ Θεὸς, εἰὰν συνδράμωσιν εἰς ἐνότητα Χριστοῦ, καὶ συνεδρεῖαν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου. Πιστεύω τῇ χάριτι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅτι λύσει ἀφ' ὑμῶν πάντα σύνδεσμον ἀδικίας. Παρακαλῶ οὖν ὑμᾶς· μηδὲν κατ' ἐριθείαν πράσσετε, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Χριστομαθίαν· ἤκουσα γὰρ τινῶν λεγόντων, ὅτι εἰὰν μὴ ἐν τοῖς ἀρχαίοις εὖρω τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, οὐ πιστεύω· τοῖς δὲ τοιούτοις ἐγὼ λέγω, ὅτι ἐμοὶ ἀρχεῖά ἐστὶν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς, οὐ παρακοῦσαι, πρόδηλος ὄλεθρος. Λύθεντικόν μοι ἐστὶν ἀρχεῖον ὁ σταυρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ ὁ θάνατος, καὶ ἡ ἀνάστασις αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ πίστις ἡ περὶ τούτων· ἐν οἷς θέλω ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ ὑμῶν δικαιωθῆναι. Ὁ ἀπιστῶν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ, πᾶσιν ὁμοῦ ἀπιστεῖ· οὐ γὰρ προκρίνεται τὰ ἀρχεῖα τοῦ Πνεύματος. Σκληρὸν τὸ πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν, σκληρὸν τὸ Χριστῷ ἀπιστεῖν, σκληρὸν τὸ ἀθετεῖν τὸ κήρυγμα τῶν ἀποστόλων.

VII. Si enim secundum carnem me voluerunt quidam oberrare: sed spiritus meus non oberrat: a Deo etenim eum accepi: novit enim unde venerit et quo eat, et occulta arguet. Clamavi enim voce magna inter eos quibus loquebar; non meum sermonem, sed Dei [proferens:] Episcopo intendite, et Presbyteris et Diaconis. Hi vero despererunt me, tanquam prohibentem divisionem quorundam [fieri.] Hæc [autem] dicenti testis est mihi propter quem vinctus sum, quia de ore humano hoc non cognovi: sed Spiritus mihi præconisavit, dicens: Præter Episcopum ne feceritis. Carnem vestram sicut templum Dei servate. Unitatem diligite: divisionem fugite. Imitatores estote Pauli et cæterorum Apostolorum; quomodo et ipsi Christi.

VIII. Ego quidem quod meum fuit feci, ut homo in unitate perfectus: adjiciens etiam hoc, quia ubi dissensio mentis et iracundia et odium, illic Deus non habitat. Omnibus igitur pœnitentibus dimittit Deus; si ad unitatem Christi concurrerint, et [ad] consensum Episcopi. Credo gratiæ Jesu Christi, quia solvit a nobis omne vinculum injustitiæ. Rogo autem vos, ut nihil secundum irritationem agatis; sed secundum Christi dimicationem. Audivi enim quosdam dicentes: Si non invenero Evangelium in antiquis, non credam. Talibus autem ego dico: quia mihi antiquitas Jesus Christus est: cui non obedire, manifestus [et irremissibilis] interitus est. Principatus ejus est crux, et mors ipsius, et resurrectio, et fides in [omnibus] his: in quibus volo [vos] in orationibus vestris justificari. Qui non credit Evangelio, omnibus simul non credit: quia non præjudicatur antiquitati spiritus. Durum est enim contra stimulum calcitrare: durum [etiam] Christo non credere; durum [quoque] prædicationem Apostolorum spernere.

SHORTER.

VII. Si enim et secundum carnem me quidam voluerunt seducere; sed spiritus non seducitur, a Deo existens. Novit enim unde venit, et quo vadit, et occulta redarguit. Clamavi in intermedio existens; locutus sum magna voce, [Dei voce:] Episcopo attendite, et Presbyterio, et Diaconis. Quidam autem suspicati sunt me, ut præscientem divisionem quorundam, dicere hæc: testis autem mihi in quo vinctus sum, quia a carne humana non cognovi. Spiritus autem prædicavit, dicens hæc: Sine Episcopo nihil faciatis. Carnem vestram ut templum Dei servate. Unitatem diligite: divisiones fugite. Imitatores estote Jesu Christi; ut et ipse Patris ipsius.

VIII. Ego quidem igitur proprium faciebam, ut homo in unitatem perfectus. Ubi autem divisio est et ira, Deus non habitat. Omnibus igitur pœnitentibus dimittit Deus; si pœniteant in unitatem Dei, et concilium Episcopi. Credo gratiæ Jesu Christi, qui solvet a vobis omne vinculum. Deprecor autem vos, nihil secundum contentionem facere, sed secundum Christi disciplinam. Quia audivi quosdam dicentes; Quoniam si non in veteribus invenio, in Evangelio non credo: et dicente me ipsis, Quoniam scriptum est; responderunt mihi, Quoniam præjacet. Mihi autem principium est Jesus Christus; inapproximabilia principia crux ipsius et mors, et resurrectio ipsius, et fides quæ per ipsum: in quibus volo in oratione vestra justificari.

IX. Boni enim sunt sacerdotes, et sermonis ministri: melior autem est Pontifex, cui credita sunt sancta sanctorum; cui soli commissa sunt secreta Dei. Bona sunt etiam officia virtutis Dei: bonus quoque Spiritus Sanctus; [qui est super omnia sancta sanctissimus,] et verbi [minister. Sed super omnes sanctos sanctissimus est summus Pontifex, et Princeps Pontificum; qui est legatus et minister Patris, et princeps legionum militiæ cælestis:] per quem Pater omnia fecit, atque omnem providentiam gerit. Ipse est via quæ ducit ad Patrem; ipse petra, maceria, clavis, pastor, sacerdotium, Janua [scientiæ et] agnitionis: per quam introiit Abraham, et Isaac, et Jacob, Moyses [quoque,] et omnis chorus Prophetarum, et columnæ mundi Apostoli, et sponsa Domini [Ecclesia;] pro qua sanguinem suum fudit, ut eam redimeret. Omnia [igitur] hæc in unitate unius et unigeniti veri Dei. Quid autem præcipuum habet Evangelium? Præsentiam adventus Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, passionem; [sed et] ipsam resurrectionem. Quæ enim Prophetæ annunciaverunt, dicentes; Donec veniat cui repositum est, et ipse erit expectatio gentium: hæc in Evangelio completa sunt, [dicente Domino;] Pergite et docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Omnia ergo simul bona [sunt]: Lex, Prophetæ, Apostoli, omnis congregatio quæ per ipsos credit. Solum [autem restat,] ut nos invicem diligamus.

X. Quoniam secundum orationem vestram et viscera quæ habetis in Domino Jesu, annunciatum est mihi pacificare Ecclesiam quæ est in Antiochia Syriæ: decet vos, tanquam Ecclesiam Dei, ordinare Episcopum ad mittendum illuc visitationem Dei; concedere eis in idipsum constitutis, glorificare nomen Dei. Beatus est in Christo Jesu, qui dignus effectus fuerit tali ministerio: et vos quidem festinantes, glorificamini in Christo. Volunt autem vobis, quod non est omnibus impossibile; pro nomine Dei, quomodo et semper vicinæ Ecclesiæ [consueverunt;] mittere [nobis] Episcopos, Presbyteros, et Diaconos.

Omnia hæc in unitatem fidei. Præcipuum autem aliquid habet Evangelium, præsentiam [Salvatoris] Domini nostri Jesu Christi, passionem ipsius, et resurrectionem. Dilecti enim Prophetæ annunciaverunt in ipsum: Evangelium autem perfectio est incorruptionis. Omnia simul bona sunt, si in charitate creditis.

X. Quia secundum orationem vestram, et secundum viscera misericordiæ quæ habetis in Christo Jesu, annunciatum est mihi, pacem habere Ecclesiam quæ est in Antiochia Syriæ; decens est vos, ut Ecclesiam Dei, ordinare Diaconum ad intercedendum illic Dei intercessionem; in congruere ipsis in idipsum factis, et glorificare nomen. Beatus in Jesu Christo, qui dignificabitur tali ministratio: et vos glorificabimini. Volentibus autem vobis non est impossibile, pro nomine Dei; ut et quædam propinquæ Ecclesiæ miserunt Episcopos, quædam autem Presbyteros et Diaconos.

I. Glorifico Deum, et Patrem Domini nostri Jesu Christi; qui per seipsum vos tantum illuminavit. Agnovi enim vos perfectos [esse] in fide immobili; tanquam clavis affixos cruci Domini Jesu Christi, carne et spiritu: et confirmatos in charitate in sanguine Christi: et vere ad plenum instructos in Domino nostro Jesu Christo, filio Dei, primogenito totius naturæ; Deo Verbo, unigenito Filio; qui est ex genere David secundum carnem, [et] ex Maria virgine: baptizatus a Johanne, ut adimpletetur in eo omnis justitia. Qui conversatus sancte sine peccato, sub Pontio Pilato, et Herode Tetrarcha, vere clavis confixus est pro nobis in carne. A quo et nos sumus, a divina et beata ejus passione; ut tollat secum sibi conjunctos in secula per resurrectionem, ad sanctos et fideles suos, sive ad Judæos sive ad Gentes, in unum corpus Ecclesiæ suæ.

II. Hæc enim omnia passus est pro nobis. Et vere passus est; non putative, sed vere; sicuti et resurrexit. Sed non sicut quidam infidelium, erubescens plasmationem hominis, et crucem, et ipsam mortem, dicunt; quasi putative et non vere suscepit corpus ex virgine, et putative passus est: immemores illius qui dixit; Verbum caro factum est, [et habitavit in nobis.] Et [iterum;] Solvite templum hoc, et ego in triduo resuscitabo illud. Et [in alio loco;] Cum exaltatus fuero a terra, omnia traham ad meipsum. Ergo Verbum in carne habitavit. Sapientia enim ædificavit sibi domum. Verbum [ergo] templum sui ipsius, ab adversariis resolutum, resuscitavit tertia die. Verbum [utique] exaltata carne sua, velut illo æneo serpente in eremo, omnes attraxit ad se ad salutem æternam.

I. Glorifico Jesum Christum Deum, qui vos sapientes fecit. Intellexi enim vos perfectos in immobili fide; quemadmodum clavifixos in cruce Domini [nostri] Jesu Christi, et carne et spiritu; et firmatos in charitate in sanguine Christi; certificados in Dominum nostrum [Jesum Christum,] vere existentem de genere David secundum carnem, filium Dei secundum voluntatem et potentiam Dei, genitum vere ex Virgine, baptizatum a Johanne, ut impleatur omnis justitia ab ipso; vere sub Pontio Pilato et Herode Tetrarcha clavifixum pro nobis in carne; a cujus fructu nos, a divine beatissima ipsius passione; ut levet signum in secula, per resurrectionem, in sanctos et fideles ipsius, et in Judæis et in Gentibus, in uno corpore Ecclesiæ ipsius.

II. Hæc enim omnia passus est pro nobis, ut salvemur. Et vere passus est, ut et vere resuscitavit seipsum. Non, quemadmodum infideles quidam dicunt, secundum videri ipsum passum esse, ipsi secundum videri existentes: et quemadmodum sapiunt, et accidet ipsis, existentibus incorporeis et dæmoniacis.

Et quando ad eos qui cum Petro erant venit, ait illis; Palpate me, et videte, quia non sum demonium incorporeum. Spiritus enim carnem et ossa non habet, sicut me videtis habere. Et Thomæ dicit:

Injice digitum tuum in fixuram clavorum, et affer manum tuam, et mitte in latus meum; [et noli esse incredulus, sed fidelis.] Et statim crediderunt, quia ipse erat Christus. Pro-pter quod et Thomas ait illi, Deus meus, et Dominus meus. Propterea ergo mortem contempserunt: parum dicentes esse, injurias et plagas, [et alia nonnulla propter ipsum sustinere.] Nam et postquam ostendit se eis, quia vere et non putative resurrexisset: manducavit cum eis et bibit per dies quadraginta; et sic, videntibus eis, assumptus est cum carne ad eum qui miserat illum: in qua et iterum venturus est cum gloria [et] virtute: secundum quod dictum est [ab Angelis ad Apostolos:] Hic Jesus, qui assumptus est a vobis in cælum, sic veniet, quemadmodum vidistis eum ascendentem in cælum. Si ergo sine corpore dicunt eum venturum esse in consummatione seculi: quomodo visuri sunt eum illi, qui compunxerunt in eum; et cognoscentes, plangent inter se? Nam incorporali-um neque species, neque figura, sed neque effigies quidem aliqua animalis formæ haberi [poterit, in qua fixura clavorum vel lanceæ foramen appareat,] propter simplicitatem naturæ.

IV. Hæc autem moneo vos, charissimi, sciens quia vos sic habetis. Præcustodio autem vos a bestiis hominum figuras habentibus: quas non solum devitare, sed etiam fugere vos oportet. Tantum orate pro illis; ut forte pœniteant. Si enim putative in corpore fuit Dominus, et putative crucifixus est: [ergo] et putative ego vinctus sum. Quare autem et meipsum tradidi ad mortem, ad ignem, ad gladium, ad bestias? Sed non putative, sed vere omnia sustineo propter Christum, ad compatiendum ei; ipso me confortante: quia non est mihi tanta virtus.

III. Ego enim et post resurrectionem in carne ipsum vidi, et credo existentem. Et quando ad eos qui circa Petrum venit, ait ipsis: Apprehendite, palpate me, et videte, quoniam non sum demonium incorporeum. Et confestim ipsum tetigerunt, et crediderunt, convicti carne ipsius et spiritu. Propter hoc et mortem contempserunt; inventi autem sunt super mortem. Post resurrectionem autem comedit cum eis et bibit, ut carnalis; quamvis spiritualiter unitus Patri.

IV. Hæc autem monefacio vobis, dilecti, sciens quoniam et vos sic habetis. Præmunio autem vos a bestiis anthropomorphis: quos non solum oportet vos non recipere, sed, si possibile, neque eis obviare; solum autem orare pro ipsis, si quo modo pœniteant, quod difficile. Hujus autem habet potestatem Jesus Christus, verum nostrum vivere. Si autem secundum videri hæc operata sunt a Domino nostro: et ego secundum videri ligor. Quid autem et meipsum traditum dedi morti, ad ignem, ad gladium, ad bestias? Sed prope gladium, prope Deum: inter medium bestiarum, inter medium Dei. Solum in nomine Jesu Christi, ad compati ipsi, omnia sustinebo: ipso me fortificante, qui perfectus homo factus est.

Γ'. Φίλωνα, καὶ Ῥέων Ἀγαθόπου, οἱ ἐπηκολούθησάν μοι εἰς λόγον Θεοῦ, καλῶς ἐποίησατε ὑποδεξάμενοι ὡς διακόνους Χριστοῦ [Θεοῦ]· οἱ καὶ εὐχαριστοῦσιν τῷ Κυρίῳ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν, ὅτι αὐτοὺς ἀνεπαύσατε κατὰ πάντα τρόπον. Οὐδὲν ὑμῖν οὐ μὴ ἀπολείται. Ἀντίψυχον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμά μου, καὶ τὰ δεσμά μου, ἃ οὐχ ὑπερηφανήσατε, οὐδὲ ἐπαισχύνθητε· οὐδὲ ὑμᾶς ἐπαισχυνθήσεται ἡ τελεία πίστις, Ἰησοῦς Χριστός.

Καθὸ με ἀνεπαύσατε, ἀδελφοὶ, καὶ ὑμᾶς Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστός. Ἀπόντα με καὶ παρόντα ἠγαπήσατε· ἀμείψεται ὑμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς, δι' ὃν ταῦτα εἰς τὸν δέσμιον αὐτοῦ ἐνεδείξασθε. Εἰ γὰρ καὶ μὴ εἰμι ἰκανός, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῆς προθυμίας ὑμῶν μέγα· Ὁ τιμῶν γὰρ προφήτην εἰς ὄνομα προφήτου, μισθὸν προφήτου λήψεται· δῆλον ὅτι καὶ ὁ τιμῶν δέσμιον Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, μαρτύρων λήψεται μισθόν.

Γ'. Φίλωνα, καὶ Γαίον, καὶ Ἀγαθόποδα, οἱ ἐπηκολούθησάν μοι εἰς λόγον Θεοῦ, διάκονοι Χριστοῦ ὄντες, καλῶς ἐποίησατε ὑποδεξάμενοι ὡς διακόνους Χριστοῦ· οἱ καὶ σφόδρα εὐχαριστοῦσι τῷ Κυρίῳ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν, ὅτι αὐτοὺς ἀνεπαύσατε κατὰ πάντα τρόπον. Οὐδὲν ὑμῖν παραλοισθήσεται ὡς εἰς αὐτοὺς ἐποίησατε· δόξῃ ὑμῖν ὁ Κύριος εὐρεῖν ἔλκος παρὰ Κυρίου ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ. Ἀντίψυχον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμά μου, καὶ τὰ δεσμά μου, ἃ οὐχ ὑπερηφανήσατε, οὐδὲ ἐπαισχύνθητε· διὸ οὐδὲ ὑμᾶς ἐπαισχυνθήσεται ἡ τελεία ἐλπίς, Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστός.

Θ'. Εὐλογόν ἐστι λοιπὸν ἀνανήψαι ἡμᾶς, ὡς ἔτι καιρὸν ἔχομεν εἰς Θεὸν μετανοεῖν· ἐν γὰρ τῷ ἄδη οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ ἐξομολογούμενος· Ἴδου γὰρ ἄνθρωπος, καὶ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ πρὸ προσώπου αὐτοῦ. Τίμα, φησὶν, υἱὲ τὸν Θεόν, καὶ βασιλέα· ἐγὼ δὲ φημί, Τίμα μὲν τὸν Θεόν, ὡς αἴτιον τῶν ὄλων καὶ Κύριον· ἐπίσκοπον δὲ, ὡς ἀρχιερέα, Θεοῦ εἰκόνα φοροῦντα, κατὰ μὲν τὸ ἄρχειν, Θεοῦ, κατὰ δὲ τὸ ἱερατεύειν, Χριστοῦ· καὶ μετὰ τούτων, τιμᾶν χρῆ καὶ βασιλέα. Οὔτε γὰρ Θεοῦ τις κρείττων, ἢ παραπλήσιος ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς οὖσιν· οὔτε δὲ ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐπισκόπου τὶ μείζον ἱερωμένου Θεῷ ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου παντὸς σωτηρίας· οὔτε βασιλέως τις παραπλήσιος ἐν ἄρχουσιν, εἰρήνην καὶ εὐνομίαν τοῖς ἀρχομένοις πρυτανεύοντος. Ὁ τιμῶν ἐπίσκοπον, ὑπὸ Θεοῦ τιμηθήσεται· ὡς περ οὖν ὁ ἀτιμάζων αὐτὸν, ὑπὸ Θεοῦ κολασθήσεται. Εἰ γὰρ ὁ βασιλευσὶν ἐπεχειρόμενος, κολάσεως ἄξιος δικαίως γενήσεται, ὡς γε παραλύων τὴν κοινὴν εὐνομίαν· πόσῳ δοκεῖτε χείρονος ἀξιωθήσεται τιμωρίας, ὁ ἄνευ ἐπισκόπου τὶ ποιεῖν προαιρούμενος, καὶ τὴν ὁμόνοιαν διασπῶν, καὶ τὴν εὐταξίαν συγχέων; ἱερωσύνη γὰρ ἐστὶ, τὸ πάντων ἀγαθῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἀναβεβηκός· ἥς ὁ καταμανεῖς, οὐκ ἄνθρωπον ἀτιμάζει, ἀλλὰ Θεόν, καὶ Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, τὸν πρωτότοκον, καὶ μόνον τῇ φύσει τοῦ Πατρὸς ἀρχιερέα. Πάντα οὖν ὑμῖν μετ' εὐταξίας ἐπιτελείσθω ἐν Χριστῷ. Οἱ λαϊκοὶ τοῖς διακόνοις ὑποτασσέσθωσαν· οἱ διάκονοι, τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις· οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ· ὁ ἐπίσκοπος, τῷ Χριστῷ, ὡς αὐτὸς τῷ Πατρί.

IX. [Ergo omnia quaecunque agitis et facitis jam mutabilia sunt: ut corrigamus nos] in Deo, cum tempus habemus penitendi. Quod enim incertum est, non habet confessionem. Ecce enim homo, [inquit,] et opera ejus coram eo. [Sicut scriptum est:] Honora, inquit, fili Deum et Regem. Ego autem dico, Honorate quidem Deum, ut auctorem omnium et Dominum; Episcopum autem tanquam principem sacerdotum, imaginem Dei ferentem: principatum quidem secundum Deum; sacerdotium vero secundum Christum. Et post hunc honorare oportet etiam Regem. Nemo enim potior est Deo, neque similis ei: neque Episcopo in Ecclesia honorabilior, sacerdotium Deo gerenti pro mundi salute. Neque regi quis similis est in exercitu, pacem et benevolentiam omnibus principibus cogitanti. Qui enim honoraverit Episcopum, a Deo honorabitur: et qui dehonorerit eum, a Deo damnabitur. Si enim quis contra Regem insurgens damnatione dignus est: quomodo ille evadere ultionem poterit, qui præter Episcopum aliquid egerit? Sacerdotium enim summa est omnium bonorum quæ in hominibus constant: quod si quis dehonorerit, Deum dehonorat, et [Dominum] Jesum Christum primogenitum [totius creaturæ,] et solum natura principem sacerdotum Dei. Omnia bene vobis ordinate, quæ mandata sunt in Christo. Laici Diaconis subditi sint; Diaconi Presbytero: Presbyteri Episcopo; Episcopus Christo, sicut ipse Patri. Secundum quod vos me refecistis, fratres; et vos [Dominus] Jesus Christus. Absentem me et præsentem dilexistis: retribuatur vobis Deus, propter quem tanta in vinculo ejus ostendistis. Et si quidem non sum sufficiens: sed tamen devotio vestra grandis est. Si quis enim honoraverit Prophetam in nomine Prophetæ; mercedem Prophetæ accipiet. Manifeste et qui honorat vinculum Christi Jesu; mercedem martyrum accipiet.

X. Philonem, et Gaium, et Agathopum, qui me sequuntur in verbo Dei, qui sunt ministri Christi; bene fecistis suscipere eos sicut ministros Dei: qui et maximas gratias agunt Domino pro vobis; quia refecistis eos omnibus modis. Nihil vobis reputabitur ad peccatum, de his quæ eis impendistis. Det vobis Dominus invenire misericordiam apud Dominum in illa die. Pro animabus vestris spiritus meus et vincula mea sint: quæ non spreveritis, et non erubuistis. [Hæc est] perfecta spes in Christo Jesu.

SHORTER.

IX. Rationabile est de cætero evigilare, et cum adhuc tempus habemus, in Deum penitere. Bene habet et Deum et Episcopum cognoscere. Honorans Episcopum, a Deo honoratus est: qui occultans ab Episcopo aliquid operatur, Diabolo præstat obsequium. Omnia igitur vobis in gratia superabundent: digni enim estis. Secundum [enim] omnia me quiescere fecistis: et vos Jesus Christus. Absentem me et præsentem dilexistis: retribuatur vobis Deus; propter quem omnia sustinentes, ipsum adipiscemini.

X. Philonem et Reum [et] Agathopum, qui secuti sunt me in verbum Dei, bene fecistis suscipientes ut ministros Dei Christi: qui et gratias agunt Domino pro vobis; quoniam ipsos quiescere fecistis secundum omnem modum. Nihil vobis utique deperibit. Conformis animæ vestræ spiritus meus, et vincula mea, quæ non despexistis, neque erubuistis: neque vos erubescet perfecta fides, Jesus Christus.

XI. Orationes vestrae appropinquarunt ad Antiochenam Ecclesiam: [cui] et pacifici estis. Unde [et] vinctus omnes saluto. Unde [et] non sum dignus esse ultimus eorum: sed secundum Dei voluntatem dignus effectus sum; non ex mea providentia, sed ex gratia Dei. Quam opto perfectam mihi tribui; ut per vestras orationes Deum merear adipisci: ut opus meum perfectum sit in cœlo et in terra. Decet ergo [vos] in honorem Dei curam gerere Deo dignæ Ecclesiæ quæ est in Syria: et congratulari eis quia pacifici sunt, et perceperunt suam magnificentiam, et restituta est eis [in] corpore eorum. [Sed] mihi visum est mittere aliquem vestrum [illuc] cum Epistola: ut glorificent tranquillitatem quæ eis secundum Deum contigit [et quietem.] Ego vero merui portum tutissimum [in] Christo, orationibus vestris. Cum sitis perfecti; perfecta [cogitate,] sapite, [sentite.] Volentibus enim vobis bene agere, etiam Deus paratus est vobis præstare.

XII. Salutatur vos dilectio fratrum vestrorum quæ est in Troja: unde et scribo vobis, per Burgum, quem misistis mecum una cum Ephesiis, fratribus vestris: qui me refecit in omnibus. Et debuerant [quidem] omnes eum imitari: [quia] exemplum est ministerii Dei. Retribuetur ei gratia Domini in omnibus. Saluto Deo dignum Episcopum vestrum Polycarpum, et Deo decentissimum Presbyterium, et Christiferos Diaconos conservos meos: et specialiter et generaliter omnes in nomine Jesu Christi, et in carne ejus, et in sanguine ipsius, et in passione et in resurrectione carnali et spirituali, in unitate Dei, et vestra. Gratia vobis [et] misericordia, pax [et] patientia in omnibus, in Christo.

XI. Oratio vestra pervenit ad Ecclesiam quæ est in Antiochia Syriæ; unde ligatus Deo decentissimis vinculis omnes saluto, non existens dignus inde esse, extremus ipsorum existens: secundum voluntatem autem [Dei] dignus factus sum, non ex conscientia, sed ex gratia Dei; quam oro perfectam mihi dari, ut in oratione vestra Deo potiar. Ut igitur perfectum vestri fiat opus, et in terra et in cœlo; decet, ad honorem Dei, ordinare Ecclesiam vestram Deo venerabilem, in factum usque Syriam congaudere ipsis, quoniam pacem habent, et acceperunt propriam magnitudinem, et restitutum est ipsis proprium corpusculum. Visum est mihi igitur Deo digna res, mittere aliquem vestrorum cum epistola: ut conglorificent eam, quæ secundum Deum, ipsis factam tranquillitatem; et quoniam portum jam potita est, oratione vestra. Perfecti existentes, perfecta et sapite. Volentibus enim vobis bene facere, Deus paratus est ad tribuere.

XII. Salutatur vos charitas fratrum, qui in Troade: unde et scribo vobis, per Burrum, quem misistis mecum simul Ephesiis, fratribus vestris: qui secundum omnia me quiescere fecit. Et utinam omnes ipsum imitentur, existentem exemplarium Dei ministerii. Remuneret ipsum gratia secundum omnia. Saluto Deo dignum Episcopum, et Deo decens Presbyterium, et conservos meos Diaconos; et singillatim et communiter omnes, in nomine Jesu Christi, et carne ipsius, et sanguine, et passione, et resurrectione, carnali et spirituali, in unitate Dei et vestri. Gratia vobis, [et] misericordia, [et] pax, [et] sustinentia semper.

PROSELYTÆ CHASSAOBOLORUM

EPISCOPUM ANTIOCHIÆ EPISTOLA.

Ignatio Theophoro, beatissimo, Episcopo Ecclesiæ Apostolicæ
ejus quæ secundum Antiochiam; in Deo Patre et Jesu dilecto, gaudere et valere.

I. Semper tibi oramus, secundum illud quod in ipso, gaudium et sanitatem. Quia miraculis et apud nos Christus cognitus est Filius esse Dei viventis, et in posteroribus temporibus inhumanatum esse per Virginem Mariam ex se-mine David et Abraham; secundum eas quæ de ipso ab ipso prædictæ sunt voces a Prophetarum choro: hujus gratia deprecamur, dignificantes mitti nobis a tuo intellectu Marim amicum nostrum, Episcopum Emelapes Neapoleos ejus quæ ad * Zarbo, et Eulogium, * 1. Zarbo et Sobelum Presbyterum; ut non simus desolati præpositis divini verbi: quemadmodum et Moyses dicit: Provideat Dominus Deus hominem, qui ducat populum hunc; et non erit Synagoga Domini, ut oves quibus non est pastor.

Β'. Ὑπὲρ δὲ τοὺς νέους εἶναι τοὺς προγεγραμμένους, δείξαις μηδὲν, ὃ μακάριε. Γινώσκεις γὰρ σε θέλω ὡς ὑπερφρονουῖσιν σαρκὸς, καὶ τῶν ταύτης παθῶν ἀλογουῖσιν, αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, προσφάτω νεότητι ἱερωσύνης ἀστράπτουτες, πολιάν. Ἀνάσκαλον δὲ τῶν λογισμῶν σου διὰ τοῦ δοθέντος σοι παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ διὰ Χριστοῦ Πνεύματος αὐτοῦ, καὶ γνώση ὡς Σαμουὴλ μικρὸν παιδάριον ὃ βλέπων ἐκλήθη, καὶ τῷ χορῷ τῶν προφητῶν ἐγκατελεχθεῖς, τὸν πρεσβύτερον Ἰηλεὶ παρανομίας ἐξελέγει, ὅτι παραπλήγας υἱεὶς Θεοῦ τοῦ πάντων αἰτίου προτετιμήκει, καὶ πέζοντας εἰς τὴν ἱερωσύνην, καὶ εἰς τὸν λαὸν ἀσελγαίνοντας εἶασεν ἀτιμωρήτους.

Γ'. Δανιὴλ δὲ ὁ σοφὸς, νέος ὢν, ἔκρινεν ὠμογέροντάς τινας· δείξας ἐξώλεις αὐτοὺς καὶ οὐ πρεσβυτέρους εἶναι, καὶ τῷ γένει Ἰουδαίους ὄντας, τῷ τρόπῳ Χανααίους ὑπάρχειν. Καὶ Ἰερεμίας, διὰ τὸ νέον παραιτούμενος τὴν ἐγχειριζομένην αὐτῷ πρὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ προφητείαν, ἀκούει· Μὴ λέγε, νεώτερος εἰμί· διότι πρὸς πάντας οὓς ἐὰν ἐξαποστελῶ σε, πορεύσῃ, καὶ κατὰ πάντα ὅσα ἂν ἐντείλωμαί σοι, λαλήσεις· ὅτι μετὰ σοῦ ἐγὼ εἰμι. Σολομῶν δὲ ὁ σοφὸς, δυοκαίδεκα τυγχάνων ἐτῶν, συνήκε τὸ μέγα τῆς ἀγνωσίας τῶν γυναικῶν ἐπὶ τοῖς σφετέροις τέκνοις ζήτημα· ὡσπερ πάντα τὸν λαὸν ἐκστήναι ἐπὶ τῇ τοσαύτῃ τοῦ παιδὸς σοφίᾳ, καὶ φοβηθῆναι οὐχ ὡς μειράκιον, ἀλλ' ὡς τέλειον ἄνδρα. Τὰ δὲ αἰνίγματα τῆς Αἰθιοπῶν βασιλίδος, φορὰν ἔχοντα ὡσπερ τὰ τοῦ Νείλου ρεύματα, οὕτως ἐπελύσατο, ὡς ἐξω ἑαυτῆς γενέσθαι τὴν οὕτως σοφίην.

II. Pro eo autem, quod juvenes sunt prescripti; formides nihil, ὃ Beate. Cognoscere enim te volo, quod sapiunt super carnem, et ipsius passiones non sentiunt ipsi in seipsis; recenti juventute sacerdotii refulgentes canitie. Perscrutare autem *cogitationem tuam per datum tibi a Deo per Christum Spiritum ipsius: et cognosces quod Samuel, parvus puerulus, Videns vocatus est: et choro Prophetarum connumeratus, presbyterum Eli transgressionis redarguit; quoniam insanientes filios Deo omnium causæ præhonoravit, et ludentes in sacerdotium, et in populum luxuriantes dimisit impunitos.

III. Daniel autem sapiens, juvenis existens, judicavit crudeles senes quosdam: ostendens adulteros ipsos, et non seniores esse, et genere Judæos existentes, modo Chananæos existere. Et Jeremias, propter juventutem renuens tributam ipsi a Deo prophetiam, audit: Non dicas, quoniam junior sum: quia ad omnes quoscunque mittam te, ibis; et secundum omnia, quæcunque mando tibi, loqueris; quia tecum ego sum. Salomon autem sapiens, duodecim existens annorum, intellexit magnam ignorantiam mulierum de suis filiis quæstionem; ut omnis populus obstupesceret de tanta pueri sapientia; et timeret, non ut puerum, sed ut perfectum virum. Ænigmata autem Æthiopum Reginae, lationem habentia quemadmodum Nili fluentia, sic solvit, ut extra seipsam fieret ipsa sic sapiens.

μικρὸς ἦμην ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς μου, καὶ νεώτερος ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ πατρός μου.

Ε'. Καὶ ἐπιλείψει με ὁ χρόνος, εἰ πάντας ἀνιχνεύειν βουλοίμην τοὺς νεότητι εὐαριστήσαντας Θεῷ, προφητεῖαν τε καὶ ἱερωσύνην καὶ βασιλείαν ὑπὸ Θεοῦ ἐγχειρισθέν-παρεκτείνω ἑαυτὴν τοῖς τηλικού-τοις ὑμῖν. Ἀσπάζομαί σου τὸν

οἱ παρ' ἡμῖν πιστοὶ προσαγορεύουσί
σε. Ὑγιαίνειν με κατὰ Θεὸν προσ-εύχου, μακάριε ποιμῆν.

IV. Josias autem Dei amator, 2 Chr inarticulate fere adhuc loquens, xxxi redarguit malo spiritu detentos, quod falsiloqui et populi seduc-tores existerent: dæmonumque revelat deceptionem, et eos non existentes deos demonstrat, et sacratos ipsis, puer existens, interficit, delubraque ipsorum ever-tit, et altaria mortuis reliquiis inquinat, templaque delet, et saltus succidit, et columnas conterit, et impiorum sepulchra suffodit; ut neque signum amplius malorum existat. Sic quidem zelotes erat religionis, et impiorum punitor, adhuc balbutiens lingua. David 1 Sam
autem, Propheta simul et Rex, Salvatoris secundum carnem ra-dix, puer ungitur a Samuele in regem. Ait enim alicubi ipse:
Quum parvus eram inter fratres Ps. c meos, et junior in domo patris mei.

V. Et deficiet mihi tempus, si omnes investigare voluero, qui in juventute bene placuerunt Deo, prophetia et sacerdotio et regno
a Deo donati. Rememorationis autem gratia sufficiunt et hæc dicta. Sed te deprecor, ne tibi quædam superba esse videar et ostentatrix. Non enim docens te, sed submemorans meum in Deo patrem, hos apposui ser-mones. Cognosco enim mei ipsius mensuras, et non coextendo meipsam tantis vobis. Saluto tuum sanctum Clerum, sub tua cura pastum. Omnes apud nos fideles salutant te. Sanam me esse secundum Deum ora, beate Pastor.

ἐφέλκονται αὐτοὺς ἀρύσασθαι τοῦ πότου· ἢ τε σὴ σύνεσις παρεγγυᾶ, μετασχεῖν ἡμᾶς παρακελευομένη τῶν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ σου βλυζόντων θείων πομάτων.

B'. Ἐγὼ δὲ, ὦ μακαρία, οὐκ ἔμαντοῦ νῦν τοσοῦτον, ὅσον ἄλλων γενόμενος, ταῖς πολλῶν τῶν ἐναντίων γνώμαις ἐλαύνομαι, τὰ μὲν φυγαῖς, τὰ δὲ φρουραῖς, τὰ δὲ δεσμοῖς· ἀλλ' οὐδενὸς τούτων ἐπιστρέφομαι· ἐν δὲ τοῖς ἀδικήμασιν αὐτῶν μάλλον μαθητεύομαι, ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω. Ὀναίμην τῶν δεινῶν τῶν ἐμοὶ ἡτοιμασμένων· ἐπειδὴ οὐκ ἄξια τὰ παθήματα τοῦ νῦν καιροῦ πρὸς τὴν μέλλουσαν δόξαν ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι εἰς ἡμᾶς.

Γ'. Ταῦτα δὲ ὑπὸ σοῦ διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς κελευσθέντα, ἀσμένως ἐπλήρωσα· ἐν οὐδενὶ ἀμφιβάλλων, ὡς αὐτὴ καλῶς ἔχειν δεδοκίμακας. Ἐγνων γὰρ σε κρίσει Θεοῦ τὴν μαρτυρίαν τοῖν ἀνδροῖν πεποιῆσθαι, ἀλλ' οὐ χάριτι σαρκικῇ· πάντων δὲ με ἦσαν καὶ αἱ συνεχεῖς σου τῶν γραφικῶν χωρίων μνήμαι· ὡς ἀναγνοῦς, οὐδὲ μέχρ' ἐννοίας ἐνεδοίασα περὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα· οὐ γὰρ εἶχόντισιν ὀφθαλμοῖς ἐκδραμεῖν, ὡς εἶχον ἀναντίρρητον ὑπὸ σοῦ τὴν ἀπόδειξιν.

attrahunt ipsos haurire potum. Tuus autem intellectus movet nos, capere jubens de his quæ in anima tua scaturiunt divinis aquis.

II. Ego autem, ô beata, non mei ipsius nunc tantum, quantum aliorum effectus, multorum contrariorum voluntatibus: secundum hæc quidem fugis, secundum hæc autem carceribus, secundum hæc vero vinculis. Sed a nullo horum avertor. In in justificationibus autem ipsorum magis disco, ut Jesu Christo potiar. Utinam fruar duris mihi præparatis: quia non dignæ passionibus hujus temporis ad futuram gloriam revelari in nos.

III. Quæ autem a te per Epistolam jussa sunt, gratanter implevi: in nullo dubitans eorum, quæ ipsa bene habere probasti. Cognovi enim te judicio Dei testimonium viris fecisse; sed non gratia carnali. Multum enim mihi erant et continuæ tuæ scriptibilibus locorum memoriæ: quas legens, neque usque ad intellectum dubitavi circa rem. Non enim habebam aliquibus oculis excurrere, quos habebam incontradicibilem a te factam demonstrationem.

attrahunt potum haurire. Ita et tuæ prudentiæ pollicitatio constringit nos, jubens de illis sanctis liquoribus, qui in anima tua redundant, haustum sumere.

II. Ego autem, ô beata, non meis tantum nunc, quantum aliorum plurimorum contrariis sententiis exagitor: quæ quidem sunt, fugæ, et carceres, ac vincula. Sed nihil horum declino. In injustitiis autem eorum magis edoceor, ut Jesum merear adipisci. Lucror enim periculis mihi præparatis: quia non sunt condignæ Rom. v. passionibus hujus temporis ad futuram gloriam quæ revelabitur in nobis.

III. Quæ autem per Epistolam a te intimata sunt, prompte adimplevi: de nullo eorum dubitans, quos tu bene habere probasti. Agnovi enim te judicio Dei testimonium memoratis viris perhibuisse, et non gratia carnali. Non valde autem assidua fuerunt spatia, in quibus tua scripta perlegerem; neque adhuc negotium mente perceperam: nec enim habui quomodo oculis percurrerem illam ineffabilem tuæ sententiæ relationem.

Ἀντίψυχόν σου γενοίμην ἐγὼ, ὅτι φιλεῖς Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος· διὸ καὶ αὐτὸς ἐρεῖ σοι Ἐγὼ τοῖς ἐμὲ φιλοῦντας ἀγαπῶ· οἱ δὲ ἐμὲ ζητοῦντες, εὐρήσουσιν εἰρήνην.

Δ'. Ἐπέρχεται δέ μοι λέγειν, ὅτι ἀληθινὸς ὁ λόγος, ὃν ἤκουον περὶ σοῦ, ἔτι οὔσης σοῦ ἐν τῇ Ῥώμῃ παρὰ τῷ μακαρίῳ πάπῃ Δήνῳ· ὃν διεδέξατο τὰ νῦν ὁ ἀξιωμακάριστος Κλήμης, ὁ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου ἀκουστής. Καὶ νῦν προσέθηκας ἐπ' αὐτῷ ἑκατονταπλασίως, καὶ πρόσθει γέ ἐτι, ὧ αὐτῇ. Σφόδρα ἐπεθύμουν ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὥστε συναναπαύσασθαι ὑμῖν. Ἄλλ' οὐκ ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ ἡ ὁδὸς αὐτοῦ. Ἐπέχει γάρ μου τὴν πρόθεσιν, οὐ συγχωροῦσα εἰς πέρας ἐλθεῖν, ἢ στρατιωτικὴ φρουρά· ἀλλ' οὔτε ἐν οἷς εἰμι, δρᾶν τι ἢ παθεῖν οἷος τε ἐγώ. Διὸ δεύτερον τῆς ἐν φίλοις παραμυθίας τὸ γράμμα λογιζόμενος, κατασπάζομαι τὴν ἱεράν σου ψυχὴν, παρακαλῶν προσθῆναι τῷ πόνῳ. Ὁ γὰρ παρῶν πόνος ὀλίγος, ὁ δὲ προσδοκίμενος μισθὸς πολὺς.

Pro anima tua ego efficiar: quoniam diligis Dominum Jesum filium Dei vivi. Propter quod et ipse tibi dixit: Ego eos, qui me diligunt, diligo; et qui quaerunt me, invenient pacem.

IV. Obvenit itaque mihi dicere, quia verus est sermo quem audiavi de te, causante Romae apud beatum Papam Anacletum; cui successit beatitudine dignus Clemens, Petri et Pauli auditor: et nunc adjecisti super eum centupliciter et adhuc adjicies tu ipsa. Valde enim desiderabam venire ad vos, et conrequiescere vobiscum: sed non mihi fuit opportunum. Præpediebat enim propositum meum, non sinens illo pergere, militaris custodia: quia nullus talia perfecit vel passus est, qualia ego. Quapropter secunda consolatio est inter amicos, conscriptis se invicem relevare. Saluto sacratissimam animam tuam; rogans superadjicere ad propositum tuum. Præsens enim labor parvus est; merces vero quæ speratur multa est.

Conformis animæ tecum fiam ego: quoniam diligis Jesum Filium Dei viventis. Propter quod et ipse dicet tibi: Ego diligentes me diligo; me autem quærentes, invenient pacem.

IV. Supervenit autem mihi dicere, quoniam verus sermo, quem audiavi de te, adhuc existente te in Roma apud beatum Papam Cle- tum; cui successit ad præsens digne beatus Clemens, Petri et Pauli auditor. Et nunc apposuisti ad ipsum centupliciter; et apponas adhuc, ô dilecta. Desideravi vehementer venire ad vos, ut con- quiescerem vobiscum: sed non in homine via ipsius. Detinuit enim meum propositum, non concedens ad terminum ire, militaris custodia. Sed neque in quibus sum, operari aliquid vel pati potens ego. Propter quod, secundum ejus quæ in amicis consolationis literam reputans, saluto sacram tuam animam, deprecans *opponi * I. apponi. robori. Præsens enim labor paucus; expectata vero merces multa.

Ε'. Φεύγετε τοὺς ἀρνούμενους τὸ πάθος Χριστοῦ, καὶ τὴν κατὰ σάρκα γέννησιν· πολλοὶ δὲ εἰσιν ἄρτι οἱ ταύτην νοσοῦντες τὴν ἀρρώστιαν. Τὰ δὲ ἄλλα σοὶ παραινεῖν εὐήθες, κατηρτισμένη μὲν παντὶ ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ ἀγαθῷ, δυναμένη δὲ καὶ ἄλλους νοθετεῖν ἐν Χριστῷ. [Ἄσπασαι πάντας τοὺς ὁμοίους σου, ἀντεχομένους τῆς ἐαυτῶν σωτηρίας ἐν Χριστῷ.] Ἀσπάζονται σε οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, καὶ [οἱ] διάκονοι, καὶ πρὸ πάντων ὁ ἱερός Ἴηρων. Ἀσπάζεται σε Κασσιανὸς ὁ ξένος μου, καὶ ἡ ἀδελφή μου ἡ γαμετὴ αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὰ φίλτατα αὐτῶν [τέκνα.] Ἐρρωμένην [σε] σαρκικὴν καὶ πνευματικὴν ὑγίαν ὁ Κύριος ἀγιάσει ἀεὶ, καὶ ἴδοιμί σε ἐν Χριστῷ τυχοῦσαν τοῦ στεφάνου.

V. Fuge eos qui negant passionem Christi, et nativitatem ejus secundum carnem. Multi vero sunt modo, qui hanc sanitatem infirmare conantur. Sed tu contra hujusmodi consuesce etiam alios monere: quia in omni opere et verbo bono perfecta es; potens etiam alios erudire in Domino. Salutant te Presbyteri et Diaconi: præ omnibus vero sanctus Hyron. Salutant te Cassianus hospes meus, et soror mea conjux ejus, et dulcissimi filii eorum. Incolumem te carnali et spirituali salute Dominus sanctificet semper: et videam te in Domino consecutam coronam.

V. Fugite abnegantes passionem Christi, et secundum carnem nativitatem. Multi autem sunt nunc, secundum hanc ægrotantes ægrotudinem. Alia autem tibi admonere facile; perfectæ quidem omni opere et sermone bono; potenti autem et aliis suadere in Christo. Saluta omnes similes tibi, retinentes sui ipsorum salutem in Christo. Salutant te Presbyteri, et Diaconi; et ante omnes sacer Eron. Salutat te Cassianus peregrinus meus, et soror mea et sponsa ipsius, et dilectissima ipsorum. Valentem, carnalem et spirituales sanitatem, Dominus sanctificet semper: et videam te in Christo potientem corona.

TARSENSIS.

Scripta ex Philippis.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, salutem consecutæ in Christo Ecclesiæ, laude dignæ et memoria dignæ, et dilectione dignæ, quæ est in Tharso, misericordia et pax a Deo Patre et Domino Jesu Christo.

EJUSDEM EPISTOLA AD TARSENSES.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, salvatæ in Christo Ecclesiæ, dignæ laude, et dignæ memoria, et dignæ dilectione, existenti in Tarso; misericordia, pax, a Deo Patre, et Domino Jesu Christo, multiplicetur semper.

Α'. Ἀπὸ Συρίας μέχρι Ῥώμης θηριομαχῶν οὐχ ὑπὸ ἀλόγων θηρίων βιβρωσκόμενος· ταῦτα γὰρ, ὡς ἴστε, Θεοῦ θελήσαντος, ἐφείσαντο τοῦ Δανιήλ· ἀλλ' ὑπὸ ἀνθρωπομόρφων, οἷς ὁ ἀνήμερος θῆρ ἐμφωλεύων ρύττει με ὀσημέραι καὶ τιτρώσκει· ἀλλ' οὐδενὸς λόγον ποιοῦμαι τῶν δεινῶν, οὐδὲ ἔχω τὴν ψυχὴν τιμίαν ἑμαυτῶ, ὡς ἀγαπῶν αὐτὴν μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν Κύριον. Διὸ ἔτοιμός εἰμι πρὸς πῦρ, πρὸς θηρία, πρὸς ξίφος, πρὸς σταυρόν· μόνον, ἵνα Χριστὸν ἴδω τὸν σωτήρά μου καὶ Θεόν, τὸν ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ ἀποθανόντα. Παρακαλῶ οὖν ὑμᾶς ἐγὼ ὁ δέσμιος Χριστοῦ, ὁ διὰ γῆς καὶ θαλάττης ἐλαυνόμενος· Στήκετε ἐν τῇ πίστει, ἐδραῖοι [γίνεσθε,] ὅτι ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται· γίνεσθε ἀκλινεῖς, ὅτι Κύριος κατοικίξει μονοτρόπους ἐν οἴκῳ.

Β'. Ἐγνω, ὅτι τινὲς τῶν τοῦ Σατανᾶ ὑπηρετῶν ἐβουλήθησαν ὑμᾶς ταραῖσαι· οἱ μὲν, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς δοκῆσει ἐγεννήθη, καὶ δοκῆσει ἐσταυρώθη, καὶ δοκῆσει ἀπέθανεν· οἱ δὲ, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν υἱὸς τοῦ δημιουργοῦ· οἱ δὲ, ὅτι αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων Θεός·

I. Satiatus sum in omnibus, a Syria usque ad Romam cum bestiis depugnans; non ab irrationalibus scilicet bestiis comestus: illæ enim, voluntate Dei, pepercerunt Danieli: sed humanam figuram habentibus, quæ sunt immanes bestię. Obsident enim me nocte ac die, ac devorant. Sed nulli iniquorum istorum facio sermonem; neque habeo animam meam tam honorabilem mihi, ut plus eam quam Dominum diligam. Propter quod paratus sum ad ignem, ad bestias, ad gladios, ad crucem: tantum ut Christum videam salvatorem meum et Deum, qui pro me mortuus est. Rogo ergo vos ego vinctus Christi, qui per terram et mare exagitor: state in fide confirmati: quoniam justus ex fide vivit. Estote indeclinabiles, et unanimes in fide: quoniam Dominus habitare facit unanimes in domo.

II. Agnovi enim quoniam quidam ex ministris Sathanæ voluerunt vos conturbare: quorum quidam dicunt, quia Jesus putative natus est, et putative crucifixus; quidam vero, quia non est filius ejus qui fecit mundum; alii autem, quia ipse est ille qui est super omnia Deus;

I. A Syria usque Romam cum bestiis pugno: non ab irrationalibus bestiis comestus: hæ enim, ut scitis, Deo volente pepercerunt Danieli: ab his autem quæ humanæ formæ; inter quas immansueta bestia latitans, pungit me quotidie et vulnerat. Sed de nullo sermonem facio durorum, neque habeo animam pretiosam mihi ipsi; ut diligens ipsam magis, quam Dominum. Propter quod paratus sum ad ignem, ad bestias, ad gladium, ad crucem: solum Jesum Christum sciens Salvatorem meum, et Deum, pro me mortuum. Deprecor igitur vos ego vinctus Christi, per terram et mare jactatus; State in fide firmi; quoniam justus ex fide vivet. Estote inflexibiles; quoniam Dominus inhabitare facit unius moris in domo.

II. Novi quoniam quidam ministrorum Sathanæ voluerunt vos turbare: Hi quidem, quoniam Jesus opinione natus est, et opinione crucifixus est, et opinione mortuus est: Hi autem, quoniam non est Filius Conditoris: Hi vero, quoniam ipse est qui super omnia Deus:

ἄλλοι δὲ, ὅτι ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπός ἐστιν· ἕτεροι δὲ, ὅτι ἡ σὰρξ αὕτη οὐκ ἐγείρεται, καὶ δεῖ τὸν ἀπολαυστικὸν βίον ζῆν καὶ μετιέναι· τοῦτο γὰρ εἶναι πέρας τῶν ἀγαθῶν τοῖς μετ' οὐ πολὺ φθαρσομένοις. Τοσούτων κακῶν ἐσμός εἰσεκώμασεν· ἀλλ' ὑμεῖς οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν εἴξατε τῇ ὑποταγῇ αὐτῶν. Παύλου γὰρ ἐστε πολῖται καὶ μαθηταὶ, τοῦ ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων καὶ κύκλῳ μέχρι τοῦ Ἰλλυρικοῦ πεπληρωκότος τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, καὶ τὰ στίγματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ περιφέροντος.

Γ'. Οὗ μεμνημένοι, πάντως γινώσκετε, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Κύριος ἀληθῶς ἐγεννήθη ἐκ Μαρίας, γενόμενος ἐκ γυναικός, καὶ ἀληθείᾳ ἐσταυρώθη. Ἐμοὶ γὰρ, φησὶ, μὴ γένοιτο καυχᾶσθαι, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Κυρίου τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἀληθείᾳ [ἐπαθε, καὶ] ἀπέθανεν, καὶ ἀνέστη· εἰ παθητὸς γὰρ, φησὶν, ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰ πρῶτος ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν καὶ, Ὁ ἀπέθανε, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ· ὃ δὲ ζῆν, τῷ Θεῷ ζῆν. Ἐπεὶ τίς χρεῖα δεσμῶν, Χριστοῦ μὴ ἀποθανόντος; τίς χρεῖα ὑπομονῆς; τίς χρεῖα μαστίγων; τί δήποτε, alii quoque, quia homo est purus; quidam vero quia caro ejus non resurrexit, et quia oportet fruibilem vitam habere, atque hanc esse finem bonorum, qui non post multum corrumpitur. Qui quidem illis multorum malorum agger cumulatus est. Sed vos non intendatis mendaciis eorum. Pauli enim estis cives et discipuli, qui ab Hierosolymis et in circuitu usque ad Illyricum replevit Evangelio; et stigmata Christi in corpore suo portavit.

III. Cujus memores estote omnimodis: et cognoscite, quia Dominus Jesus Christus vere natus est de Maria, factus ex muliere, et vere crucifixus est: in qua cruce gloriatur Paulus, dicens, Mihi autem absit gloriari, nisi in cruce Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Et vere passus est, et mortuus, et resurrexit. Si enim passibilis, inquit, Christus, si primus ex mortuis resurrexit. Et, Qui mortuus est peccato, mortuus est semel; quod autem vivit, vivit Deo. Insuper, quæ necessitas vinculorum, Christo non mortuo? Quæ necessitas tolerantiae, aut quæ necessitas flagellorum? Quid, quod Alii autem, quoniam nudus homo est: Alteri vero, quoniam caro hæc non resurgit; et oportet voluptuosam vitam vivere et transire: hanc enim esse terminum bonorum post non multum corrupendis. Tantorum malorum multitudo eos inebriavit. Sed vos neque ad horam veniatis sub subjectionem ipsorum. Pauli enim estis cives et discipuli, qui a Ierosolymis et circum usque Illyricum implevit Evangelium; stigmata Christi in carne circumtulit.

III. Cujus memores, omnino cognoscitis, quoniam Jesus Dominus vere natus est ex Maria, factus ex muliere, et veritate crucifixus est: Mihi enim, ait, non fiat gloriari, nisi in cruce Domini. Et veritate mortuus est, et resurrexit: Si passibilis enim, ait, Christus, si primus ex resurrectione mortuorum. Et: Quod mortuus est, peccato mortuus est semel; quod autem vivit, Deo vivit. Quia quid opus vinculis, Christo non mortuo? Quid opus sustentia? quid opus flagellis? Quid umquam, Πέτρος μὲν ἐσταυροῦντο; Παῦλος δὲ καὶ Ἰάκωβος μαχαίρᾳ ἐτέμνοντο; Ἰωάννης δὲ ἐφυγαδένετο ἐν Πάτμῳ; Στέφανος δὲ ἐν λίθοις ἀνηρεῖτο παρὰ τῶν κυριοκτόνων Ἰουδαίων; ἀλλ' οὐδὲν τούτων εἰκῆ· ἀληθείᾳ γὰρ ἐσταυρώθη ὁ Κύριος ὑπὸ τῶν δυσσεβῶν.

Δ'. Καὶ [ὅτι] οὗτος ὁ γεννηθεὶς ἐκ γυναικὸς, υἱὸς ἐστὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ· καὶ [ὁ] σταυρωθεὶς, πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, καὶ Θεὸς Λόγος· καὶ αὐτὸς ἐποίησε τὰ πάντα· λέγει γὰρ ὁ ἀπόστολος· Εἷς Θεὸς ὁ Πατήρ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα· καὶ εἷς Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα. Καὶ πάλιν· Εἷς γὰρ Θεός, καὶ εἷς μεσίτης Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων, [ἄνθρωπος] Ἰησοῦς Χριστός· καὶ, Ἐν αὐτῷ ἐκτίσθη τὰ πάντα, τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς, ὄρατὰ τε καὶ ἀόρατα· καὶ αὐτός ἐστι πρὸ πάντων, καὶ τὰ πάντα ἐν αὐτῷ συνέστηκεν.

Petrus crucifixus est; Paulus et Jacobus gladiis obtruncati sunt, Act. xii. 2. Johannes in Pathmos relegatus est; sed et Stephanus a Domini Apoec. i. 9. interfecto- Act. vii. 59. ribus Judæis lapidibus extinctus est? Sed nec in hoc quidem est victoria. Vere enim crucifixus est Dominus ab impiis.

IV. Et quia iste qui natus est ex muliere, filius est Dei; et qui crucifixus est, primogenitus est omnis creaturæ et Deus Verbum; et ipse fecit omnia jussione Patris: Apostolus corroborat, dicens, Unus Deus Pater, ex quo omnia; 1 Cor. viii. 6. et unus Dominus Jesus Christus, per quem omnia. Et iterum; Unus 1 Tim. ii. 5. enim Deus, unus et mediator Dei et hominum homo Jesus Christus. Qui est imago Dei invisibilis, primogenitus universæ creaturæ: quoniam in ipso creata sunt omnia quæ sunt in cælo et quæ sunt in terra, visibilia et invisibilia; et ipse est ante omnes, et omnia in ipso constant.

Petrus crucifixus est, Paulus et Jacobus gladio cæsi sunt; Johannes vero relegatus est in Pathmo; Stephanus autem lapidibus occisus est a Domini occisoribus Judæis? Sed nihil horum vane. Veritate enim crucifixus est Dominus ab impiis.

IV. Et sic natus ex muliere, Filius est Dei: et crucifixus, primogenitus omnis creaturæ, et Deus Verbum: et ipse fecit omnia. Dicit enim Apostolus: Unus Deus Pater, ex quo omnia; et unus Dominus 1 Cor. viii. 6. Jesus Christus, per quem omnia. Et rursus: Unus enim Deus, et 1 Tim. ii. 5. unus mediator Dei et hominum, homo Jesus Christus: et in ipso Col. i. 15. creata sunt omnia quæ in cælo et in terra, visibilia et invisibilia: et ipse est ante omnia, et omnia in ipso consistunt.

Ε'. Καὶ ὅτι οὐκ αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς [καὶ Πατὴρ,] ἀλλ' υἱὸς ἐκείνου οὗ λέγει· Ἀναβαίνω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου, καὶ Πατέρα ὑμῶν, καὶ Θεὸν μου καὶ Θεὸν ὑμῶν· καὶ, Ὅτε ὑποταγῆι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα, [τότε καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Υἱὸς ὑποταγῆσεται τῷ ὑποτάξαντι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα,] ἵνα ἡ ὁ Θεὸς τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν. Οὐκοῦν ἕτερός ἐστιν ὁ ὑποτάξας, καὶ ὁ ὢν τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσι καὶ ἕτερος, ᾧ ὑπετάγη, ὃς καὶ μετὰ πάντα ὑποτάσσεται.

ς'. Καὶ οὔτε ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος, [ὁ] δι' οὗ καὶ ἐν ᾧ γέγονε τὰ πάντα· Πάντα γὰρ δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο· Ἡνίκα ἐποίει τὸν οὐρανὸν, συμπαρήμην αὐτῷ, καὶ ἐκεῖ ἤμην παρ' αὐτῷ ἀρμόζουσα, καὶ προσέχαιρέν μοι καθ' ἡμέραν. Πῶς δ' ἄρ' ὁ ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος ἤκουσεν, Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου; πῶς δὲ καὶ ἔλεγεν, Πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι ἐγὼ εἰμι; καὶ, Δόξασόν με τῇ δόξῃ σου ἣ εἶχον πρὸ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι; Ποῖος δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἔλεγεν, Καταβέβηκα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, οὐχ ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν,

V. Et quoniam non ipse est qui super omnia Deus Pater, sed Filius illius, dicit: Ascendo ad Patrem meum et Patrem vestrum, et Deum meum et Deum vestrum. Et: Quando subjecta ipsi erunt omnia, tunc et ipse subjicietur ei qui subjecit ei omnia; ut sit Deus omnia in omnibus. Igitur est alter qui subjecit, et qui est omnia in omnibus; et alter cui subjecta sunt, qui et cum omnibus subjicietur.

VI. Et neque nudus homo, per quem et in quo facta sunt omnia. Omnia enim per ipsum facta sunt. Quum fecit cœlum, coaderam ipsi: et illic eram apud ipsum componens; et applaudebat mihi quotidie. Qualiter autem utique nudus homo audiret; Sede a dextris meis? Qualiter autem et diceret; Priusquam Abraham fieret, ego sum; et, Clarifica me claritate quam habui, antequam mundus esset, a te? Qualis autem homo nudus diceret; Descendi de cœlo, non ut faciam voluntatem meam, sed voluntatem ejus qui misit me?

V. Et quia non est ipse, ille qui est super omnia Deus, sed filius ipsius: qui et ascendere se ad eum profitetur, dicens, Ascendo ad Patrem meum et ad Patrem vestrum, ad Deum meum et ad Deum vestrum. Et, Quando ei fuerint omnia subjecta, tunc et ipse subjectus erit illi qui ei subdidit omnia; ut sit Deus omnia in omnibus. Ergo alius est ille qui subjecit Filio omnia, et qui est omnia in omnibus; et alius Filius cui subjecta sunt omnia, qui et post hæc omnia subjectus erit illi qui ei subdidit omnia.

VI. Et non est homo purus ille, per quem et in quo facta sunt omnia. Omnia enim, inquit, per ipsum facta sunt: sicut et in libro Sapientiæ ipse de seipso refert, dicens: Cum faceret cœlum, aderam illi. Et iterum: Ego eram apud eum componens; et congaudebam mihi quotidie. Quomodo autem homo purus audiret; Sede ad dexteram meam? Aut quomodo diceret; Antequam Abraham fieret, ego sum? Vel illud quod ait; Glorifica me illa gloria, quam habui apud te prius quam mundus fieret? Quis autem homo posset dicere; Descendi de cœlo, non ut facerem voluntatem meam, sed voluntatem ejus qui misit me?

υἱοῦ Δαβὶδ, υἱοῦ Ἀβραάμ· οἱ δὲ Ἀπόστολοι εἰπόντες, ὅτι Θεὸς εἷς ἐστίν, εἶπον οἱ αὐτοὶ, ὅτι εἷς καὶ μεσίτης Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων· καὶ τὴν ἐνσωμάτωσιν καὶ τὸ πάθος οὐκ ἐψηχύνθησαν· τί γὰρ φησιν; ἄνθρωπος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, ὁ δούσ ἐαυτὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς καὶ σωτηρίας.

Ε'. Πᾶς οὖν ὅστις ἓνα καὶ μόνον καταγγέλλει Θεὸν, ἐπ' ἀναιρέσει τῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ θεότητος, ἐστὶ διάβολος, καὶ ἐχθρὸς πάσης δικαιοσύνης· ὃ τε ὁμολογῶν Χριστὸν, οὐ τοῦ ποιήσαντος τὸν κόσμον υἷον, ἀλλ' ἐτέρου τινὸς ἀγνώστου, παρ' ὃν ἐκίρυσεν ὁ νόμος καὶ οἱ προφῆται, οὗτος ὄργανόν ἐστιν αὐτοῦ τοῦ διαβόλου· ὃ τε τὴν ἐνανθρώπησιν παραιτούμενος, καὶ τὸν σταυρὸν ἐπισχυνόμενος, δι' ὃν δέδεμαι, οὗτός ἐστιν ἀντίχριστος· ὃ τε ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον λέγων τὸν Χριστὸν, ἐπάρατός ἐστι κατὰ τὸν Προφήτην, οὐκ ἐπὶ Θεῷ πεποιθώς, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ ἀνθρώπῳ· διὸ καὶ ἄκαρπός ἐστι, παραπλησίως τῇ ἀγριομυρίκῃ.

ς'. Ταῦτα γράφω ὑμῖν, ὦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ νεελαία, οὐ συνειδώς ὑμῖν τὸ τοιοῦτο φρόνημα, ἀλλὰ προφυλαττόμενος ὑμᾶς, ὡς πατήρ τὰ ἐαυτοῦ τέκνα. Βλέπετε fili David, filii Abraham. Apostoli autem dicentes, quoniam Deus est; dicebant illi ipsi, quoniam unus et mediator Dei et hominum. Et incorporationem et passionem non erubuerunt. Quid enim ait? Homo Jesus Christus; qui dedit semetipsum redemptionem pro mundi vita.

V. Omnis igitur qui unum annunciat Deum, in interemptione divinitatis Christi; filius est Diaboli, et inimicus omnis justitiæ. Et qui confitetur Christum, non ejus qui fecit mundum filium, sed alterius cujusdam incogniti, præter quem prædicavit Lex et Prophetæ, iste organum est ipsius Diaboli. Et qui inhumanationem renuit, et crucem erubescit, propter quam ligatus sum; iste est Antichristus. Et qui nudum hominem dicit Christum, maledictus est, secundum Prophetam, non in Deo confidens sed in homine. Propter quod et sine fructu est, proximus agresti myricæ.

VI. Hæc scribo vobis, ô Christi juvenus; non conscius vobis habere talem sensum: sed præservans vos, ut pater proprios filios. Videte fili David, filii Abraham. Apostoli quoque Christi, asserentes quia Deus unus est, adjecerunt, dicentes: Unus Deus, unus et Mediator Dei et hominum. Et de incarnatione ejus ac passione non erubuerunt; sed potius fiducialiter subjunxerunt, dicentes: Homo Christus Jesus; qui dedit semetipsum pro seculi vita.

V. Omnis ergo qui unum Deum annunciat, intercipit autem Christi divinitatem; filius est Diaboli, et inimicus omnis justitiæ. Qui autem non confitetur Christum filium esse ejus qui fecit mundum, sed alterius cujusdam incogniti, præter eum quem prædicat Lex et Prophetæ; hic organum est ipsius Diaboli. Quicumque autem incarnationem Christi recusat, et crucem ejus erubescit, propter quam ego vinctus sum; hic est Antichristus. Quicumque vero purum hominem dicit esse Christum, maledictus est, secundum dictum Prophetæ, non in Deum fidens, sed in hominem tantum. Propterea et infructuosus est, quemadmodum tamariscus quæ est in deserto.

VI. Hæc scribo vobis, cum sim Christi novellum olivæ; non ignorans vos taliter sapere: sed præcustodio vos, sicut pater filios suos. Videte οὖν τοὺς κακεντρεχεῖς ἐργάτας, τοὺς ἐχθροὺς τοῦ σταυροῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὧν τὸ τέλος ἀπώλεια, ὧν ἡ δόξα ἐν τῇ αἰσχύνῃ αὐτῶν. Βλέπετε τοὺς κύνας τοὺς ἐνεοὺς, τοὺς ὄφεις τοὺς συρομένους, τὰ φιλόδορα δρακόντια, τὰς ἀσπίδας, τοὺς βασιλίσκους, τοὺς σκορπίους· οὗτοι γὰρ εἰσι θῶες ἀλωποῖ, ἀνθρωπόμοιμίθηκοι.

Ζ'. Παύλου καὶ Πέτρου γεγονότε μαθηταί· μὴ ἀπολέσητε τὴν παραθήκην· μνημονεύσατε Εὐδοίου τοῦ ἀξιομακαρίστου ποιμένος ὑμῶν, ὃς πρῶτος ἐνεχειρίσθη παρὰ τῶν Ἀποστόλων τὴν ὑμετέραν προστασίαν. Μὴ καταισχύνωμεν τὸν πατέρα· γενώμεθα γνήσιοι παῖδες, ἀλλὰ μὴ νόθοι. Οἶδατε ὅπως συναναστράφημ μεθ' ὑμῶν· ἃ παρῶν ἔλεγον ὑμῖν, ταῦτα καὶ ἀπὼν γράφω· εἴ τις οὐ φιλεῖ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν, ἦτω ἀνάθεμα. igitur in malum currentes operatores, inimicos crucis Christi; quorum finis perditio, quorum Deus venter, quorum gloria in confusione ipsorum. Videte canes sine voce, serpentes surrepentes, infoveatos dracones, aspides, basiliscos, scorpiones. Isti enim sunt thoes vulpes, hominis imitatores simiæ.

VII. Pauli et Petri facti discipuli: non perdati depositum. Recordamini Eudodii digne beati Pastoris vestri; qui primus ordinatus ab Apostolis in vestram prælationem. Non erubescamus patrem: fiamus proprii pueri, sed non nothi. Scitis qualiter conversatus sum vobiscum. Quæ præsens dicebam vobis, hæc et absens scribo: Qui non amat Dominum Jesum, sit anathema. Imitatores mei estote. Consimilis animæ vobiscum fiam; quando utique Deo potiar. Mementote meorum vinculorum.

VIII. Presbyteri, pascite eum qui in vobis gregem: usquequo ostendat Deus futurum principari vobis. Ego enim jam sacrificor, et tempus resolutionis meæ instat, ut Christum lucrificiam.

VII. Pauli et Petri facti estis discipuli: nolite perdere depositum quod vobis commendaverunt. Mementote digne beatissimi Eudodii Pastoris vestri; qui primus vobis ab Apostolis antistes ordinatus est. Non confundamus patrem: sed efficiamur certi filii, et non adulterini. Pro animabus vestris ego efficiar, quando Christum meruero adipisci. Mementote vinculorum meorum.

VIII. Presbyteri, pascite gregem qui in vobis est; donec ostendat Deus eum qui futurus est in vobis rector. Ego autem nunc festino; ut Christum lucrificiam.

Οἱ διάκονοι γνωσκέτωσαν οἷον εἰσὶν ἀξιώματος, καὶ σπουδαζέτωσαν ἀμεμπτοὶ εἶναι, ἵνα ὡσι μιμηταὶ Χριστοῦ. Ὁ λαὸς ὑποτασσέσθω τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις καὶ τοῖς διακόνοις. Αἱ παρθένοι γνωσκέτωσαν τίνι καθιέρωσαν ἑαυτάς.

Θ'. Οἱ ἄνδρες στεργέτωσαν τὰς ὁμοζύγους, μνημονεύοντες, ὅτι μία ἐνὶ, οὐ πολλὰ ἐνὶ ἐδόθησαν ἐν τῇ κτίσει. Αἱ γυναῖκες τιμάτωσαν τοὺς ἄνδρας, ὡς σάρκα ἰδίαν· μηδὲ ἐξ ὀνόματος αὐτοὺς τολμάτωσαν καλεῖν· σωφρονίζέτωσαν δὲ, μόνους ἄνδρας τοὺς ὁμοζύγους εἶναι νομίζουσαι, οἷς καὶ ἠνώθησαν κατὰ γνώμην Θεοῦ. Οἱ γονεῖς, τὰ τέκνα παιδεύετε παιδεῖαν ἱεράν. Τὰ τέκνα, τιμάτε τοὺς γονεῖς, ἵνα εὖ ὑμῖν ᾗ.

Ι'. Οἱ δεσπόται, μὴ ὑπερηφάνως τοῖς δούλοις προσέχετε, μιμούμενοι τὸν τλητικὸν Ἰώβ εἰπόντα· Εἰ δὲ καὶ ἐφάυλισα κρίμα θεράποντός μου, ἢ θεραπαίνης μου, κρινομένων αὐτῶν πρὸς με· τί γὰρ ποιήσω, εἰάν ἔτασίν μου ὁ Κύριος ποιήσῃται; καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς ἐπίστασθε. Οἱ δούλοι, μὴ παροργίζετε τοὺς δεσπότας ἐν μηδενί, ἵνα μὴ κακῶν ἀνηκέστων ἑαυτοῖς αἴτιοι γένησθε.

ΙΑ'. Μηδεὶς ἀργὸς ἐσθιέτω, ἵνα μὴ ῥεμβὸς γένηται, καὶ πορνοσκόπος.

Diaconi cognoscant cujus sint dignitatis: et studeant immaculati esse, ut sint imitatores Christi. Populus subjiciatur Presbyteris et Diaconis. Virgines cognoscant cui consecraverunt seipsas.

IX. Viri diligant conjuges: recordantes quoniam una uni, non multæ uni datæ sunt in creatione. Mulieres honorent viros, ut propriam carnem: neque ex nomine ipsos audeant vocare. Castificent autem; solos viros conjuges esse existimantes, quibus et unitæ sunt secundum sententiam Dei. Parentes, filios erudite disciplinam sacram. Filii, honorate parentes: ut bene vobis sit.

X. Domini, non superbe servis præferamini: imitantes Job; dicentem; Si autem et depravavi iudicium servi mei, vel ancillæ meæ, iudicatis ipsis ad me. Quid enim faciam, si scrutinium mei Dominus faciat? et quæ deinceps, scitis. Servi, non irritetis dominos in ira: ut non malorum insanabilium vobismet causæ fiat.

XI. Otiosus nullus comedat; ut non negligens fiat et fornicarius.

Diaconi agnoscant cujus sint dignitatis: et studeant esse inculpabiles, ut sint Christi imitatores. Populus subditus sit Presbyteris et Diaconis. Virgines cognoscant cui se consecraverunt.

IX. Viri diligant conjuges suas: memores quia una uni, et non multæ uni in principio creaturæ datæ sunt in possessionem. Mulieres honorificent viros suos, ut carnem suam: et non audeant proprio nomine eos vocare. Sciant autem solos viros suos compares esse; quibus et conjunctæ sunt secundum ordinationem Dei. Parentes, erudite filios eruditione sancta. Filii, honorate parentes: ut bene sit vobis, et sitis longævi super terram.

X. Domini, nolite superbe servis uti: imitantes patientissimum Job, dicentem; Si prave iudicavi servum meum, aut ancillam meam; iudicet ego ab eis: quid enim faciam, si interrogationem Dominus fecerit de me? et cætera, quæ sequuntur, bene nōstis. Servi, nolite ad iracundiam in aliquo provocare dominos: ne forte aliquid mali fiat vobis; et vos ipsi vobis eritis rei.

XI. Nemo otiosus manducet; ne vagus et fornicarius efficiatur.

Μέθη, ὀργή, φθόνος, λοιδορία, κραυγή, βλασφημία, μηδὲ ὀνομαζέσθω ἐν ὑμῖν. Αἱ χῆραι μὴ σπαταλάτωσαν, ἵνα μὴ καταστρηνιάσωσι τοῦ λόγου. Τῷ Καίσαρι ὑποτάγητε, ἐν οἷς ἀκίνδυνος ἡ ὑποταγή. Τοὺς ἄρχοντας μὴ ἐρεθίζετε εἰς παροξυσμὸν, ἵνα μὴ δῶτε ἀφορμὴν τοῖς ζητοῦσι καθ' ὑμῶν. Περὶ δὲ γοητείας, ἢ παιδεραστίας, ἢ φόνου, περιττὸν τὸ γράφειν, ὅποτε ταῦτα καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπηγόρευται πράττειν. Ταῦτα οὐχ ὡς ἀπόστολος παρακελεύομαι, ἀλλ' ὡς σύνδουλος ὑμῶν ὑπομιμνήσκω ὑμᾶς.

IB'. Ἀσπάζομαι τὸ ἅγιον πρεσβυτέριον. Ἀσπάζομαι τοὺς ἱεροὺς διακόνους, καὶ τὸ ποθεινὸν μοι ὄνομα, ὃν ἐπίδοιμι ἀντὶ ἐμοῦ ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, ὅταν Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω· οὗ ἀντίψυχον γενοίμην. Ἀσπάζομαι ὑποδιακόνους, ἀναγνώστας, ψάλτας, πυλωροὺς, τοὺς κοπιῶντας, ἐπορκιστάς, ὁμολογητάς. Ἀσπάζομαι τὰς φρουροὺς τῶν ἁγίων πυλώνων, τὰς ἐν Χριστῷ διακόνους. Ἀσπάζομαι τὰς χριστολήπτους παρθένοὺς, ὧν ὀναίμην ἐν Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ. Ἀσπάζομαι τὸν λαὸν Κυρίου ἀπὸ μικροῦ ἕως μεγάλου, καὶ πάσας τὰς ἀδελφάς μου ἐν Κυρίῳ.

Ebrietas, ira, invidia, contumelia, clamor, blasphemia, neque nominentur in vobis. Viduæ non delicientur; ut non aberrant a sermone. Cæsari subjicimini, in quibus non periculosa subjectio. Principes non irritetis in amaricationem: ut non detis occasionem quærentibus adversum vos occasionem. De incantatione, vel puerili desiderio, vel homicidio, superfluum scribere: quum hæc et Gentibus prohibita sunt fieri. Hæc non ut Apostolus jubeo; sed ut conservus vester, monefacio vos.

XII. Saluto sanctum Presbyterium. Saluto sacros Diaconos, et desideratum mihi nomen: quem videam pro me in Spiritu sancto, cum utique Christo fruar; cujus consimilis animi fiam. Saluto subdiaconos, lectores, cantores, ostiarios, laborantes, exorcistas, confessores. Saluto custodes sanctarum portarum, existentes in Christo ministros. Saluto a Christo sumptas virgines: quibus fruar in Domino Jesu. Saluto venerabilissimas viduas. Saluto populum Domini, a parvo usque ad magnum, et omnes sorores meas in Domino.

Ebrietas, iracundia, invidia, maliloquium, clamor, blasphemia, non nominetur in vobis. Viduæ non in deliciis agant; ne per luxuriam abjiciant verbum. Cæsari subditi estote in his in quibus sine periculo est ipsa subjectio. Principes nolite exasperare: ne detis occasiones adversum vos quærentibus eas. De maleficiis autem et veneficiis, vel homicidio, ex abundantia est scribere vobis: quando hæc etiam in Gentibus abominabile sit agere. Hæc autem non sicut Apostolus præcipio; sed sicut conservus vester, commemorans vos.

XII. Saluto sanctum Presbyterium. Saluto sacrosanctos Diaconos, et desiderabile mihi nomen ejus quem reservavi pro me in Spiritu sancto, cum Christum meruero adipisci: pro cujus anima ego efficiar. Saluto subdiaconos, lectores, cantores, ostiarios, laborantes, exorcistas, atque confessores. Saluto custodes sanctarum portarum, Diaconissas, quæ sunt in Christo. Saluto susceptrices Christi virgines; quas ego nutriti in Domino Jesu. Saluto pudicissimas viduas. Saluto plebem Domini, a minimo usque ad maximum, et omnes sorores meas in Domino.

EJUSDEM AD HERONEM,

Ecclesiae Antiochenae Diaconum : quem ei Dominus ostendit sessurum in sede ipsius. Ex Philippis.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, a Deo honorabili, desiderabili, pudico, Christifero, spiritifero, in fide et dilectione, Heroni diacono Christi, ministro Dei, gratia et misericordia et pax ab omnipotente Deo, et Christo Jesu Domino nostro, unigenito filio ejus ; qui dedit semetipsum pro peccatis nostris, ut redimeret nos de hoc praesenti seculo maligno, et salvos faceret in regnum suum caeleste.

I. Rogo te in Domino adjicere ad cursum tuum, et defendere dignitatem tuam : consonantiae quae est ad Sanctos curam gerere. Infirmiores suffer ; ut adimpleas legem Christi. Jejunii et orationibus vaca : sed non ultra mensuram, ne teipsum dejicias. Vino et carnibus non ex toto abstinere : non enim sunt abominabiles. Bona, inquit, terrae comedetis.

EPISTOLA AD HERONEM

Diaconum Ecclesiae Antiochenorum.

Ignatius, qui et Theophorus, a Deo honorato et desideratissimo, Christifero, spirituali filio in fide et charitate, Eroni diacono Jesu Christi et famulo Dei, gratia, misericordia et pax ab omnipotenti Deo et Jesu Christo Domino nostro, unigenito filio ipsius ; qui dedit semetipsum pro nobis et peccatis nostris, ut eriperet nos ex praesenti seculo nequam, et salvaret in regnum ipsius supercaeleste.

Gal. i.

I. Deprecor te in Deo apponere cursui tuo, et justificare tuam dignitatem. Concordiamque ad Sanctos cura. Infirmiores porta ; ut impleas legem Christi. Jejunii et orationibus vaca : sed non immoderate, ut teipsum prosternas. A vino et carnibus non omnino abstinere : non enim sunt abominabilia. Bona enim terrae comedite, ait.

Esai. i.

Καὶ, Ἔδεσθε κρέα ὡς λάχανα. Καὶ, Οἶνος εὐφραίνει καρδίαν ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ἔλαιον ἱλαρύνει, καὶ ἄρτος στερίζει· ἀλλὰ μεμετρημένως καὶ εὐτάκτως, ὡς Θεοῦ χορηγοῦντος. Τίς γὰρ φάγεται, ἢ τίς πίεται παρὲς αὐτοῦ; ὅτι εἶτι καλὸν, αὐτοῦ· καὶ εἶτι ἀγαθὸν, αὐτοῦ. Τῇ ἀναγνώσει πρόσεχε, ἵνα μὴ μόνον αὐτὸς εἰδῆς τοὺς νόμους, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἄλλοις αὐτοὺς ἐξηγῆ, ὡς Θεοῦ ἀθλητῆς. Οὐδεὶς στρατευόμενος ἐμπλέκεται ταῖς τοῦ βίου πραγματείαις, ἵνα τῷ στρατολογήσαντι ἀρέσῃ· ἐὰν δὲ καὶ ἀθλῆ τις, οὐ στεφανοῦται, ἐὰν μὴ νομίμως ἀθλήσῃ. Ἀντίψυχόν σου ἐγὼ ὁ δέσμιος.

Β'. Πᾶς ὁ λέγων παρὰ τὰ διατεταγμένα, καὶ ἀξιόπιστος ἢ, καὶ νηστεύῃ, καὶ παρθενεύῃ, καὶ σημεῖα ποιῆ, καὶ προφητεύῃ, λύκος σοι φαινέσθω, ἐν προβάτου δορᾷ, προβάτων φθορὰν κατεργαζόμενος. Εἴ τις ἀρνεῖται τὸν σταυρὸν, καὶ τὸ πάθος ἐπαισχύνεται, ἔστω σοι ὡς αὐτὸς ὁ ἀντικείμενος, καὶ ψωμίση τὰ ὑπάρχοντα πτωχοῖς, καὶ ὄρη μεθίστα, καὶ παραδῶ τὸ σῶμα εἰς καύσιν, ἔστω σοι βδελυκτός. Εἴ τις φανλίζει τὸν νόμον, ἢ τοὺς προφήτας, Et, Carnes ut olera manducabitis. Sed et, Vinum lætificat cor hominis, et oleum exhilarat, et panis confirmat. Sed et mensurate et ordinate, tanquam Deo concedente. Quis enim manducat, aut quis bibit, præter eum? quoniam quicquid bonum est, ejus, et quicquid optimum, ipsius. Lectioni intende: ut non solum ipse scias leges, sed etiam aliis eas exponas, ut Dei athleta. Nemo militans Christo implicat se negotiis secularibus: ut placeat ei cui se probavit. Sed nec vir* athleta coronabitur, nisi legitime certaverit. Pro anima tua ego vinctus sum.

II. Omnis igitur qui dixerit præter illa quæ tradita sunt; tametsi fide dignus sit, tametsi jejunet, tametsi virginitatem servet, tametsi signa faciat, tametsi prophetet: lupus tibi *pareat, in grege ovium, corruptionem operans. Si quis crucem negaverit; et passionem erubuerit; sit tibi tanquam adversarius: tametsi substantiam suam pauperibus tribuat, tametsi montes transferat, tametsi corpus suum combustioni tradat; sit tibi execrabilis et abominabilis. Si quis infalsaverit Legem et Prophetas, Et, Manducate carnem ut olera. Et, Vinum lætificat cor hominis, et oleum exhilarat, et panis confirmat. Sed moderate et ordinate, ut Deo tribuente. Quis enim comedit, vel quis bibit, sine ipso? quoniam si quid bonum, ipsius? et si quid bonum, ab ipso. Lectioni attende: ut non solum ipse scias leges, sed et aliis ipsas enarres, ut Dei athleta. Nullus militans implicatur vitæ negotiis: ut ei cui militat placeat. Si autem et certet quis; non coronatur, nisi legitime certaverit. Consimilis animæ tibi ego vinctus.

II. Omnis qui dicit præter præcepta; etsi dignus fide sit, etsi jejunet, etsi virginitatem servet, etsi signa faciat et prophetet: lupus tibi appareat in ovis pelle, ovium corruptionem operans. Si quis negat crucem, et passionem erubescit; sit tibi sicut Antichristus et Adversarius: etsi distribuat in cibos quæ habet pauperibus, etsi montes transferat, etsi tradat corpus in combustionem; sit tibi abominabilis. Si quis depravat Legem vel Prophetas, φιλάδελφον ὑμῶν κατὰ Θεὸν ψυχικήν ἀγάπην, ὑπομιμνήσκειν ὑμᾶς τοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ ὑμῶν δρόμου, ἵνα τὸ αὐτὸ λέγητε πάντες, σύμφυχοι, τὸ ἐν φρονούντες, τῷ αὐτῷ κανόνι τῆς πίστεως στοιχοῦντες, ὡς Παῦλος ὑμᾶς ἐνουθέτει. Εἰ γὰρ εἷς ἐστὶν ὁ τῶν ὄλων Θεός, ὁ Πατὴρ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα· εἷς δὲ καὶ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς, ὁ τῶν ὄλων Κύριος, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα· ἐν δὲ καὶ Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον, τὸ ἐνεργῆσαν ἐν Μωσῇ καὶ προφήταις καὶ ἀποστόλοις· ἐν δὲ καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα, τὸ εἰς τὸν θάνατον τοῦ Κυρίου διδόμενον· μία δὲ καὶ ἡ ἐκλεκτὴ Ἐκκλησία· μία ὀφείλει εἶναι καὶ ἡ κατὰ Χριστὸν πίστις. Εἷς γὰρ Κύριος, μία πίστις, ἐν βάπτισμα, εἷς Θεός καὶ Πατὴρ πάντων, καὶ διὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐν πάσιν.

Β'. Εἷς οὖν Θεός καὶ Πατὴρ, καὶ οὐ δύο, οὐ δὲ τρεῖς· εἷς ὁ ὢν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι πλὴν αὐτοῦ, ὁ μόνος ἀληθινός· Κύριος γὰρ, φησὶν, ὁ Θεός σου, Κύριος εἷς ἐστί. Καὶ πάλιν· Οὐχ εἷς Θεός ἐκτίσεν ἡμᾶς; οὐχ εἷς Πατὴρ πάντων ἡμῶν; Εἷς δὲ καὶ Υἱός, Λόγος Θεός. Ὁ μονογενὴς γὰρ, φησὶν, ὁ ὢν εἰς τοὺς κόλπους τοῦ Πατρός. Καὶ πάλιν· Εἷς Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός. Καὶ ἐν ἄλλῳ· Τί ὄνομα αὐτῷ, ἢ τί ὄνομα τῷ Υἱῷ, ἵνα γνῶμεν; Εἷς δὲ καὶ ὁ Παράκλητος. Ἐν γὰρ, φησὶ, καὶ Πνεῦμα, ἐπειδὴ ἐκλήθημεν ἐν μιᾷ ἐλπίδι τῆς κλήσεως ἡμῶν. Καὶ πάλιν· Ἐν πνεῦμα ἐποτίσθημεν καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς. Πάντα δὲ ταῦτα τὰ χαρίσματα δῆλον ὅτι ἐνεργεῖ ἐν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα. Οὔτε οὖν τρεῖς πατέρες, οὔτε τρεῖς υἱοὶ, οὔτε τρεῖς παράκλητοι· ἀλλ' εἷς πατὴρ, καὶ εἷς υἱός, καὶ εἷς παράκλητος.

tatis vestre dilectionem; com-memorans vos cursus vestri in Christo, ut idipsum dicatis omnes, unum sentientes; in hoc ipso fidei canone fixi: sicuti et Paulus erudiens vos dicit: Unus est omnium Deus Pater Christi, ex quo omnia; et unus Dominus noster Jesus Christus, filius Dei unigenitus, dominator universorum, per quem omnia. Unus autem etiam Spiritus Sanctus, qui operabatur in Moyse et Prophetis, et Apos-tolis. Unum quoque et baptisma, quod datur in morte Christi. Una itaque Ecclesia etiam esse debet, et una fides quæ est in Christo: secundum dictum ejusdem Apos-toli, dicentis: Unus Dominus, una fides, unum baptisma: unus Deus et Pater omnium: qui est super omnes, et per omnes, et in omnibus.

II. Unus ergo est Deus et Pater; et non duo vel tres: unus scilicet qui est et non præter eum, solus verus. Dominus enim, inquit, Deus tuus, Dominus unus
est. Et iterum: Nonne unus Deus creavit nos; et unus pater est omnium nostrum? Unus quoque et filius, Deus Verbum.
Unigenitus, inquit, qui est in sinu
Patris. Et rursum: Unus Dominus
Jesu Christus. Et alibi: Quod est nomen ejus; aut quod est nomen filii ejus? Scitote autem, quia unus est etiam Spiritus Sanctus Paracletus: sicut idem Paulus ait: Unus Spiritus, sicut vocati estis in una spe vocationis vestræ.
Et iterum: Omnes, inquit, in uno spiritu potati sumus. Manifeste autem dona gratiarum ipse unus atque idem Spiritus operatur.
Ergo neque tres sunt Patres, neque tres Filii; sed neque tres Paracleti: sed unus Pater, et unus Filius, et unus Paracletus.

Διὸ καὶ Κύριος ἀποστέλλων τοὺς ἀποστόλους μαθητεῦσαι πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐνετείλατο αὐτοῖς βαπτίζειν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ, καὶ τοῦ Ἁγίου Πνεύματος· οὔτε εἰς ἓνα τριώνυμον, οὔτε εἰς τρεῖς ἑνανθρωπήσαντας, ἀλλ' εἰς τρεῖς ὁμοτίμους.

Γ'. Εἰς γὰρ ὁ ἑνανθρωπήσας, οὔτε ὁ Πατήρ, οὔτε ὁ Παράκλητος, ἀλλὰ μόνος ὁ Υἱὸς· οὐ δοκῆσει, οὐ φαντασία, ἀλλ' ἀληθεία. Ὁ Λόγος γὰρ σὰρξ ἐγένετο. Ἡ γὰρ σοφία ὠκοδόμησεν ἑαυτῇ οἶκον. Καὶ ἐγεννήθη ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ Θεὸς Λόγος, μετὰ σώματος ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, ἄνευ ὁμιλίας ἀνδρός. Ἡ παρθένος γὰρ ἐν γαστρὶ λήψεται, καὶ τέξεται υἱόν. Ἀληθῶς οὖν ἐγεννήθη, ἀληθῶς ἠυξήθη, ἀληθῶς ἔφαγε καὶ ἔπιεν, ἀληθῶς ἐσταυρώθη, καὶ ἀπέθανε, καὶ ἀνέστη. Ὁ ταῦτα πιστεύσας, ὡς ἔχει, ὡς γεγένηται, μακάριος· ὁ ταῦτα μὴ πιστεύων, ἐναγῆς, οὐχ ἦπτον τῶν τὸν Κύριον σταυρωσάντων. Ὁ γὰρ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου χαίρει, ὅταν τις ἀρνήται τὸν σταυρόν. Ὁλεθρον γὰρ ἑαυτοῦ γινώσκει τὴν ὁμολογίαν τοῦ σταυροῦ. Τοῦτο γὰρ ἐστὶ τὸ τρόπαιον κατὰ τῆς αὐτοῦ δυνάμεως· ὅπερ ὀρῶν φρίπτει, καὶ ἀκούων φοβεῖται.

Δ'. Καὶ πρὶν μὲν γένηται ὁ σταυρὸς, ἔσπευδε γενέσθαι τούτον· καὶ ἐνήργει ἐν τοῖς υἱοῖς τῆς ἀπειθείας, ἐνήργει ἐν Ἰουδα, ἐν Φαρισαίοις, ἐν Σαδδουκαίοις, ἐν πρεσβύταις, ἐν νέοις, ἐν ἱερεῦσι. Μέλλοντος δὲ γίνεσθαι, θορυβεῖται, καὶ μετὰ μελόν ἐμβάλλει τῷ προδότῃ, καὶ βρόχον αὐτῷ δείκνυσι, καὶ ἀγχόνην διδάσκει· φοβεῖ δὲ καὶ τὸ γύναιον, ἐν ὀνειροῖς αὐτὸ καταταράττων, καὶ παύειν πειράται τὰ κατὰ τὸν σταυρόν, ὁ πάντα κάλων κινῶν εἰς τὴν αὐτοῦ κατασκευήν·

Propter quod et Dominus mittens Apostolos docere omnes gentes, præcepit eis; baptizare eas in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti: non in unum quendam trinomium; neque in tres unius ejusdemque honoris.

III. Quia unus est tantum, qui homo factus est; non Pater scilicet, neque Paracletus, sed solus Filius: non putative neque in phantasmate, sed certissima veritate. Verbum enim caro factum est, et habitavit in ea. Sapientia namque ædificavit sibi domum. Et factus est sicut homo Deus Verbum, cum corpore quod suscepit ex virgine: non ex collocatione scilicet, aut semine viri. Virgo enim, inquit, in utero concipiet, et pariet filium. Vere ergo natus est, et vere crevit; vere manducavit, et bibit; vere crucifixus est et mortuus, et resurrexit. Qui hæc credit, sicut habet, quo modo natus est, beatus est. Qui autem hæc non credit, non minus est ab eis qui eum crucifixerunt. Princeps enim mundi in hoc gaudet, quando quis crucem negaverit. Interitum enim sibiipsi esse cognoscit confessionem crucis. Hoc est enim trophæum contra ejus virtutem: quod videns expavescit, et audiens timet.

IV. Nam et antequam facta esset crux, festinabat facere hoc, et operavit in filiis diffidentia. Operatus est autem in Juda, in Pharisæis, in Sadducæis, in senioribus, in juvenibus, et in Sacerdotibus. Cum autem properaret ut fieret, conturbatur; et postea desperationem immisit proditori, et laqueum ei ostendit, et suspendium eum docuit: et mulieri immisit timorem in somnio; ipse conturbans, et compescere tentans patibulum crucis; ipse omnia οὐ μεταγινώσκων ἐπὶ τῷ τοσοῦτῳ κακῷ· ἢ γὰρ ἂν οὐ πάντα ἦν πονηρός· ἀλλ' ἐπήσθετο τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ἀπωλείας. Ἀρχὴ γὰρ αὐτῷ καταδίκης ὁ τοῦ Χριστοῦ σταυρός, ἀρχὴ θανάτου, ἀρχὴ ἀπωλείας· διὸ καὶ ἐντισιν ἐνεργεῖ ἀρνεῖσθαι τὸν σταυρὸν, τὸ πάθος ἐπαισχύνεσθαι, τὸν θάνατον δόκησιν καλεῖν, τὴν ἐκ παρθένου γέννησιν περικόπτειν, τὴν φύσιν αὐτὴν διαβάλλειν ὡς μυσαρράν. Ἰουδαίοις συμμαχεῖ εἰς ἄρνησιν τοῦ σταυροῦ, Ἑλλησιν εἰς συκοφαντίαν μαγείας, αἰρετικοῖς εἰς φαντασίαν. Ποικίλος γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ τῆς κακίας στρατηγός, κλεψίνους, ἄστατος, ἑαυτῷ ἐναντίος· καὶ ἄλλα μὲν προβαλλόμενος, ἕτερα δὲ δεικνύς· σοφὸς γὰρ ἐστὶ τοῦ κακοποιῆσαι, τὸ δὲ καλὸν ὅ τι ποτέ ἐστὶν ἀγνοεῖ· ἀγνοίας γὰρ πεπλήρωται, δι' ἐκούσιον παράνοιαν. Πῶς γὰρ οὐκ ἐστὶ τοιοῦτος, ὃς μηδὲ πρὸ ποδῶν τῶν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον βλέπει;

Ε'. Εἰ γὰρ ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος ὁ Κύριος, ἐκ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος μόνον, τί περικόπτεις τὴν γέννησιν τῆς κοινῆς τῶν ἀνθρώπων φύσεως; τί δὲ, ὡς παράδοξόν τι ἐπ' ἀνθρώπου γενόμενον, τὸ πάθος δόκησιν καλεῖς; καὶ τὸν θάνατον, τοῦ θνητοῦ δόξαν νομίζεις; Εἰ δὲ Θεὸς καὶ ἄνθρωπος, τί παράνομον καλεῖς τὸν τῆς δόξης Κύριον, τὸν τῇ φύσει ἀτρεπτον; τί παράνομον λέγεις τὸν νομοθέτην, τὸν ἀνθρωπεῖαν ψυχὴν ἔχοντα; Ὁ Λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, καὶ τέλειος ἄνθρωπος, οὐκ ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ κατοικήσας. Πῶς δὲ καὶ Μάγος οὗτος, ὁ πάλαι μὲν πᾶσαν αἰσθητὴν καὶ νοητὴν φύσιν κατασκευάσας γνώμη Πατρός· ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐνανθρωπήσει, πᾶσαν νόσον καὶ μαλακίαν θεραπεύσας; evocans et movens in suam præparationem; non recognoscens: in tantum enim mala erant, non omnia. Malignus autem sentiebat suam perditionem. Initium enim illi fuit ad damnationem crux Christi, principium mortis, initium perditionis. Propter quod in aliquibus quidem operatur negare crucem, passionem erubescere: qui mortem putant vocare Virginis generationem, circumcidere ipsam naturam, et diffamare quasi odiosam. Judæorum auxiliator est ad negationem crucis, Paganorum ad calumniam magiæ, Hæreticorum ad phantasiam. Multiformis enim est malitiæ princeps, furans sensus, contrarius sibimet ipsi; et alia quidem immittens, alia vero ostentans. Sapiens est enim ad malefaciendum; quod bonum est autem nescit aliquando. Ignorantia enim repletus est per inobedientiam. Quomodo enim non sit talis, qui non sibi proponit suum sermonem?

Jer. iv. 22

V. Si enim homo purus est Dominus, ex anima et corpore: quid circumcidis nativitatem communem naturæ hominum? Quid, tanquam parvam gloriam in homine factam, passionem simulationem vocas; et mortem mortalis gloriam existimas? Si Deus est et homo; quid iniquum vocas Dominum gloriæ; illum videlicet natura immutabilem? Quid sine lege dicis legislatorem, qui non humanam animam habuit? Verbum caro factum est: Verbum homo; sed non in homine. Quomodo igitur Magus est ille; qui in principio omnem sensibilem, et intelligibilem naturam voluntate Patris præparavit? qui, cum esset in carne; omnem infirmitatem atque languorem curavit?

1 Cor. ii. 8.

Joh. i. 14.

ς'. Πῶς δὲ οὐχ οὗτος Θεὸς, ὁ νεκροὺς ἀνιστῶν, χωλοὺς ἀρτίους ἀποστέλλων, λεπροὺς καθαρίζων, τυφλοὺς ὀμματῶν, τὰ ὄντα ἢ αὖξων, ἢ μεταβάλλων· ὡς τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους, καὶ τοὺς δύο ἰχθύας, καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ εἰς οἶνον· τὸν δὲ σὸν στρατὸν ῥήματι μόνον φυγαδεύων; τί δὲ κακίζεις τὴν φύσιν τῆς παρθένου, καὶ τὰ μόρια ἀποκαλεῖς αἰσχρά; πάλαι ταῦτα πομπεύων, καὶ γυμνοῦσθαι κελεύων, ἄρρένας μὲν εἰς ὄψιν θηλειῶν, θηλειᾶς δὲ εἰς ἀκόλαστον ἐπιθυμίαν ἀρρένων. Νῦν αἰσχρά σοι ταῦτα νενόμισται, καὶ σεμνὸς εἶναι προσποιῇ, σὺ τὸ τῆς πορνείας πνεῦμα, ἀγνοῶν ὅτι τότε γίνεται αἰσχρὸν τι, ὅταν παρανομία ῥυπανθῇ· ἀμαρτίας δὲ ἀπούσης, οὐδὲν τῶν γενομένων αἰσχρὸν, οὐδὲν φαῦλον, ἀλλὰ πάντα καλὰ λίαν· καὶ σὺ μὴ βλέπων, κακίζεις αὐτά;

Ζ'. Πῶς δὲ πάλιν οὐκ ἔτι σοι δοκεῖ ὁ Χριστὸς εἶναι ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, ἀλλ' ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς, ὁ ὢν ὁ παντοκράτωρ; τίς οὖν ὁ τοῦτον ἀποστείλας, εἰπέ· τίς ὁ τούτου κυριεύων; γνώμη δὲ τίνος οὗτος ἐπειθάρχησε; νόμων δὲ ποίων πληρωτῆς γέγονεν, ὁ μήτε γνώμη τινὸς, μήτε ἐξουσία εἰκων; καὶ τὸν Χριστὸν ἐξαιρῶν τῆς γεννήσεως, τὸν ἀγέννητον νομοθετεῖς γεγενῆσθαι, καὶ σταυρῶ προσηλωσθαι τὸν ἀναρχον· τίνος συγχωρήσαντος, οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν· ἀλλὰ γὰρ οὐ λέληθάς με τοῦ παλιμβόλου· οὐδ' ἀγνοῶ, ὅτι διὰ λοξὰ καὶ δίδυμα βαίνεις· ἀγνοεῖς δὲ σὺ τίς ὁ γεννηθεὶς, ὁ πάν εἰδέναι προσποιούμενος.

Η'. Πολλὰ γὰρ σε λανθάνει ἡ παρθενία Μαρίας, ὁ παράδοξος τοκετός· ὅστις ὁ ἐν τῷ σώματι· ὁ ἡγούμενος ἀστήρ τῶν ἐν ἀνατολῇ, τῶν τὰ δῶρα κομιζόντων Μάγων· Ἀρχαγγέλου ἀσπασμὸς πρὸς παρθένον·

VI. Quomodo autem non est Deus ille; qui mortuos resuscitavit, claudos sanavit, leprosos mundavit, cæcos illuminavit, de quinque panibus et duobus piscibus tot millia hominum saturavit, aquam in vinum convertit; tumumque exercitum verbo tantum fugavit? Quid ergo pessimas naturam Virginis, et membra turpia vocas? hæc olim præsemnans, et nudari jubens masculos in facie fæminarum, fæminas vero in illicitum desiderium masculorum. Nunc omnia tibi turpia videntur; et pudicum teipsum facis, cum tu sis fornicationis spiritus. Ignoras quia tunc fit aliquid turpe, quando illicite perficitur? Cæterum nihil turpe est, quod sine peccato geritur, nihil pravum: sed omnia bona valde: et tu, non videns, pessimas ea?

VII. Quomodo rursus non tibi videtur esse Christus ex virgine; sed ille qui est super omnia Deus, ille scilicet omnia potens? Quis ergo est, qui hunc misit, dicito; quisve, qui huic dominatur; vel cujus sententiæ subjectus fuit, aut cujus legem adimplevit? Tu qui, nullius sententiam vel potestatem habens, Christum separas a generatione; et Legislatorem ingenitum esse pronuncias, et cruci affixum illum qui est sine principio. Cujus ergo permissu hoc factum est, non habeo dicere. Non enim me latuisti tuo antiquo consilio; neque ignoro, quoniam curve et lubricè incedis. Tu autem ignoras, quis est qui natus est, qui omnia scire te fingis.

VIII. Multa enim te latent: virginitas scilicet Mariæ, gloriosus partus, de cujus corpore Deus processit; stella Orientis quæ apparuit munera ferentibus Magis; Archangeli salutatio ad Virginem

Θ'. Ταῦθ' ὁρῶν, ἰλιγγιάς· καὶ ὅτι παρθένος ἢ τεκοῦσα, ἠγνόεις· ἀλλ' ἐξέπληττέ σε ἢ τῶν ἀγγέλων ὕμνολογία, ἢ τῶν μάγων προσκύνησις, ἢ τοῦ ἀστέρος ἐπιτολή. Εἰς ἄγνοϊαν σὺ παλινδρομεῖς, διὰ τὰ εὐτελῆ· μικρὰ γάρ σοι δοκεῖ σπάργανα, πάθη, περιτομή, γαλακτοτροφία· ἀνάξιά σοι ταῦτα κατὰ Θεοῦ κατεφαίνετο. Πάλιν εἶδες ἄνθρωπον, τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρας καὶ νύκτας ἄγευστον μείναντα τροφῆς ἀνθρωπίνης, ἀγγέλους διακονούντας, οὓς καὶ ἔφριπτες, ἰδὼν πρῶτον, ὡς κοινὸν ἄνθρωπον, βαπτιζόμενον, καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ἀγνοῶν· μετὰ δὲ τὴν νηστείαν πεινῶντι κατεθάρσεις πάλιν, facta; Virginis gloriosa conceptio, et desponsatae puellae praedictio, et in utero Virginis gestientis infantis praevision; Angelorum hymnus gloriam agentium, et pastorum annuntiatio; Herodis timor in extollentia regni, praecipio ad parvulorum necem; in Aegyptum transmigratio, atque exinde reversio; cunabula infantilia; descriptio humana; lactis nutritio; nomen patris non seminantis; praesepe ubi positus est, eo quod non fuerat locus; nulla humana praeparatio; proventus aetatis; crementum corporis; humana loquela: sed et quod esuriit, sitivit, iter ambulavit, laboravit; sacrificiorum oblatio, circumcisio; baptismum, vox Dei desuper ad baptizatum, quid vel unde fuerit testificatio Spiritus et Dei vox; Johannis prophetia significans passionem per agni appellationem; diversorum signorum operatio, variae curationes; imperium Domini, quo mari imperavit, et ventos sedavit, et spiritus iniquos fugavit; teipsum torquens, et de manifestatione virtutis suae affligens.

IX. Haec omnia videns, non habes quid facias, nisi tenebrosas vertigines. Et quia virgo peperit, ignoras: sed confundit te Angelorum laudatio, Magorum adoratio, stellae apparitio. Ignorantiam igitur olim incurristi per contumaciam. Parva tibi videntur cunabula, passiones, circumcisio, lactis nutritio. Indigna tibi haec Deo esse videntur. Iterumne vidisti hominem quadraginta diebus, et quadraginta noctibus ingustabilem existentem cibo humano, et Angelos ei ministrantes, quos et tu timebas? videns primo, quasi communem hominem, baptizatum, et causam ignorans. Post jejunium vero esurienti καὶ ἐπειράζεις ὡς κοινὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἀγνοῶν ὅστις εἶη· ἔλεγες γὰρ, Εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, εἶπὲ ἵνα οἱ λίθοι οὗτοι ἄρτοι γένωνται· τὸ γὰρ, Εἰ υἱὸς εἶ, ἀγνοίας ἐστίν· εἰ γὰρ ὄντως ἐγίνωσκες, ἠπίστω ὅτι δημιουργῶ καὶ τὸ μὴ ὄν ποιῆσαι, καὶ τὸ ὄν μεταβαλεῖν, ἐπ' ἴσης δυνατόν. Καὶ διὰ γαστρὸς πειράζεις τὸν τρέφοντα πάντας τοὺς τροφῆς δεομένους· καὶ πειράζεις τὸν τῆς δόξης Κύριον, ἐπιλαθόμενος ἐκ κακονοίας, ὅτι οὐκ ἐπ' ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ παντὶ ῥήματι ἐκπορευομένῳ διὰ στόματος Θεοῦ. Εἰ γὰρ ἐγίνωσκες ὅτι υἱὸς Θεοῦ ἦν, ἐγίνωσκες ὅτι ὁ ἐν τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέραις καὶ ἰσαρίθμοις νυξίν ἀνενδεὲς ποιήσας τὸ σῶμα, καὶ εἰς τὸ διηνεκὲς ἐδύνατο τοῦτο ποιῆσαι. Διὰ τί οὖν πεινᾷ; ἵνα δείξῃ, ὅτι κατ' ἀλήθειαν ἀνέλαβε σῶμα ὁμοιοπαθὲς ἀνθρώποις· διὰ μὲν τοῦ πρώτου, ἔδειξεν ὅτι Θεός· διὰ δὲ τοῦ δευτέρου, ὅτι καὶ ἄνθρωπος.

Γ'. Σὺ οὖν ὁ ἐκπεσὼν ἐκ τῆς ὑψηλοτάτης δόξης, ὡς ἀστραπή, τολμᾶς λέγειν τῷ Κυρίῳ· Βάλε σεαυτὸν ἐντεῦθεν κάτω· ὧ τὰ ἐνόντα λελόγισται ὡς μὴ ὄντα· καὶ εἰς κενοδοξίαν προκαλέσαι τὸν οὐκ ἐπιδεικτιῶντα; καὶ προσποιῆ τὴν γραφὴν ἀναγινώσκειν περὶ αὐτοῦ· Ὅτι τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ ἐντελεῖται περὶ σοῦ, καὶ ἐπὶ χειρῶν ἀρουσί σε, τοῦ μὴ προσκόψαι πρὸς λίθον τὸν πόδα σου; Καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ προσποιῆ ἀγνοεῖν, κλέπτων ἅ περὶ σοῦ καὶ τῶν σῶν προπόλων προεφήτευσεν· Ἐπὶ ἀσπίδα καὶ βασιλίσκον ἐπιβήσῃ, καὶ καταπατήσεις λέοντα καὶ δράκοντα.

ΙΑ'. Εἰ τοίνυν σὺ πάτημα τῶν ποδῶν τοῦ Κυρίου, πῶς πειράζεις τὸν ἀπειραστον, ἐπιλαθόμενος τοῦ νομοθέτου παρακελευομένου· Ὅτι οὐκ ἐκπειράσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου; Ἀλλὰ καὶ τολμᾶς, ἐναγέστατε, τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔργα οἰκειοῦσθαι, καὶ σοὶ παραδεδόσθαι λέγειν τὴν τούτων insidiabaris; et tentabas quasi communem hominem; ignorans quis esset: dicebas enim, si Filius Dei es. Ignorantiæ id est. Nam si vere cognosceres; scires sine dubio, quia quæ impossibilia videntur ad faciendum, et difficilia ad convertendum, factori omnia possible sunt. Et propter ventrem tentas eum qui pascit omnes esca indigentes: et audes tentare Dominum gloriæ, oblitus per tuam malitiam, quia non in pane solo vivit homo, sed in omni verbo quod procedit ex ore Dei. Si scires quia Filius Dei erat; cognosceres utique, quia in quadraginta diebus, et quadraginta noctibus, inindigens faciens corruptibile corpus, et in continuatione hoc facere poterat. Sed idcirco esuriit, ut ostenderet quia vere suscepit corpus passibile, simile hominibus. Propterea et primo ostendit, quia Deus erat; et in secundo, quia homo fuit.

X. Tu ergo, qui tanquam fulgur de sublimi gloria cecidisti, audes dicere Domino; Mitte te hinc deorsum; cui ea quæ sunt æstimantur quasi quæ non sint; et ad inanem gloriam provocas eum, qui non extollitur? Et fingis te Scripturas de eo legere, dicens: Scriptum est enim, quoniam Angelis suis mandavit de te, ut in manibus tollant te, ne quando offendas ad lapidem pedem tuum? Et fingis te sequentia ignorare; furans ea quæ de te ac tuis ministris prophetavit, dicens: Super aspidem et basiliscum ambulabis, et conculcabis leonem et draconem?

XI. Si ergo conculcatio es pedum Domini; quomodo tentas intentabilem; immemor legislatoris, qui dixit: Non tentabis Dominum Deum tuum? Et audes, impudentissime, opera Dei assumere, et dicere; quia tibi traditus

ΙΓ'. Ταῦτα, ἀδελφοὶ, ἀπὸ διαθέσεως τῆς πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἠναγκάσθην ἐπιστεῖλαι, εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ παραινῶν, οὐχ ὡς ὢν τι, ἀλλ' ὡς ἀδελφός. Ὑποτάσσεσθε τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις, τοῖς διακόνοις. Ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους ἐν Κυρίῳ, ὡς Θεοῦ ἀγάλαματα. Ὁρᾶτε οἱ ἄνδρες, ὡς ἴδια μέλη τὰς γαμετὰς στέργετε· αἱ γυναῖκες, ὡς ἐν οὔσαι τῇ συναφείᾳ, στέργετε τοὺς ἑαυτῶν ἄνδρας. Εἴ τις ἀγνεύει ἢ ἐγκρατεύεται, μὴ ἐπαιρέσθω, ἵνα μὴ ἀπολέσῃ τὸν μισθόν. Τὰς ἐορτὰς μὴ ἀτιμάζετε· τὴν τεσσαρακοστὴν μὴ ἐξουθενεῖτε· μίμησιν γὰρ περιέχει τῆς τοῦ Κυρίου πολιτείας· μετὰ τὴν τοῦ πάθους ἑβδομάδα μὴ παρορᾶτε τετράδα καὶ παρασκευὴν, νηστεύοντες, πένησιν ἐπιχορηγοῦντες τὴν περισσεΐαν. Εἴ τις κυριακὴν ἢ σάββατον νηστεύει, πλὴν ἐνὸς σαββάτου τοῦ Πάσχα, οὗτος χριστοκτόνος ἐστίν.

ΙΔ'. Αἱ προσευχαὶ ὑμῶν ἐκταθείσαν εἰς τὴν Ἀντιοχείας ἐκκλησίαν, ὅθεν καὶ δέσμιος ἀπάγομαι εἰς Ῥώμην. Ἀσπάζομαι τὸν ἅγιον ἐπίσκοπον Πολύκαρπον· ἀσπάζομαι τὸν ἅγιον ἐπίσκοπον Βιτάλιον, καὶ τὸ ἱερόν πρεσβυτέριον, καὶ τοὺς συνδούλους μου τοὺς διακόνους· ὧν ἐγὼ ἀντίψυχος γενοίμην. a quo tu apostata factus es. Non enim sum antitheus, hoc est, contrarius Deo, sed confiteor eminentiam: et non recuso adorare eum, quem novi nativitatis meae auctorem et dominum, atque meae perseverantiae custodem. Ego enim, inquit, vivo propter Patrem. Joh. vi.

XIII. Haec autem, fratres, per dispositionem Dei coactus sum mittere ad vos: monens vos ad gloriam Dei, non quasi extraneus, sed sicut frater. Subjecti estote Episcopo et Presbyteris et Diaconis. Diligite invicem in Domino, sicut Dei simulachra. Videte ergo viri; diligite uxores vestras sicut propria membra. Mulieres vero, sicut unitatis tactu vestros viros amate. Qui castus est, vel continens, non extollatur; ne perdat mercedem suam. Dies festos nolite dehonore. Quadragesimam vero nolite pro nihilo habere: imitationem enim continet Domini conversationis. Hebdomadam etiam passionis nolite despiciere. Quarta feria et sexta jejunate: pauperibus reliquias porrigentes. Quicumque Dominicam aut Sabbatum jejunaverit, praeter unum Sabbatum Paschae, ipse est Christi interfector.

XIV. Orationes vestrae protendantur ad Ecclesiam Antiochiae: unde et vinctus ducor ad Romam. Saluto sanctum Episcopum Polycarpum. Saluto sanctum Episcopum Vitalem, et sacrosanctum Presbyterium, et conservos meos Diaconos: pro quorum animabus ego efficiar. Adhuc dico Episcopis et Presbyteris in Domino: Quicumque cum Judaeis Pascha egerit, aut solennia dierum festorum eorum susceperit; communis est eis, qui Dominum et Apostolos ejus occiderunt.

ΙΕ'. Ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς Φίλων καὶ Ἀγαθόπου οἱ διάκονοι. Ἀσπάζομαι τὸ σύστημα τῶν παρθένων, τὸ τάγμα τῶν χηρῶν ὧν καὶ ὀναίμην. Ἀσπάζομαι τὸν λαὸν Κυρίου, ἀπὸ μικροῦ ἕως μεγάλου. Ἀπέστειλα ὑμῖν ταῦτά μου τὰ γράμματα διὰ Εὐφανίου τοῦ ἀναγνώστου, ἀνδρὸς θεοτιμήτου καὶ πιστοτάτου, συντυχῶν περὶ Ῥηγειόνα, ἀναγομένου ἐν πλοίῳ. Μίμνησθί μου τῶν δεσμῶν, ἵνα τελειωθῶ ἐν Χριστῷ. Ἐβρώσθη σαρκί, ψυχῇ, πνεύματι, τέλεια φρονούντες, ἀποστρεφόμενοι τοὺς ἐργάτας τῆς ἀνομίας, καὶ τοῦ λόγου τῆς ἀληθείας φθορεῖς, ἐνδυναμούμενοι ἐν τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

XV. Salutant vos Philon et Agathopus diaconi. Saluto congregationem virginum; legionem viduarum, a quibus et adjunctus sum. Saluto populum Domini, a minimo usque ad maximum. Transmisi vobis hæc mea scripta per Euphanium lectorem, virum Deo honorabilem et fidelissimum: qui mihi occurrit in regionem jam navem ascensuro. Memento vinculorum meorum; ut consummer in Christo. Incolumes estote carne, et anima, et spiritu; perfecta sentientes, devitantes operarios iniquitatis et corruptores verbi veritatis, confortati in gratia Domini nostri Jesu Christi.

APOSTOLUM ET EVANGELISTAM, EPISTOLA.

Johanni Sancto Seniori, Ignatius, et qui cum eo sunt Fratres.

DE tua mora dolemus graviter, allocutionibus et consolationibus tuis roborandi. Si tua absentia protendatur; multos de nostris destituet. Properes igitur venire: quia credimus expedire. Sunt et hic multæ de nostris mulieribus, Mariam Jesu videre cupientes, et quotidie a nobis ad vos discurrere volentes; ut eam contingant, et ubera ejus tractent, quæ Dominum Jesum aluerunt, et quædam secretiora ejus percunctentur ipsam. Sed et Salome quam diligis, filia Annæ, Hierosolymis quinque mensibus apud eam commorans, et quidam alii noti referunt eam omnium gratiarum abundam, et omnium virtutum, more virginis, virtutis et gratiæ fœcundam. Et, ut dicunt, in persecutionibus et afflictionibus est hilaris; in penuriis et indigentis non querula: injuriantibus grata, ad molesta lætatur: miseris et afflictis coafflicta condolet, et subvenire non pigrescit. Contra vitiorum autem pestiferos conflictus in pugna fidei disceptans enitescit. Nostræ novæ religionis, et pœnitentiæ est magistra; et apud fideles omnium operum pietatis ministra. Humilibus quidem est devota, et devotis devotius humiliatur: et mirum ab omnibus magnificatur; cum a Scribis et Pharisæis ei detrahatur. Præterea multi multa alia referunt de eadem: tamen omnibus per omnia non audemus fidem concedere, nec tibi referre. Sed, sicut nobis a fide dignis narratur, in Maria matre Jesu, humanæ naturæ natura sanctitatis angelicæ sociatur. Et hæc talia excitaverunt viscera nostra: et cogunt valde desiderare adspectum hujus (si fas sit fari) cœlestis prodigii, et sacratissimi monstri. Tu autem diligenti modo disponas, cum desiderio nostro, et valeas. Amen.

AD EUNDEM, ALTERA.

Johanni Sancto Seniori, suus Ignatius.

Si licitum est mihi apud te, ad Hierosolymæ partes volo adscendere, et videre fideles Sanctos, qui ibi sunt: præcipue Mariam matrem Jesu: quam dicunt universis admirandam, et cunctis desiderabilem. Quem enim non delectet videre eam et alloqui, quæ verum Deum de se peperit, si nostræ sit fidei et religionis amicus? Similiter et illum venerabilem Jacobum, qui cognominatur Justus: quem referunt Christo Jesu simillimum facie, vita et modo conversationis, ac si ejusdem uteri frater esset gemellus. Quem dicunt si videro, video et ipsum Jesum secundum omnia corporis ejus lineamenta. Præterea cæteros sanctos, et sanctas. Heu, quid moror? quid detineor? Bone præceptor, properare me jubeas, et valeas. Amen.

B. IGNATII AD S. MARIAM

VIRGINEM, MATREM DOMINI NOSTRI JESU CHRISTI, EPISTOLA.

Christiferæ Mariæ, suus Ignatius.

ME neophytum, Johannisque tui discipulum, confortare et consolari debueras. De Jesu enim tuo percepi mira dictu, et stupefactus sum ex auditu. A te autem, quæ semper ei fuisti familiaris et conjuncta, et secretorum ejus conscia, desidero ex animo fieri certior de auditis. Scripsi tibi etiam alias, et rogavi de eisdem. Valeas: et neophyti qui mecum sunt, ex te, et per te, et in te, confortentur. Amen.

Scripsistis mihi et vos et Ignatius, ut si quis vadit ad Syriam, deferat literas meas, quas fecero ad vos; si habuerimus tempus opportunum, sive ego, seu legatus, quem misero pro vobis. Epistolas sane Ignatii, quæ transmissæ sunt vobis ab eo, et alias, quantascunque apud nos habuimus, transmisimus vobis secundum quod mandastis; quæ sunt subjectæ huic Epistolæ: ex quibus magnus vobis erit profectus. Quum esset desponsata mater ejus Maria Joseph. Quare non ex simplici virgine, sed ex desponsata concipitur Christus? Primo, ut per generationem Joseph origo Mariæ monstraretur; secundo, ne lapidaretur a Judæis ut adultera: tertio, ut in Ægyptum fugiens haberet solatium viri: quarto, ut partus ejus falleret diabolum, putantem Jesum de uxorata, non de virgine natum.—*Epist. Sed ego nequitiis eorum magis erudior, Nec tamen in hoc justificatus sum. O salutare bestias quae praeparantur mihi. Quando venient? Quando emittentur? quando eis frui licebit carnibus meis? quas et ego opto acriores parari, et invitabo ad devorationem mei, et deprecabor ne forte, ut in nonnullis fecerunt, timeant contingere corpus meum. Quod faciam, cum tempus invenero. Mittam vobis et Ignatii epistolas, et alias, si quæ sunt, quæ ad nos transmissæ sunt, ex quibus utilitatem maximam capiatis. Continent enim

Ignatius, Antiochenæ Ecclesiæ tertius post Petrum Apostolum Episcopus, persecutionem commovente Trajano, damnatus ad bestias, Romam vincetus mittitur. Quumque navigans Smyrnam venisset, ubi Polycarpus, auditor

Versio Sophronii.

Ἰγνάτιος τῆς ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἐκκλησίας τρίτος μετὰ Πέτρον τὸν ἀποστόλον ἐπίσκοπος, διωγμὸν κινήσαντος Τραϊανοῦ, θηριομαχῆσαι κελευσθεὶς, εἰς Ῥώμην στέλλεται δέσμιος. Πλέων δὲ, καὶ ἐπιστὰς τῇ Σμύρνῃ, ἐν ἣ Πολύκαρπος, ἀκροατῆς

Johannis, Episcopus erat; scripsit unam Epistolam ad Ephesios, alteram ad Magnesianos, tertiam ad Trallenses, quartam ad Romanos: et inde egrediens scripsit ad Philadelphæos, et ad Smyrnæos, et proprie ad Polycarpum, commendans illi Antiochensem Ecclesiam: in qua et de Evangelio, quod nuper a me translatum est, super persona Christi ponit testimonium, dicens: "Ego vero et post resurrectionem in carne eum vidi, et credo quia sit. Et quando venit ad Petrum, et ad eos qui cum Petro erant, dixit eis: Ecce, palpate me et videte, quia non sum Dæmonium incorporale. Et statim tetigerunt eum, et crediderunt." Dignum autem videtur, quia tanti viri fecimus mentionem, et de Epistola ejus, quam ad Romanos scribit, pauca ponere: "De Syria usque ad Romam pugno ad bestias, in mari et in terra, nocte dieque, ligatus cum decem leopardis, hoc est, militibus qui me custodiunt; quibus et cum benefeceris, pejores fiunt. Iniquitas autem eorum mea doctrina est; sed non idcirco justificatus sum. Utinam fruam bestiis, quæ mihi sunt præparatæ; quas et oro mihi veloces esse ad interitum, et alliciam eas ad comedendum me; ne sicut et aliorum martyrum, non audeant corpus meum attingere. Quod si venire noluerint, ego vim faciam, ut devorer. Ignoscite mihi, filiioli: quid mihi prosit, ego scio. Nunc incipio Christi esse discipulus, nihil de his quæ videntur desiderans, ut Jesum Christum inveniam. Ignis, crux, bestia, confractio ossium, membrorumque divisio, et totius corporis contritio, et tota tormenta Diaboli in me veniant; tantum ut Christo fruam." Quumque jam damnatus

Ἰωάννου, ἐπίσκοπος ἦν, ἔγραψε πρὸς Ἐφεσίους ἐπιστολὴν μίαν, ἄλλην πρὸς Μαγνησιάνους, τρίτην πρὸς Τραλλιάνους, τετάρτην πρὸς Ῥωμαίους. Καὶ κεῖθεν ἐξῴων, ἔγραψε Φιλαδελφεῦσι, καὶ Σμυρναίοις, καὶ ἰδικῶς πρὸς Πολύκαρπον, παρατιθέμενος αὐτῷ τὴν ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἐκκλησίαν· ἐν ἣ καὶ περὶ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τοῦ πρώην μεταφρασθέντος, ἐκ προσώπου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μνήμην ποιεῖται, λέγων· "Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἐν σώματι αὐτὸν εἶδον, καὶ πιστεύω ὅτι ἐστὶ, καὶ ὅτε ἦλθεν πρὸς Πέτρον, καὶ τοὺς σὺν αὐτῷ ὄντας, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· Ψηλαφήσατέ με, ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ δαιμόνιον σωματικόν. Καὶ εὐθέως ἤψαντες αὐτοῦ, ἐπίστευσαν." Ἀξίον δὲ φαίνεται, ἐπεὶ περ τοιοῦτου ἀνδρὸς πεποιήμεθα μνήμην, ἐκ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς αὐτοῦ τῆς πρὸς Ῥωμαίους γραφείσης, ὀλίγα ἐκθέσθαι· "Ἀπὸ Συρίας ἄχρι Ῥώμης θηριομαχῶ ἐν θαλάσῃ καὶ ἐν γῇ, νυκτος καὶ ἡμέρας, δέκα συνδεδεμένος λεοπάρδοις, τουτέστι, στρατιώταις τοῖς φυλάσσουσί με, οἵτινες καὶ μετὰ εὐεργεσίαν χεῖρονες γίνονται. Αἱ γὰρ ἀνομίαι αὐτῶν, παιδεύσις μοί ἐστι, ἀλλ' οὐ διὰ τοῦτο ἐδικαιώθην. Καὶ εἴθε ἀπολαύσω τῶν θηρίων τῶν εὐτρεπισθόντων μοι, ἅτινα εὐχομαι ὀξύτατα εἶναι μοι εἰς ἀπώλειαν, καὶ ἐνδεδελχίζειν εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν κατάβρωσιν· μήπως, ὄν τρόπον ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων μαρτύρων, μὴ τολμήσωσι τοῦ σώματός μου ἄψασθαι. Εἰ γὰρ ἐπελθεῖν μὴ θελήσουσιν, ἐγὼ βιάσομαι, ποθὼν καταβρωθῆναι. Σύγνωτέ μοι, τεκνία· τὸ συμφέρον μοι ἐγὼ οἶδα. Νῦν ἄρχομαι εἶναι μαθητῆς, οὐδὲν τούτων τῶν ὀρωμένων ἐπιθυμῶ, ἵνα τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν εὕρω. Πῦρ, σταυρὸς, θηρία, σύγκλασις ὀστέων, καὶ τῶν μελῶν διασπασμὸς, καὶ παντὸς τοῦ σώματος συντριβή, καὶ βάσανοι τοῦ διαβόλου, εἰς ἐμὲ ἔλθωσιν, ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀπολαύσω. Κατακριθεῖς

τοίνυν θηριομαχῆσαι, καὶ πόθῳ τοῦ παθεῖν, ἀκούσας τοῦ βρυγμοῦ τῶν λεόντων, ἔφη· "Σίτος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰμι, καὶ εὐχομαι τοῖς ὀδῶσι τῶν θηρίων ἀλεσθῆναι, ἵνα ἄρτος καθαρὸς εἰρηθῶ." Ἐπαθε δεκάτω ἔτει Τραϊανοῦ. Τὸ δὲ λείψανον ἔξω τῆς δαφνιτικῆς πύλης Ἀντιοχείας κατὰκεῖται ἐν τῷ κοιμητηρίῳ.

Namquid non possum tibi totam veterum Scriptorum seriem commovere: Ignatium, Polycarpum, Irenaeum, Justinum Martyrem, multosque alios apostolicos et eloquentes viros, qui adversus Ebionem et Theodotum, Byzantium, Valentinum, haec eadem sentientes, plena sapientiae volumina conscripserunt?

COMMENTARIUS IN MATTHEUM. Ibid. Vol. VII. p. 12. C.

ADVERSUS PELAGIANOS, Lib. iii. c. i. Ibid. Vol. II. p. 769. A.

HOMILIA IN S. IGNATIUM MARTYRUM. Opera. Edit. Benedict. 13 Voll. fol. Paris, 1718—38. Vol. II. p. 592.

Πρώην γοῦν ἡμᾶς κόρη κομιδῆ νεά καὶ ἀπειρόγαμος ἡ μακαρία μάρτυς Πελαγία μετὰ πολλῆς τῆς εὐφροσύνης εἰστίασε· σήμερον πάλιν τὴν ἐκείνης εὐορτίην ὁ μακάριος οὗτος καὶ γενναῖος μάρτυς Ἰγνατίος διεδέξατο. Διάφορα τὰ πρόσωπα, ἀλλὰ μία ἡ τράπεζα· ἐνηλλαγμένα τὰ παλαίσματα, ἀλλ' εἰς ὁ στέφανος· ποικίλα τὰ ἀγωνίσματα, ἀλλὰ τὸ αὐτὸ βραβεῖον. —

Ὁ μὲν οὖν καιρὸς ἡμᾶς ἤδη πρὸς τὴν διήγησιν τῶν τοῦ μακαρίου τούτου κατορθωμάτων καλεῖ· ὁ λογισμὸς δὲ ταραττεται καὶ θορυβεῖται, οὐκ ἔχων τί πρῶτον, τί δεύτερον εἰπεῖν, τί τρίτον· τοσοῦτον περιρρέει πάντοθεν ἡμᾶς ἐγκωμίων πλήθος· καὶ ταῦτόν πάσχομεν, οἷον ἂν εἴ τις εἰς λειμῶνα εἰσελθὼν, καὶ πολλὴν μὲν τὴν ῥοδωνιᾶν ἰδὼν, πολὺ δὲ τὸ ἴον, καὶ τὸ κρίνον τοσοῦτον, καὶ ἕτερα δὲ ἡρινὰ ἄνθη ποικίλα τε καὶ διάφορα, ἀπορήσειε τί πρῶτον ἰδῆ, τί δεύτερον, ἐκάστου τῶν ὀρωμένων πρὸς ἑαυτὸ καλοῦντος τὰς ὄψεις. Καὶ γὰρ καὶ ἡμεῖς εἰς τὸν πνευματικὸν τοῦτον λειμῶνα τῶν Ἰγνατίου κατορθωμάτων εἰσελθόντες, καὶ οὐχὶ ἄνθη ἡρινὰ, ἀλλ' αὐτὸν τοῦ πνεύματος τὸν καρπὸν ποικίλον τε καὶ διάφορον ἐν τῇ τούτου ψυχῇ θεούμενοι θορυβοῦμεθα, καὶ διαποροῦμεν, οὐκ ἔχοντες πού πρῶτον τὸν λογισμὸν ἀπερείσομεν, ἐκάστου τῶν ὀρωμένων ἀπὸ τῶν πλησίον ἀνθέλκοντος, καὶ πρὸς τὴν τῆς οἰκείας εὐπρεπείας θεωρίαν ἐπισπώμενου τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ὄψιν. Σκοπεῖτε γάρ· προέστη τῆς παρ' ἡμῖν ἐκκλησίας γενναίως, καὶ μετὰ τῆς αὐτῆς ἀκριβείας, μεθ' ὅσης ὁ Χριστὸς βούλεται· ὃν γὰρ μέγιστον ὄρον καὶ κανόνα τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἔφησεν εἶναι ἐκεῖνος, τοῦτον οὗτος διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἐπεδείξατο. Καὶ γὰρ τοῦ Χριστοῦ λέγοντος ἀκούσας, ὅτι Ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων, μετὰ πάσης ἀνδρείας αὐτὴν ἐπέδωκεν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων. Συνεγένετο τοῖς ἀποστόλοις γνησίως, καὶ τῶν πνευματικῶν ναμάτων ἀπήλασεν. Ὅποῖον οὖν εἶναι εἰκὸς τὸν συντραφέντα ἐκείνοις, καὶ πανταχοῦ συγγενόμενον, καὶ ῥητῶν καὶ ἀπορρήτων αὐτοῖς κοινωθήσαντα, καὶ τῆς αὐτῆς εἶναι δόξαντα αὐτοῖς ἀρχῆς ἄξιον; Ἐπέστη πάλιν καιρὸς ἀνδρείαν ἐπιζητῶν, καὶ ψυχὴν τῶν παρόντων ὑπερορῶσαν ἀπάντων, καὶ τῷ Θεῷ ζέουσιν ἔρωτι, καὶ τὰ μὴ βλεπόμενα τῶν ὀρωμένων προτιμῶσαν· καὶ μετὰ τῆς αὐτῆς εὐκολίας τὴν σάρκα ἀπέθετο, μεθ' ὅσης ἂν τις ἰμάτιον ἀποδύσαιτο. Τί οὖν πρότερον εἶπομεν; τῶν ἀποστόλων τὴν διδασκαλίαν, ἣν ἐπεδείξατο διὰ πάντων; ἢ τῆς παρουσίας ζωῆς τὴν ὑπεροψίαν; ἢ τὴν ἀκρίβειαν τῆς ἀρετῆς, μεθ' ἧς τὴν προστασίαν τῆς ἐκκλησίας ὠκονόμησε; τίνα πρότερον ἀνυμνήσομεν; τὸν μάρτυρα, ἢ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, ἢ τὸν ἀπόστολον; τριπλοῦν γὰρ στέφανον ἢ τοῦ πνεύματος πλέξασα χάρις, οὕτω τὴν ἀγίαν ἐκείνην ἀνέδησε κεφαλὴν, μᾶλλον δὲ πολλαπλοῦν τῶν γὰρ στεφάνων ἕκαστον εἴ τις αὐτοὺς μετὰ ἀκριβείας ἀναπτύξειεν, εὐρήσει καὶ ἑτέρους ἡμῖν βλαστάνοντας στεφάνους.

Καὶ εἰ βούλεσθε, πρότερον ἐπὶ τὸν τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἔπαινον ἔλθωμεν· οὐ δοκεῖ εἰς οὗτος εἶναι στέφανος μόνος; φέρε οὖν αὐτὸν ἀναπτύξωμεν τῷ λόγῳ, καὶ ὄψεσθε καὶ δύο, καὶ τρεῖς, καὶ πλείους ἐξ αὐτοῦ τικτομένους ἡμῖν. Οὐ γὰρ μόνον, ὅτι τῆς αὐτῆς ἀρχῆς ἄξιός ἐστιν ἔδοξε, θαυμάζω τὸν ἄνδρα ἐγὼ, ἀλλ' ὅτι καὶ παρὰ τῶν ἀγίων ἐκείνων τὴν ἀρχὴν ταύτην ἐνεχειρίσθη, καὶ αἱ τῶν μακαρίων ἀποστόλων χεῖρες τῆς ἱεράς ἐκείνης ἤψαντο κεφαλῆς. Οὐδὲ γὰρ μικρὸν τοῦτο εἰς ἐγκωμίου λόγον· οὐκ ἐπειδὴ πλείω τὴν ἄνωθεν ἐπεσπάσατο χάριν, οὐδ' ὅτι θαυμάσιον ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἐποίησαν ἐλθεῖν τὴν τοῦ πνεύματος ἐνέργειαν μόνον, ἀλλ' ὅτι καὶ πᾶσαν αὐτῷ τὴν ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἐμαρτύρησαν ἀρετὴν. ———. Θαυμάσιον τοῖνυν εἶποιμι ἂν, ὅτι πᾶσαν αὐτὴν μετὰ ἀκριβείας ὁ μακάριος Ἰγνατίος ἀπεμάξατο ἐν τῇ αὐτοῦ ψυχῇ· καὶ ἀνεπίλητος ἦν, καὶ ἀνεγκλητος, καὶ οὔτε αὐθάδης, οὔτε ὀργίλος, οὔτε πάροινος, οὔτε πλήκτης, ἀλλ' ἄμαχος, ἀφιλάργυρος, δίκαιος, ὀσιος, ἐγκρατῆς, ἀντεχόμενος τοῦ κατὰ τὴν διδασκαλίαν πιστοῦ λόγου· νηφάλιος, σώφρων, κόσμιος, καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ἅπερ ὁ Παῦλος ἀπήτησε. Καὶ τίς τούτων ἀπόδειξις, φησιν; αὐτοὶ οἱ ταῦτα εἰρηκότες αὐτὸν ἐχειροτόνησαν· καὶ οὐκ ἂν οἱ μετὰ τῆς αὐτῆς ἀκριβείας παραινούντες ἑτέροις τὴν δοκιμασίαν ποιείσθαι τῶν μελλόντων ἐπὶ τὸν θρόνον τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀναβαίνειν ταύτης, αὐτοὶ παρέργως τοῦτο ἐποίησαν ἂν. Ἄλλ' εἰ μὴ πᾶσαν εἶδον τὴν ἀρετὴν ταύτην ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ τοῦ μάρτυρος τούτου πεφυτευμένην, οὐκ ἂν αὐτῷ ταύτην ἐνεχειρίσαν τὴν ἀρχὴν. ———. Εἶδες πῶς διπλοῦς ἡμῖν ὁ στέφανος ἐφάνη τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς τέως, καὶ λαμπροτέρα ἐποίησε τὴν ἀρχὴν τὸ τῶν χειροτονησάντων αὐτὸν ἀξίωμα, πᾶσαν ἀπόδειξιν ἀρετῆς αὐτῷ μαρτυρήσαν; ———.

αὐτῶν τῶν ἔιδον ἐπιβατῶν στασιαζόντων, πολλοῦ χειμῶνος ἴσωθεν ἔξωθεν τοὺς ἐμπλέοντας πολιορκούντος, δυναθῆ καταυθῆναι τὸ σκάφος μετὰ ἀσφαλείας ἀπάσης· οὕτω καὶ τοὺς τότε τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἐγχειρισθέντας ἐκπλήττεσθαι χρὴ καὶ θανατῶσαι πολλῶ πλείον τῶν ἰὺν οἰκονομούντων αὐτὴν, ὅτε πολὺς ὁ πόλεμος ἔξωθεν ἴσωθεν· ὅτε ἀπαλώτερον ἔτι τὸ φυτὸν τῆς πίστεως ἦν καὶ πολλῆς δεόμενον ἐπιμελείας, ὅτε καθάπερ ἀρτίτοκον βρέφος, τὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας πλήθος πολλῆς ἔχρηξι τῆς προνοίας, καὶ σοφωτάτης τινὸς τῆς μελλούσης αὐτὸ τιθηνεῖσθαι ψυχῆς. ———.

Ἐἶπω καὶ τέταρτον στέφανον ἐκ τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἡμῖν ἀνίσχοντα ταύτης· τίς οὖν ἐστὶν οὗτος; τὸ τὴν πατρίδα αὐτὸν ἐπιτραπήναι τὴν ἡμετέραν. Ἐπίπονον μὲν γὰρ καὶ ἑκατὸν ἀνδρῶν καὶ πενήκοντα προστῆναι μόνον· τὸ δὲ πόλιν ἐγχειρισθῆναι τοσαύτην, καὶ δῆμον εἰς ἑκασι ἐκτιμώμενον μαριάδας, πόσης ἀρετῆς οἶοι καὶ σοφίας ἀπόδειξις εἶναι; ———. Ἐπιπῶ δὲ ἐμνήσθην Πέτρου, καὶ πέμπτον ἔξ αὐτοῦ στέφανον εἶδον πλεκόμενον οὗτος δὲ ἐστὶ, τὸ μετ' ἐκείνου τοῦτον διαδόξασθαι τὴν ἀρχήν. Ὡσπερ γὰρ ἂν τις λίθον ἐξαίρων μέγαν ἐκ θεμελίων, ἕτερον ἀντίρροπον ἐκείνου σπουδάζει πάντως ἀντισαγαγεῖν, εἰ μὴ μέλλοι πάσαν σαλεύειν τὴν οἰκοδομήν, καὶ σαθροτέραν ποιεῖν· οὕτω δὴ καὶ Πέτρου μέλλοντας ἐπιπῆν ἀποδημεῖν, ἕτερον ἀντίρροπον Πέτρου διδάσκαλον ἢ τοῦ πνεύματος ἀντισήγαγε χάρις, ὥστε μὴ τὴν ἤδη γενομένην οἰκοδομήν τῆ τοῦ διαδεξομένου εὐτελείᾳ σαθροτέραν γενέσθαι. Πέντε μὲν οὖν στεφάνου, ἀπηριθμησάμεθα, ἀπὸ τοῦ μεγέθους τῆς ἀρχῆς, ἀπὸ τῆς ἀξίας τῶν κεχειροτονηκότων, ἀπὸ τῆς τοῦ καιροῦ δυσκολίας, ἀπὸ τοῦ μέτρου τῆς πόλεως, ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρετῆς τοῦ παραδόντος αὐτῷ τὴν ἐπισκοπήν. Τούτους ἅπαντας πλέξαντας ἐῖην καὶ ἕκτον εἰπεῖν, καὶ ἔβδομον, καὶ πλείους τούτων· ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ τὸν ἅπαντα χρόνον εἰς τὸν περὶ τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἀναλώσαντες λόγον, ἐκπέσωμεν τῶν περὶ τοῦ μάρτυρος διηγημάτων, φέροι λοιπὸν ἐπὶ τὸν ἄθλον ἐκείνον ἴωμεν. ———.

Οὐ τοῦτο δὲ ἐκακούργησεν ὁ διάβολος μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἕτερον οὐκ ἔλαττον τούτου· οὐ γὰρ ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν, ὧν προειστήκεισαν, ἠφίει σφάττεσθαι τοῖς ἐπισκόποις, ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν ἀλλοτρίαν ἄγων ἀνίρει. Ἐποίει δὲ τοῦτο, ὁμοῦ μὲν ἐρήμους τῶν ἐπιτηδείων λαβεῖν σπεύδων, ὁμοῦ δὲ ἀσθενεστέρους ἐργάσεσθαι τῷ μόχθῳ τῆς ὁδοιπορίας ἐλπίζων· ὃ δὴ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ μακαρίου τούτου πεποιήκει· ἀπὸ γὰρ τῆς ἡμετέρας πόλεως εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην αὐτὸν ἐκάλεσε, μακροτέρους αὐτῷ τιθεὶς τοὺς διαύλους τοῦ δρόμου, καὶ τῷ μήκει τῆς ὁδοῦ, καὶ τῷ πλίθει τῶν ἡμερῶν τὸ φρόνημα καταβάλλειν αὐτοῦ προσδοκῶν· οὐκ εἰδὼς, ὅτι συνέμπορον ἔχων Ἰησοῦν, καὶ συναπόδημον τῆς τοσαύτης ὁδοιπορίας, ἰσχυρότερος μᾶλλον ἐγένετο, καὶ τῆς μετ' αὐτοῦ δυνάμει οὔσης πλείονα παρείχε τὴν ἀπόδειξιν, καὶ τὰς ἐκκλησίας συνεκρότει μειζόνως. Αἱ γὰρ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν πόλεις συντρέχουσαι πάντοθεν ἠλείφον τὸν ἀθλητὴν, καὶ μετὰ κολλῶν ἐξέπεμπον τῶν ἐφοδίων, εὐχαῖς καὶ πρεσβείαις αὐτῷ συναγωνιζόμεναι· καὶ αὐτὰ δὲ οὐ τὴν τυχούσαν παράκλησιν ἐλάμβανον μετὰ προθυμίας τοσαύτης ἐπὶ θάνατον τρέχοντα ὁρῶσαι τὸν μάρτυρα, μεθ' ὅσης εἰκὸς ἦν τὸν ἐπιβασιλεία καλούμενον τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ· καὶ διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἐμάνθανον αὐτῶν, διὰ τῆς τοῦ γενναίου προθυμίας ἐκείνου καὶ φαιδρότητος, ὅτι οὐ θάνατος ἦν ἐφ' ὃν ἔτρεχεν, ἀλλ' ἀποδημία τις καὶ μετὰστασις, καὶ πρὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνάβασις. Καὶ ταῦτα διδάσκων κατὰ πᾶσαν πόλιν ἀπῆει διὰ τῶν λόγων, διὰ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῶν. Καὶ ὅπερ ἐπὶ τῶν Ἰουδαίων συνέβη, ὅτε τὸν Παῦλον δῆσαντες, καὶ εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἀποστείλαντες ἐνόμιζον μὲν ἐπὶ θάνατον πέμπειν, ἔπεμπον δὲ τοῖς ἐκεῖ κατοικοῦσιν Ἰουδαίοις διδάσκαλον, τοῦτο δὴ καὶ ἐπὶ Ἰγνατίου γέγονε μετὰ περιουσίας τινός. Οὐδὲ γὰρ τοῖς τὴν Ῥώμην οἰκοῦσι μόνοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῖς ἐν τῷ μέσῳ κειμέναις πόλεσιν ἀπάσαις διδάσκαλος ἀπῆει θανμάσιος, πείθων καταφρονεῖν τῆς παρούσης ζωῆς, καὶ μηδὲν ἠγεῖσθαι τὰ βλεπόμενα, καὶ τῶν μελλόντων ἔραν, καὶ πρὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν βλέπειν, καὶ πρὸς μηδὲν τῶν ἐν τῷ παρόντι βίῳ δεινῶν ἐπιστρέφειν. Ταῦτα γὰρ, καὶ τὰ τούτων πλείονα, διὰ τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦς παιδεύων ᾧδενε, καθάπερ ἡλῖός τις ἐξ ἀνατολῆς ἀνίσχων, καὶ πρὸς τὴν δύσιν τρέχων, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ τούτου φαιδρότερος. Οὗτος μὲν γὰρ ἄνωθεν ἔτρεχεν, αἰσθητὸν ἄγων φῶς· Ἰγνάτιος δὲ κάτωθεν ἀντέλαμπε, νοητὸν φῶς διδασκαλίας ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἐνιείς. Κἀκεῖνος μὲν εἰς τὰ τῆς δύσεως ἀπιὼν μέρη κρύπτεται, καὶ νύκτα εὐθέως ἐπάγει· οὗτος δὲ εἰς τὰ τῆς δύσεως ἀπελθὼν μέρη, φαιδρότερον ἐκεῖθεν ἀνέτειλε· καὶ τοὺς κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἅπαντας εὐεργετήσας τὰ μέγιστα, ἐπειδὴ τῆς πόλεως ἐπέβη, κἀκεῖνην φιλοσοφεῖν ἐπαίδευσε. Διὰ γὰρ τοῦτο καὶ ὁ Θεὸς συνεχώρησεν ἐκεῖ τὸν βίον αὐτὸν καταλύσαι, ὥστε τὴν τούτου τελευτὴν διδασκάλιον γενέσθαι εὐσεβείας τοῖς τὴν Ῥώμην οἰκοῦσιν ἅπασιν. Ὑμεῖς μὲν γὰρ τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριτι οὐδεμιᾶς ἐδέεσθε λοιπὸν ἀποδείξεως, ἐρρίζωμένοι κατὰ τὴν πίστιν· οἱ δὲ τὴν Ῥώμην οἰκοῦντες, ἄτε πολλῆς τότε ἀσεβείας οὔσης ἐκεῖ, πλείονος ἔχρηζον βοηθείας._____.

Ἰν' οὖν ταῦτα ἔργῳ μάθωσιν οἱ τὴν Ῥώμην οἰκοῦντες ἅπαντες, συνεχώρησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐκεῖ τελειωθῆναι τὸν ἅγιον. Καὶ ὅτι αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ αἰτία, ἐξ αὐτοῦ τοῦ τρόπου τῆς τελευτῆς τοῦτο πιστώσομαι. Οὐ γὰρ ἔξω τειχῶν ἐν βαράθρῳ, οὐδὲ ἐν δικαστηρίῳ, οὐδὲ ἐν γωνίᾳ τινὶ τὴν καταδικάζουσαν ἐδέξατο ψῆφον, ἀλλ' ἐν μέσῳ τῷ θεάτρῳ, τῆς πόλεως ἄνω καθεζομένης ἀπάσης, τὸν τοῦ μαρτυρίου τρόπον ὑπέμεινε, θηρίων ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀφεθέντων· ἵν' ὑπὸ ταῖς ἀπάντων ὄψεσι τὸ τρόπαιον στήσας κατὰ τοῦ διαβόλου, τοὺς θεατὰς ἅπαντας ζηλωτὰς ποιήσῃ τῶν ἀγωνισμάτων τῶν ἑαυτοῦ, οὐκ ἀποθνήσκων μόνον οὕτω γενναίως, ἀλλὰ καὶ μεθ' ἡδονῆς ἀποθνήσκων. Οὐ γὰρ ὡς ζωῆς ἀπορρήγνυσθαι μέλλων, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐπὶ ζωὴν καλούμενος βελτίῳ καὶ πνευματικώτερον, οὕτως ἀσμένως ἑώρα τὰ θηρία. Πόθεν τοῦτο δῆλον; ἀπὸ τῶν ῥημάτων, ὧν ἀποθνήσκει μέλλων ἐφθέγγετο. ἀκούσας γὰρ, ὅτι οὗτος αὐτὸν τῆς τιμωρίας ὁ τρόπος μένει, “Ἐγὼ τῶν θηρίων ἐκείνων ὀναίμην,” ἔλεγε. Τοιοῦτοι γὰρ οἱ ἐρώντες· ὅπερ ἂν πάσχωσιν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἐρωμένων, μεθ' ἡδονῆς δέχονται, καὶ τότε δοκοῦσιν ἐμφορεῖσθαι τῆς ἐπιθυμίας, ὅταν πολλῶ χαλεπώτερα ἢ τὰ γινόμενα· ὅπερ οὖν καὶ ἐπὶ τούτου συνέβαινε. Οὐ γὰρ τῷ θανάτῳ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ προθυμίᾳ ζηλωσαὶ τοὺς ἀποστόλους ἔσπενδε· καὶ ἀκούων ὅτι μαστιχθέντες ἐκεῖνοι μετὰ χαρᾶς ἀνεχώρουν, ἐβουλήθη καὶ αὐτὸς μὴ τῇ τελευτῇ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ χαρᾷ μιμήσασθαι τοὺς διδασκάλους· διὰ τοῦτο τῶν θηρίων, ἔλεγεν, ὀναίμην. Καὶ πολλῶ τούτων ἡμερώτερα τὰ στόματα ἐνόμιζεν εἶναι τῆς τοῦ τυράννου γλώττης, καὶ μάλα εἰκότως· ἐκεῖνη μὲν γὰρ πρὸς τὴν γέενναν ἐκάλει, τὰ δὲ τούτων στόματα πρὸς βασιλείαν παρέπεμπε.

ρικῶντα καὶ στεφανούμενον ἐκείνοι, ἔχετε διηλεκτῶς αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς· ὀλίγον ἡμῶν αὐτὸν χρόνον ἀπίστησεν ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ μετὰ πλείονος ὑμῖν δόξης αὐτὸν ἐχαρίσατο. Καὶ καθάπερ οἱ δανειζόμενοι χρήματα μετὰ τόκων ἀποδιδόασιν ἅπερ ἂν λάβωσιν, οὕτω καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τὸν τίμιον τοῦτον Θεσαυρὸν παρ' ἡμῶν ὀλίγον χρησάμενος χρόνον, καὶ τῇ πόλει οὐσίαν ἐκείνη, μετὰ πλείονος ἡμῶν αὐτὸν ἀποδίδωκε τῆς λαμπρότητος. Ἐξεπίμψατε γὰρ ἐπίσκοπον, καὶ ἐδέξασθε μάρτυρα· ἐξεπίμψατε μετ' εὐχῶν, καὶ ἐδέξασθε μετὰ στεφάνων· καὶ οὐχ ὑμεῖς δὲ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πασαι αἱ ἐν μέσῳ πόλεις. Πῶς γὰρ αὐτὰς οἴσθητε διακεῖσθαι, ὁρώσας ἐπαναγόμενον τὸ λείψανον; πόσῃ καρποῦσθαι ἡδονήν; πόσον ἀγάλλεσθαι; πόσαις εὐφημίαις πάντοθεν βάλλειν τὸν στεφανίτην; Καθάπερ γὰρ ἀθλητὴν γενναῖον τοὺς ἀνταγωνιστὰς καταπαλαίσαντα ἅπαντας, καὶ μετὰ λαμπρᾶς ἐξεληθόντα δόξης ἀπὸ τοῦ σκάμματος, εὐθέως δεχόμενοι οἱ θεῖται, οὐδ' ἐπιβῆναι τῆς γῆς ἀφίαισι, φοράδην ἀπάγοντες οἰκαδε, καὶ μυρίοις βάλλοντες ἐγκωμίοις· οὕτω δὴ καὶ τὸν ἅγιον τότε ἐκείνον ἀπὸ τῆς Ῥώμης αἱ πόλεις ἐξῆς διαδεχόμεναι, καὶ ἐπ' ὤμων φέρουσαι μέχρι τῆς πόλεως ταύτης παρίεμπον, ἐγκωμιάζουσαι τὸν στεφανίτην, ἀνυμνούσαι τὸν ἀγωνοθῆτην, καταγελάσαι τοῦ διαβόλου, ὅτι εἰς τὸ ἐναντίον αὐτῷ περιεστράφη τὸ σόφισμα, καὶ ὅπερ ἐνόμισε κατὰ τοῦ μάρτυρος ποιεῖν, τοῦτο ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ γέγονε. Καὶ τότε μὲν τὰς πόλεις ἀπάσας ἐκείνας ὤνησε, καὶ ἀνώρθωσεν· ἐξ ἐκείνου δὲ καὶ μέχρι τῆς παρούσης τὴν ὑμετέραν πλουτίζει πόλιν. Καὶ καθάπερ Θεσαυρὸς διηλεκτῆς καθ' ἐκάστην ἀντλούμενος τὴν ἡμέραν, καὶ οὐκ ἐπιλείπων, ἅπαντας τοὺς μετέχοντας εὐπορωτέρους ποιεῖ· οὕτω δὴ καὶ ὁ μακάριος οὗτος Ἰγνάτιος τοὺς πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐρχομένους εὐλογίῳ παρρησίας, γενναίου φρονήματος, καὶ πολλῆς ἀνδρείας πληρῶν, οἰκαδε ἀποπέμπει.

Quis vestrum, ut sanctus Martyr Ignatius, Antiochiæ urbis Episcopus, post admirabiles in Christo actus, ob testimonium ejus, leonum molis Romæ confractus est? Cujus verba, quam ad passionem duceretur, audientes, si aliquando vultus vestri rubore suffusi essent, non solum in comparatione ejus vos non putabitis sacerdotes, sed ne mediocres quidem Christianos esse. Ait enim in epistola, quam ad Romanam Ecclesiam misit: "A Syria usque Romam cum bestiis terra marique depugno, die ac nocte connexus et colligatus decem leopardis, militibus dico ad custodiam datis, qui ex beneficiis nostris sæviores fiunt. Sed ego eorum nequitiis magis erudior: nec tamen in hoc justificatus sum. O salutare bestias quæ præparantur mihi? Quando venient? Quando emittentur? Quando eis frui licebit carnibus meis? Quas ego exopto acriores parari, et invitabo ad devorationem mei, et deprecabor, ne forte ut nonnullis fecerunt, timeant attingere corpus meum: quin immo, si cunctabuntur ego vim faciam, ego me ingeram. Date, quæso, veniam: ego novi quid expediat mihi. Nunc incipio esse Christi discipulus. Facessat invidia vel humani affectus, vel nequitia spiritualis, ut Jesum Christum adipisci merear. Ignes, cruces, bestia, dispersiones ossium, discriptionesque membrorum, ac totius corporis pænæ, et omnia in me unum supplicia diaboli arte quæsita compleantur, dummodo Jesum Christum merear adipisci." Quid ad hæc dormitantibus animæ oculis aspicitis? Quid talia surdis sensuum auribus auscultatis? Discutite, quæso, tenebrosam atramque cordis vestri caliginem temporis, ut veritatis et humilitatis præfulgidum lumen videre possitis. Christianus non mediocris sed perfectus, sacerdos non vilis sed summus, martyr non segnis sed præcipuus dicit: "Nunc incipio esse Christi discipulus." Epist. Rom. c. v.

ΗΟΜ. LXXX. p. 140.

ΗΟΜ. LXXXV. p. 151.

ΗΟΜ. CXL. p. 197.

Οὕτως τοίνυν καὶ ἠγοούμενος τύπος γινέσθω τοῦ ποιμνίου ἐν πάσῃ δικαιοσύνῃ καὶ ἀναστροφῇ ἀγία· ὁσίως καὶ δικαίως πολιτευόμενος, τηρῶν ὅσα ἐστὶν ἀγνά, ὅσα σεμνά, εἴ τις ἀρετὴ, εἴ τις ἔπαινος, εἴ τις εὐφημος· ἀφελείας διόρθωσις γινέσθω παρ' αὐτοῦ, "ἐκδικεῖν αὐτοῦ τὸν τόπον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιμελείᾳ πνευματικῇ, φροντίζειν τῆς ἐνώσεως τῶν μελῶν, ἧς οὐδὲν ἄμεινον· πάντων ἀνεχέσθαι ἐν ἀγάπῃ· πάντας βαστάζειν, ὡς καὶ αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος. Προσευχέσθω ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀδιαλείπτως· αἰτεῖν σύνοσιν πνευματικὴν, εἰς τὸ διακρίνειν αὐτὸν τὰ συμφέροντα, γρηγορεῖν, μεριμνᾶν περὶ πάντων· τὰ ἐλαττώματα πάντων, καὶ τὰς νόσους βαστάζειν, ὡς τέλειος ἀθλητῆς· ὅπου γὰρ πλείων κόπος, πολὺ καὶ τὸ κέρδος. Τοὺς καλοὺς μαθητὰς εὖ φιλεῖ, χάρις αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον τοὺς ἀπειθεστέρους ἐν πραότητι ὑποτάσσειν. Οὐ πᾶν τραῦμα τῇ αὐτῇ ἐμπλάστρῳ θεραπεύεται. Τοὺς παροξυσμοὺς ἐν βροχαῖς διὰ παύειν. Ἐστω φρόνιμος ἐν πᾶσιν ὡς οἱ ὄφεις· καὶ ἀκέραιος ὡς αἱ περιστερᾶί· ἵνα τὰ μὲν φαινόμενα αὐτῶν εἰς πρόσωπον κολακίῃ, τὰ δὲ ἄόρατα αἰτῇ φανερωθῆναι αὐτῷ· ἵνα μηδενὸς λείπηται, ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ χυρίσματι περισσύνῃ. Ὁ καιρὸς γὰρ ἀπαιτεῖ αὐτὸν, ὡς κυβερνήτην πρὸς τοὺς ἀνέμους, καὶ τὰς τρικυμίας, καὶ ζάλας τῶν πνευμάτων τῆς πορνείας στήναι γενναίως, καὶ ὁδηγεῖν τοὺς χειμαζομένους ἐπὶ τὸν λιμένα τοῦ θελήματος τοῦ Θεοῦ." Epist. Polycarp. c. ii.

"Οἱ γὰρ σαρκικοὶ τὰ πνευματικὰ πράσσειν οὐ δυνάνται, οὐδὲ οἱ πνευματικοὶ τὰ σαρκικά." Χρῆ οὖν τὸν βουλόμενον τὴν ἀγγελλικὴν ταύτην τοῦ μονήρους βίου ἀσκήσαι πολιτείαν, κτήσασθαι "τὴν φρόνησιν τοῦ ὄφειος, καὶ τὸ ἀκέραιον τῆς περιστερᾶς." Epist. Ephes. c. viii. Polycarp. c. ii.

ΗΟΜ. CXXVI. p. 219.

Ὁ Θεοφόρος Ἰγνάτιος ἐπιστέλλει, λέγων· "Τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ προσέχετε, ἵνα καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῖν. Ἀντίψυχον ἐγὼ τῷ ὑποτασσόμενῳ ἐπισκόπῳ, πρεσβυτέροις τε καὶ διακόνοις· μετ' αὐτῶν μοι γίνοιτε τὸ μέρος ἔχειν ἐν Θεῷ." Καὶ αὐθις· "Μάρτυς μοι, ἐν ᾧ δέδεμαι, ὅτι ἀπὸ σαρκὸς ἀνθρωπίνης οὐκ ἔγνω· τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ἐκήρυσσεν, λέγον τάδε· Χωρὶς τοῦ ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν ποιεῖτε." Χρῆ οὖν ἀνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν πράσσειν ἡμᾶς· "ὅπου γὰρ ἂν φανῇ ἐπίσκοπος, ἐκεῖ τὸ πλῆθος ἦτω, ὡς περ ὅπου περ ἂν ὀνομασθῇ Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς, ἐκεῖ ἡ καθολικὴ ἐκκλησία ἐπισυναγεται." Οὐ γὰρ ὅπου βούλονται βαδίζουσιν τῶν θρεμμάτων αἱ ἀγέλαι, ἀλλ' ἐνθάπερ οἱ ποιμένες αὐτὰς ἀποφέρουσιν. Τὰ δὲ ἔξω τῆς ἀγέλης ἀπομένοντα διαρπάζουσιν οἱ θῆρες, καὶ τροφὴν ἑαυτῶν ποιοῦνται τὸ πεπλανημένον. Οὐκ ἐξὸν οὖν ἐστὶν χωρὶς τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, οὔτε βαπτίζειν, οὔτε ἀγάπην ποιεῖν, ἀλλ' ὁ ἂν ἐκεῖνος δοκιμάσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ τῷ Θεῷ εὐάρεστον." "Ὁ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον τιμῶν, ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ τιμᾶται. Ὁ λάθρα ἐπίσκοπον τι πράσων, τῷ διαβόλῳ λατρεύει." "Ἀναγκαῖον οὖν ἐστὶν ὑποτάσσεσθαι καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ, ὡς ἀποστόλοις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τῆς ἐλπίδος ἡμῶν, κατὰ πάντα τρόπον πᾶσιν ἀρέσκειν. Οὐ γὰρ βρωμάτων καὶ πομάτων εἰσὶν διάκονοι ἀλλὰ ἐκκλησίας Θεοῦ ὑπηρεταί. Δέον οὖν ἐστὶν αὐτοὺς φυλάσσεσθαι τὰ ἐγκλήματα ὡς πῦρ. Ὁμοίως πάντες ἐντρέπείσθωσαν τοὺς διακόνοους ὡς Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καὶ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον ὡς τὸν Πατέρα, τοὺς δὲ πρεσβυτέρους ὡς συνέδριον Θεοῦ, καὶ ὡς δεσμὸν ἀποστόλων. Χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται."—Epist. Polycarp. c. vi. Philadel. c. vii. Smyrn. c. viii. ix. Trall. c. ii. iii.

CHRONICON PASCHALE.

Ὅτι δὲ τρεῖς ἑνιαυτοὺς κηρύξας τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ὁ Κύριος ἐπὶ τὸν ἑκούσιον καὶ ζωοποιὸν ἦλθε σταυρὸν, διδάσκει καὶ Ἰγνάτιος ὁ Θεοφόρος καὶ μάρτυς, ὁ Ἰωάννου τοῦ Θεολόγου γνήσιος μαθητὴς γεγονώς, τῆς δὲ ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἀγιοτάτης ἐκκλησίας ἐπίσκοπος ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀποστόλων κατασταθεὶς. Ἐν τῇ πρὸς Τραλλιανούς τοίνυν ἐπιστολῇ γέγραφεν ἐπὶ λέξεως οὕτως. “ Ἀληθῶς τοίνυν ἐγέννησε Μαρία σῶμα, Θεὸν ἔχον ἔνοικον. Καὶ ἀληθῶς ἐγεννήθη ὁ Λόγος ἐκ τῆς παρθένου Μαρίας, σῶμα ὁμοιοπαθὲς ἡμῖν ἡμφιεσμένος. Ἀληθῶς γέγονεν ἐν μήτρᾳ ὁ πάντας ἀνθρώπους ἐν μήτρᾳ διαπλάττων· καὶ ἐποίησεν ἑαυτῷ σῶμα ἐκ τῶν τῆς παρθένου σπερμάτων, πλὴν ὅσον ὁμιλίας ἀνδρὸς ἀνευ. Ἀληθῶς ἐκυφορήθη, ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς, χρόνων περίοδοις, καὶ ἀληθῶς ἐτέχθη, ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς. Ἀληθῶς ἐγαλακτοτροφήθη, καὶ τροφῆς κοινῆς καὶ ποτοῦ μετέσχευ, ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς· καὶ τρεῖς δεκάδας ἐτῶν πολιτευσάμενος ἐβαπτίσθη ὑπὸ Ἰωάννου, ἀληθῶς καὶ οὐ δοκῆσει. Καὶ τρεῖς ἑνιαυτοὺς κηρύξας τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, καὶ ποιήσας σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα, ὑπὸ τῶν ψευδοῖουδαίων, καὶ Πιλάτου ἡγεμόνος ὁ κριτῆς ἐκρίθη, ἐμαστιγώθη, ὑπὸ δούλων ἐπὶ κόρης ἐρράπίσθη, ἐνεπτύσθη, ἀκάνθινον στέφανον καὶ πορφυροῦν ἱμάτιον ἐφόρεσε, κατεκρίθη, ἐσταυρώθη ἀληθῶς, οὐ δοκῆσει, οὐ φαντασίᾳ, οὐκ ἀπάτῃ. Ἀπέθανεν ἀληθῶς, καὶ ἐτάφη, καὶ ἠγέρθη ἐκ τῶν νεκρῶν.” Ἴδου φανερώς ὁ τοιοῦτος καὶ τηλικούτος τῆς ἐκκλησίας διδάσκαλος τρεῖς ἑνιαυτοὺς κηρύξαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τὸν Σωτῆρα λέγει. Epist. Trall. c. x.

Ἀπίθανον οὖν, φησι, μᾶλλον δὲ κακόπλαστον, τὰ μετὰ πολὺν χρόνον τῆς τελευτῆς τοῦ μεγάλου Διονυσίου ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ αὐξήθεντα, Διονύσιον ὑπολαμβάνειν ἀναγράψαι. Τετάρτη δὲ, πῶς μέμνηται τῆς τοῦ Θεοφόρου Ἰγνατίου ἐπιστολῆς ἢ βίβλος; Ὁ μὲν γὰρ Διονύσιος τοῖς τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐνήκμασε χρόνοις, Ἰγνάτιος δὲ ἐπὶ Τραϊανοῦ τὸν διὰ μαρτυρίου ἠθλησεν ἀγῶνα, ὃς καὶ πρὸ βραχὺ τῆς τελευτῆς ταύτην ἐπιστολὴν, ἣς ἢ βίβλος μνημονεύει, γράφει.

ἐπὶ Δομετιανοῦ ἐξορίζεται εἰς Πάτρμον ὃ ἀντιγράφει Διονύσιος. Ἰγνατίος δὲ πρὸς Δομετιανοῦ μαρτυρεῖ ὥστε προγενέστερος Διονύσιου. "Ὁ ἐμὸς ἔρωσ" ζητητέον πῶς ἐπὶ Ὀνησίμου τοῦ μετὰ Τιμόθεον Ἰγνατίου διαλεγομένου καὶ γράφοντος τὸ, ἐμὸς ἔρωσ ἰσταύρωται. Διονύσιος τῶν Τιμοθέω γράφων τούτου μέμνηται, ὡς Ἰγνατίου ἤδη γράψαντος· καὶ μήποτε παρὰ τινὸς τῶν φιλολόγων ἔξω παρατεθὲν, πρὸς πλείονα σύστασιν τῶν περὶ Θείου ἔρωτος τῷ ἀγίῳ Διονυσίῳ εἰρημένων, ὕστερον κατ' ἀγνοίαν ἔσω παρετέθη, ὅπερ ἐν πολλοῖς πολλάκις γεγόμενον ἐγνωμέν· καὶ γὰρ δίχα τούτου ἴσταται ἀπαραλείπτως τὸ σῶμα τοῦ λόγου· ἢ τάχα συνήθες αὐτῷ εἶναι ἀπόφθιγμα, ὡς καὶ τὸ Θεοφόρος πολλάκις αὐτῷ λεγομένον τε καὶ γραφόμενον. Τεκμήριον δὲ, τὸ μὴ προσκείσθαι, Γράφει δὲ τισι, τουτέστι Ῥωμαίοις· ἀλλ' ἀπλῶς, Γράφει δὲ καὶ ὁ Θεῖος Ἰγνατίος.

Πρὸς Ἐφεσίους.

Τοῦ αὐτοῦ πρὸς Μαγνησίους.

βλεπόμενον πλανῆ τις, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀόρατον παραλογίζεται Θεόν. Τῷ δὲ τοιούτῳ, οὐ πρὸς σάρκα ὁ λόγος ἄλλα πρὸς Θεὸν τὸν τὰ κρύφια εἰδῶτα. Πρέπον οὖν ἐστὶ, μὴ μόνον καλεῖσθαι Χριστιανούς, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι· ὡσπερ καὶ τινες ἐπίσκοπον μὲν καλοῦσι, χωρὶς δὲ αὐτοῦ πάντα πράσσουσιν· οἱ τοιοῦτοι οὐκ εὐσυνεΐδητοί μοι φαίνονται, διὰ το μὴ βεβαίως κατ' ἐντολὴν συναθροίζεσθαι." Epist. Magnes. c. iii.

Ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς.

"Μηδὲν ἔστω ἐν ὑμῖν ὃ δινησεται ὑμῖς μερίται, ἀλλ' ἐνώθητε τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ καὶ τοῖς προκαθημένοις εἰς τόπον καὶ διδασχὴν ἀφθαρσίας. ὡσπερ οὖν ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν ἄνευ τοῦ Πατρὸς οὐδὲν ἐποίησεν, οὔτε δι' ἑαυτοῦ, οὔτε διὰ τῶν ἀποστόλων, οὕτως μηδὲ ὑμεῖς ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου μηδὲν πράσσετε, μηδὲ πειράσητε εὐλογόν τι φαίνεσθαι ἰδίᾳ ὑμῖν." Ibid. c. vi. vii.

Τοῦ αὐτοῦ.

"Ὅταν τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑποτάσσησθε, φαίνεσθί μοι οὐ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ζῶντες, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς ἀποθανόντα." Epist. Trall. c. ii.

Τοῦ αὐτοῦ.

"Τέκνα φωτὸς ἀληθείας, φεύγετε τὸν μερισμον, καὶ τὰς κακοδιδασκαλίας. Ὅπου δὲ ὁ ποιμὴν ἐστὶ, ἐκεῖ ὡς πρόβατα ἀκολουθεῖτε." Epist. Philad. c. ii.

Τοῦ αὐτοῦ.

Οὐδεὶς πίστιν ἐπαγγελόμενος ἔχειν, ἀμαρτάνει· οὐδεὶς ἀγάπην κεκτημένος μισεῖ. Φανερόν τὸ δένδρον ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ αὐτοῦ· οὕτως οἱ ἐπαγγελόμενοι Χριστοῦ εἶναι, δι' ὧν πράσσουσιν ὀφθήσονται. Natale sancti Ignatii Episcopi et Martyris; qui tertius post Petrum Apostolum Antiochenam rexit ecclesiam, persecutione Trajani damnatus ad bestias Romam vincetus mittitur: ubi praesente Trajano, circumsedente senatu, pilis plumbeis scapulae ejus primum contusae, deinde ungulis latera ejus dilaniata, et lapidibus asperis confricata: post expansae manus ejus et igni repletae, papyro oleo infuso et incenso latera ejus adusta post super carbones pavimento aspersos, ubi sanctae plantae ejus steterunt. Post lectum flammantem, post dorsum ejus ungulis discissum et dilaceratum, post acetum et salem, quibus plagae ejus infusae sunt, post vinculis ferreis beata illius astricta, et pedes in ima carceris in ligno conclusos, ubi tribus diebus ac noctibus panem non comedens, et aquam non bibens mansit: sedente pro tribunali Trajano in amphitheatro, concurrente omni turba Romanorum, ligatus duobus objicitur leonibus. Cumque jam projectus bestias

Vol. IX. Par. i. p. 509.

Qua tempestate Ignatius Antiochenæ ecclesiæ tertius post Petrum Episcopus; persecutionem commovente Trajano, damnatus ad bestias Romam vincetus mittitur. Cumque navigans Smyrnam venisset, ubi Polycarpus auditor Johannis Apostoli erat, scripsit unam epistolam ad Ephesios, alteram ad Magnesianos, tertiam ad Trallenses, quartam ad Romanos. Et inde egrediens scripsit ad Philadelphinos, et ad Phinerneos (Smyrneos) et proprie ad Polycarpum: commendans illi Antiochensem ecclesiam, in qua et de evangelio quod ab Hieronymo translatum est, sub persona Christi ponit testimonium, dicens: "Ego vero et post resurrectionem in carne eum fuisse scio et credo: quia scio, et quando venit ad Petrum, et ad eos qui cum Petro erant, dicens eis: Ecce palpate me et videte, quia non sum dæmonium incorporale. Et statim tetigerunt eum et crediderunt.

Dignum autem mihi videtur, quia tanti viri fecimus mentionem, de epistola ejus quam ad Romanos scripsit, pauca ponere. "De Syria

usque Romam pugnavi ad bestias in mari et in terra, nocte et die: ligatus cum decem leopardis, hoc est militibus, qui me custodiunt. Quibus et cum benefeceris, pejores fiunt. Iniquitas autem eorum mea doctrina est: sed non ideo justificatus sum. Utinam fruar bestiis quæ mihi præparatæ sunt. Quas et oro veloces mihi esse ad interitum, et illiciam ad comedendum me: ne sicut aliorum martyrum non audeant corpus meum attingere. Quod si venire noluerint, ego vim faciam, ego me ingeram ut devorer. Ignoscite mihi filioli, quid mihi prosit ego scio: quia nunc incipio esse discipulus Christi, nihil de his quæ videntur desiderans, ut Christum Jesum inveniam. Ignis, crux, bestia, confractio ossium membrorumque divisio, et totius corporis contritio, et tormenta diaboli in me veniant, tamen ut Christo fruar." Cumque jam damnatus esset ad bestias, et ardore patiendi rugientes audiret leones, "Frumentum, inquit, Christi sum, dentibus bestiarum molar, ut panis mundus inveniar." Passus est anno undecimo Trajani. Reliquiæ corporis Antiochiæ jacent extra portam Daphniticam in cimeterio. Epist. Rom. c. v. vi.

Α'. Ἄρτι διαδεξαμένου τὴν Ῥωμαίων ἀρχὴν Τραϊανοῦ, Ἰγνάτιος ὁ τοῦ ἀποστόλου Ἰωάννου μαθητῆς, ἀνὴρ ἦν τοῖς πᾶσιν ἀποστολικὸς, καὶ ἐκυβέρνησα τὴν ἐκκλησίαν Ἀντιοχείων ἐπιμυλῶς, τοὺς πάλαι χειμῶνας μόλις παραγαγὼν τῶν πολλῶν ἐπὶ Δομετιανοῦ διωγμῶν, καθάπερ κυβερνήτης ἀγαθὸς τῷ οἴακι τῆς προσευχῆς καὶ τῆς νηστείας, καὶ τῇ συνεισφορά τῆς διδασκαλίας, τῷ τόνῳ τῷ πνευματικῷ, πρὸς τὴν ζάλην τὴν ἀντικειμένην ἀντείχεν· δεδοικῶς, μή τινα τῶν ὀλιγοψύχων ἢ ἀκραιοτέρων ἀποβάλλῃ. Ταιγαροῦν ἠψφραίνετο μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀσαλεύτῳ, λωφθήσαντος πρὸς ὀλίγον τοῦ διωγμοῦ· ἤσχαλλεν δὲ καθ' ἑαυτὸν, ὡς μήπω τῆς ὄντως εἰς Χριστὸν ἀγάπης ἐφαψάμενος, μηδὲ τῆς τελείας τοῦ μαθητοῦ τάξεως. Ἐνενόει γὰρ τὴν διὰ μαρτυρίου γινομένην ὁμολογίαν πλείον αὐτὸν προσοικειοῦσαν τῷ Κυρίῳ. Ὅθεν ἔτεσιν ὀλίγοις ἔτι παραμένων τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ λύχνου δίκην Θεϊκοῦ τὴν ἐκάστου φωτίζων διάνοιαν διὰ τῆς τῶν Θείων γραφῶν ἐξηγήσεως, ἐπετύγγανεν τῶν κατ' εὐχὴν.

Β'. Τραϊανοῦ γὰρ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐννάτῳ ἔτει τῆς αὐτοῦ βασιλείας ἐπαρθέντος ἐπὶ τῇ νίκῃ τῇ κατὰ Σκυθῶν καὶ Δακῶν καὶ ἐτέρων πολλῶν ἐθνῶν, καὶ νομίσαντος ἔτι λείπειν αὐτῷ πρὸς πᾶσαν ὑποταγὴν τὸ τῶν Χριστιανῶν Θεοσεβὲς σύστημα, καὶ εἰ μὴ τὴν τῶν δαιμόνων ἔλοιτο λατρείαν μετὰ πάντων ὑπεισιέναι τῶν ἐθνῶν, διωγμὸν ὑπομένειν ἀπειλήσαντος, ὁ φόβος πάντας τοὺς

Ignatii Theophori.

I. Nuper recipiente principatum Romanorum Trajano, Apostoli et Evangelistæ Joannis discipulus Ignatius, vir in omnibus Apostolicus, gubernabat Ecclesiam Antiochenorum. Qui quondam procellas vix mitigans multarum sub Domitiano persecutionum, quemadmodum gubernator bonus, gubernaculo orationis et jejunii, continuitate doctrinæ, robore spirituali, fluctuationi adversantis se opposuit potentia: timens, ne aliquem eorum qui pusillanimes et magis simplices prosterneret. Igitur lætabatur quidem de Ecclesiæ inconcussione, quiescente ad paucum persecutione: dubitavit autem secundum seipsum, quod nondum vere in Christum charitatem attigerat, neque perfectum discipuli ordinem. Cogitavit enim eam quæ per martyrium confessionem plus ipsum adducere ad familiaritatem Domini. Unde annis paucis adhuc permanens Ecclesiæ, et ad lucernæ modum divinæ, cujusque illuminans cor per Scripturarum enarrationem, sortitus est iis, quæ secundum votum.

II. Trajano enim, post quartum annum imperii sui, elato de victoria illa quæ adversus Scythas et Thraces et alteras multas et diversas gentes; et existimante adhuc deficere ipsi ad omnem subjectionem Christianorum Deum venerantem congregationem, nisi dæmoniacam cogeret culturam cum omnibus subintrare gentibus: persecutionem comminans, omnes εὐσεβῶς ζῶντας ἢ θύειν ἢ τελευτᾶν κατηνάγκαζεν. Τότε τοίνυν φοβηθεὶς ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἀντιοχείων ἐκκλησίας ὁ γενναῖος τοῦ Χριστοῦ στρατιώτης, ἐκουσίως ἤγετο πρὸς Τραϊανὸν, διαγόντα μὲν κατ' ἐκείνον τὸν καιρὸν κατὰ τὴν Ἀντιόχειαν, σπουδάζοντα δὲ ἐπὶ Ἀρμενίαν καὶ Πάρθους. Ὡς δὲ κατὰ πρόσωπον ἔστη Τραϊανοῦ τοῦ βασιλέως· Τίς εἶ, κακοδαίμων, τὰς ἡμετέρας σπουδάζων διατάξεις ὑπερβαίνειν, μετὰ τὸ καὶ ἐτέρους ἀναπεῖθειν, ἵνα κακῶς ἀπολῶνται; Ἰγνάτιος εἶπεν· Οὐδεὶς Θεοφόρον ἀποκαλεῖ κακοδαίμονα· ἀφεστήκασι γὰρ ἀπὸ τῶν δούλων τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ δαιμόνια. Εἰ δὲ ὅτι τούτοις ἐπαχθῆς εἶμι, καὶ κακὸν με πρὸς τοὺς δαίμονας ἀποκαλεῖς, συνομολογῶ· Χριστὸν γὰρ ἔχων ἐπουράνιον Βασιλέα, τὰς τούτων καταλύω ἐπιβουλὰς. Τραϊανὸς εἶπεν· Καὶ τίς ἐστὶν Θεοφόρος; Ἰγνάτιος ἀπεκρίνατο· Ὁ Χριστὸν ἔχων ἐν στέρνοις. Τραϊανὸς εἶπεν· Ἡμεῖς οὖν σοι δοκοῦμεν κατὰ νοῦν μὴ ἔχειν Θεοῦς, οἷς καὶ χρώμεθα συμμάχοις πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους; Ἰγνάτιος εἶπεν· Τὰ δαιμόνια τῶν ἐθνῶν Θεοῦς προσαγορεύεις πλανώμενος. Εἷς γάρ ἐστιν Θεὸς, ὁ ποιήσας τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς· καὶ εἷς Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ μονογενὴς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας ὀναίμην. ipsos Dei cultores existentes vel sacrificare vel mori cogebat. Tunc igitur timens pro Antiochenorum Ecclesia virilis Christi miles, voluntarie ductus est ad Trajanum; agentem quidem secundum illud tempus apud Antiochiam, festinantem autem ad Armeniam et Parthos. Ut autem coram facie stetit Imperatoris Trajani, Trajanus dixit: Quis est cacodæmon, nostras festinans præceptiones transcendere; cum et alteros persuadere, ut perdantur male? Ignatius dixit: Nullus Theophorum vocat cacodæmonem: recesserunt enim longe a servis Dei dæmonia. Si autem quoniam iis gravis sum, malum me adversus dæmones vocas; confiteor. Christum enim habens supercælestem Regem, dissolvo horum insidias. Trajanus dixit: Et quis est Theophorus? Ignatius respondit: Qui Christum habet in pectore. Trajanus dixit: Nos igitur tibi videmur non habere secundum intellectum Deos, quibus utimur compugnatoribus adversus adversarios? Ignatius dixit: Dæmonia gentium Deos appellas errans. Unus enim est Deus, qui fecit cælum et terram et mare et omnia quæ in ipsis: et unus Christus Jesus, filius ipsius unigenitus, cujus amicitia fruar. Trajanus dixit: Crucifixum dicis sub Pontio Pilato? Ignatius dixit: Crucifixum peccatum, cum ipsius inventore; et omnem condemnantem dæmoniacam malitiam sub pedibus eorum qui ipsum in corde ferunt. Trajanus dixit: Tu igitur in teipso Christum circumfers? Ignatius dixit: Etiam. Scriptum est enim: Inhabitabo in ipsis, et inambulabo. Trajanus sententiavit: Ignatium præcipimus, in seipso dicentem circumferre Crucifixum, vinctum a στρατιωτῶν γενόμενον ἄγεσθαι παρὰ τὴν μεγάλην Ῥώμην, βρῶμα γενησόμενον θηρίων εἰς τέρψιν τοῦ δήμου. Ταύτης ὁ ἅγιος μάρτυς ἐπακούσας τῆς ἀποφάσεως, μετὰ χαρᾶς ἐβόησεν· Εὐχαριστῶ σοι, δέσποτα, ὅτι με τελεία τῇ πρὸς σε ἀγάπῃ τιμῆσαι κατηξίωσας, τῷ ἀποστόλῳ σου Παύλῳ δέσμοις συνδήσας σιδηροῖς. Ταῦτα εἰπὼν, καὶ μετ' εὐφροσύνης περιθέμενος τὰ δεσμὰ, ἐπευξάμενος πρότερον τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ ταύτην παραθέμενος μετὰ δακρῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ, ὡς περ κριὸς ἐπίσημος, ἀγίλης καλῆς ἡγούμενος, ὑπὸ θηριώδους στρατιωτικῆς δεινότητος συνηρπάζετο, θηρίοις αἰμοβόροις ἐπὶ τὴν Ῥώμην ἀπαχθισόμενος πρὸς βορᾶν.

Γ'. Μετὰ πολλῆς τοίνυν προθυμίας καὶ χαρᾶς, ἐπιθυμία τοῦ πάθους, κατελθὼν ἀπὸ Ἀντιοχείας εἰς τὴν Σελευκείαν, ἐκείθεν εἶχετο τοῦ πλοός· καὶ προσχῶν μετὰ πολὺν κάματον τῇ Σμυρναίων πόλει, σὺν πολλῇ χαρᾷ καταβάς τῆς νηὸς, ἔσπευδε τὸν ἅγιον Πολύκαρπον τὸν Σμυρναίων ἐπίσκοπον τὸν συνακροατὴν θεάσασθαι· ἐγεγόνεισαν γὰρ πάλαι μαθηταὶ τοῦ ἁγίου ἀποστόλου Ἰωάννου· παρ' ᾧ καταχθεῖς, καὶ πνευματικῶν αὐτῷ κοινωνήσας χαρισμάτων, καὶ τοῖς δεσμοῖς ἐγκουχῶμενος, παρεκάλει συναθλεῖν τῇ αὐτοῦ προθέσει, μάλιστα μὲν κοινῇ πᾶσαν ἐκκλησίαν· (ἐδεξιούντο γὰρ τὸν ἅγιον διὰ τῶν ἐπισκόπων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων καὶ διακόνων αἰ τῆς Ἀσίας πόλεις καὶ ἐκκλησίαι, πάντων ἐπειγομένων πρὸς αὐτὸν, εἴ πως μέρος χαρίσματος λάβωσι πνευματικοῦ)· ἐξαιρέτως δὲ τὸν ἅγιον Πολύκαρπον, ἵνα διὰ τῶν θηρίων θάπτον ἀφανῆς τῷ κόσμῳ γενόμενος, ἐμφανισθῇ τῷ προσώπῳ τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

mi'itibus duci in magnam Romam; cibum bestiarum, in spectaculum plebis, futurum. Hanc audiens sanctus martyr sententiam, cum gaudio exclamavit: Gratias ago tibi, Domine, quia me perfecta ad te charitate honorare dignatus es, cum Apostolo tuo Paulo vinculis collocari ferreis. Hæc dicens, et cum gaudio circumponens vincula, oransque prius pro Ecclesia, et hanc cum lachrymis commendans Domino; velut aries insignis boni gregis dux, a bestiali militari duritia raptus est, bestiis cruda vorantibus ad Romam ad cibum adducendus.

III. Cum multa igitur promptitudine et gaudio, ex desiderio passionis, descendens ab Antiochia in Seleuciam, illinc habebat navigationem: et applicans post multum laborem Smyrnæorum civitati, cum multo gaudio descendens de navi festinabat sanctum Polycarpum Episcopum co-auditorem videre: fuerant enim quondam discipuli Joannis. Apud quem adductus, et spiritualibus cum ipso communicans charismatibus, et vinculis glorians, deprecabatur concertare ipsius proposito, maxime quidem communiter omnem Ecclesiam: (honorabant enim Sanctum per Episcopos, Presbyteros et Diaconos, Asiæ civitates et Ecclesiæ; omnibus festinantibus ad ipsum, si quo aliquam partem charismatis accipiant spiritualis:) præcipue autem sanctum Polycarpum; ut velocius, per bestias disprensus mundo factus, appareat faciei Christi.

IV. Et hoc sic dixit, sic testificatus est: tamen extendens eam, quæ circa Christum, charitatem, ut cælum quidem appre-

Καταρτίσας τοίνυν, ὡς ἠβούλετο, τοὺς ἐν Ῥώμῃ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ἄκοντας διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς, οὕτως ἀναχθεὶς ἀπὸ τῆς Σμύρνης, (κατεπίεγτο γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ὁ Χριστοφόρος φθάσαι τὰς φιλοτιμίας ἐν τῇ μεγάλῃ Ῥώμῃ, ἵνα ἐπ' ὄψεσι τοῦ δήμου Ῥωμαίων θηρσὶν ἀγρίοις παραδοθεὶς, τοῦ στεφάνου τῆς ἀθλήσεως ἐπιτύχῃ) πρόσσεχε τῇ Τροάδι. Εἶτα ἐκεῖθεν καταχθεὶς ἐπὶ τὴν Νεάπολιν, διὰ Φιλίππων παρῶδευεν Μακεδονίαν, περὶ καὶ τὴν ἠπειρον τὴν πρὸς Ἐπίδαμνον, ἐν τοῖς παραθαλαττίοις νηὸς ἐπιτυχῶν, ἐπλεῖ τὸ Ἀδριατικὸν πέλαγος, κακεῖθεν ἐπιβὰς τοῦ Τυρρηνικοῦ, καὶ παραμείβων νήσους τε καὶ πόλεις, ὑποδειχθέντων τῷ ἁγίῳ Ποτιόλων, αὐτὸς μὲν ἐξελθεῖν ἔσπευδεν, κατ' ἴχνος βαδίζειν ἐθέλων τοῦ ἀποστόλου Παύλου. Ὡς δὲ ἐπιπεσὸν βίαιον πνεῦμα οὐ συνεχώρει, τῆς νηὸς ἐκ πρύμνης ἐπειγομένης, μακαρίσας τὴν ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ τόπῳ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ἀγάπην, οὕτω παρέπλει. Τοιγαροῦν ἐν μιᾷ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ νυκτὶ τῇ αὐτῇ οὐρίοις ἀνέμοις προσχρησάμενοι, ἡμεῖς μὲν ἄκοντες ἀπηγόμεθα, στένοντες ἐπὶ hendere per bonam confessionem et per coorantium pro certamine studium, reddi autem mercedem Ecclesiis obviantibus Christi, per præcedentes literas gratias agens, appositas ad ipsas; spiritualem cum orationibus et admonitionibus amplexantes gratiam. Igitur omnes videns amicabiliter dispositos ad ipsum, timens ne forte fraternitatis dilectio ad Dominum ipsius festinationem abscindat, bona aperta ipsi porta martyrii; talia ad Ecclesiam mittit Romanorum, ut subordinata sunt.

V. Perficiens igitur, ut volebat, eos qui in Roma fratrum absentes per epistolam, sic ductus a Smyrna; (urgebatur enim a militibus Christophorus occupare honores in magna civitate; ut in conspectu plebis Romanorum bestiis feris projectus, corona justitiæ per tale certamen potiatur;) attigit ad Troadem. Deinde illinc ductus ad Neapolim, per Philipenses pertransivit Macedoniam pedes, et terram quæ ad Epidamnium. Cujus in juxta marinis nave potitus, navigavit Adriacum pelagus, et illinc ascendens Tyrannicum, et transiens insulas et civitates; ostensis Sancto Pociolis, ipse quidem exire festinavit, secundum vestigia ambulare volens Apostoli Pauli. Ut autem incidens violentus non concessit ventus, nave a prora repulsa; beatificans illam, quæ in illo loco, fratrum charitatem, sic transnavigavit. Igitur in una die et nocte eadem prosperis ventis utentes, nos quidem nolentes abducimur, gementes de ea quæ a nobis futura separatione: justo

Illinc igitur expulsus a vocato Portu, (diffamabantur enim jam quæ secundum sanctum Martyrem,) obviamus fratribus, timore et gaudio repletis, gaudentibus quidem in quibus dignificabantur, eo quod Theophori consortio; timentibus autem, quod ad mortem talis ducebatur. Deinde confestim projectus, secundum quondam præceptum Cæsaris, debentibus quiescere gloriationibus, (erat enim solennis, ut putabant, dicta Romana voce Tertiadecima; secundum quam studiose convenerunt:) sic bestiis crudelibus ab impiis apponebatur, ut confestim sancti martyris Ignatii compleretur desiderium, secundum quod scriptum est: Desiderium justii acceptabile: ut sit nulli fratrum gravis per collectionem reliquiarum; secundum quod, præoccupans in Epistola, Impleti autem gaudio hæc videntes, et glorificantes Deum datorem bonorum, et beatificantes Sanctum, manifestavimus vobis diem et tempus: ut secundum tempus martyrii congregati, communis athletæ et virili Christi Martyri, qui conculcavit Diabolum et hujus insidias in finem prostravit; glorificantes in ipsius venerabili et sancta memoria Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum; per quem et cum quo Patri gloria et potentia cum Spiritu Sancto in sancta Ecclesia in secula seculorum. THE EPISTLE OF ST. IGNATIUS THE BISHOP TO POLYCARP.

IGNATIUS, who is Theophorus, to Polycarp Bishop of Smyrna, who himself rather is visited by God the Father and by Jesus Christ our Lord, much peace.

FOR as much as thy mind, which is confirmed in God as upon a rock immoveable, is acceptable to me, I praise God the more abundantly for having been accounted worthy of thy countenance, which I long for in God. I beseech thee therefore, by the grace with which thou art clothed, to add to thy course, and pray for all men that they may be saved, and require things becoming with all diligence of flesh and of spirit. Be careful for unanimity, than which nothing is more excellent. Bear all men as our Lord beareth thee. Be patient with all men in love, as [indeed] thou art. (P. 4) Be constant in prayer. Ask more understanding than what thou [already] hast. Be watchful, for thou possessest a spirit that sleepeth not. Speak with all men according to the will of God. Bear the infirmities of all men like a perfect combatant; for where the labour is much, much also is the gain. If thou love the good disciples only, thou hast no grace: rather subdue those who are evil by gentleness. All wounds are not healed by one medicine. Allay cutting by tenderness. Be wise as the serpent in every thing, and innocent as the dove as to those things which are requisite. On this account art thou [both] of flesh and of spirit, that thou mayest allure those things which are seen before thy face, and ask respecting those things which are hidden from thee, that they may be revealed to thee, (6) that thou mayest be lacking in nothing, and mayest abound in all gifts. The time requireth, as a pilot a ship, and as he who standeth in the tempest the haven, that thou shouldest be worthy of God. Be vigilant as a combatant of God. That which is promised to us is life eternal incorruptible, of which things thou also art persuaded. In every thing I will be instead of thy soul, and my bonds which thou hast loved. Let not those who seem to be something and teach strange doctrines, astound thee, but stand in the truth, like a combatant who is smitten: for it is [the part] of a great combatant that he should be smitten and conquer. More especially on God's account it behoveth us to endure every thing, that He also may endure us. Be diligent [even] more than thou art, (8). Be discerning of the times. Expect Him who is above the times, Him to whom there are no times, Him who is unseen, Him who for our sakes was seen, Him who is impalpable, Him who is impassible, Him who for our sakes suffered, Him who endured every thing in every form for our sakes.

Let not the widows be neglected: on our Lord's account be thou their guardian, and let nothing be done without thy will; neither do thou any thing without the will of God; nor indeed dost thou. Stand well. Let there be frequent assemblies. Ask every man by his name. Despise not slaves and handmaids; but neither let them be contemptuous; but let them serve the more, as for the glory of God, that they may be accounted worthy of a better freedom which is of God. Let them not desire to be set free from the common [property], that they may not be found the slaves of lusts. (10) Fly from evil arts; but rather discourse respecting them. Tell my sisters that they love in the Lord, and that their husbands be sufficient for them in flesh and in spirit. Then again, charge my brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that they love their wives as our Lord his church. If any one be able in strength to continue in chastity to the honour of the flesh of our Lord, let him continue without boasting; if he boast, he is lost: if he become known apart from the Bishop, he has corrupted himself. It is becoming, therefore, to men and women who marry, that they marry by the counsel of the Bishop, that the marriage may be in our Lord, and not in lust. Let every thing, therefore, be for the honour of God.

(12) Look to the Bishop, that God also may look upon you. I will be instead of the souls of those who are subject to the Bishop, and the Presbyters, and the Deacons; with them may I have a portion near God. Labour together with one another; make the struggle together, run together, suffer together, sleep together, rise together. As stewards of God, and his domestics and ministers, please him and serve him, that ye may receive the wages from him. Let none of you rebel. Let your baptism be to you as armour, and faith as a helmet, and love as a spear, and patience as a panoply. Let your treasures be your good works, that ye may receive the gift of God, as it is just. Let your spirit be enduring towards each other in meekness, as God towards you. I rejoice in you at all times. (14) The Christian has not power over himself, but is ready to be subject to God. I salute him who is accounted worthy to go to Antioch in my stead, as I charged thee.

HIS SECOND EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

(P. 16.) IGNATIUS, who is Theophorus, to the Church which is blessed in the greatness of God the Father, and perfected; to her who was separated from eternity to be at all times for glory that abideth and changeth not, and is perfected and chosen in the purpose of truth, by the will of the Father of Jesus Christ our God; to her who is worthy of happiness; to her who is at Ephesus in Jesus Christ in joy unblameable; much peace.

For as much as your well-beloved name is acceptable to me in God, which ye have acquired by nature by a right and just will, and also by faith and love of Jesus Christ our Saviour, and ye are imitators of God, and fervent in the blood of God, (18) and have speedily accomplished a work congenial to you; for when ye heard that I was bound from actions for the sake of the common name and hope—and I hope through your prayers to be devoured of beasts at Rome, that by means of this of which I am accounted worthy I may be empowered with strength to be a disciple of God—ye were diligent to come and see me. For as much, therefore, as we have received your abundance in the name of God by Onesimus, who is your Bishop in love unutterable, whom I pray that ye love in Jesus Christ our Lord, and that all of you be like him; for blessed is He who hath given you such a Bishop, as ye deserve; (20) but for as much as love suffreth me not to be silent respecting you, on this account I have been forward to entreat you to be diligent in the will of God; (24) for so long as no one lust is implanted in you which is able to torment you, lo, ye live in God. I rejoice in you, and offer supplication on account of you, Ephesians, a church renowned in all ages. (26) For those who are carnal are not able to do spiritual things, neither the spiritual carnal things; likewise neither faith those things which are foreign to faith, nor lack of faith what is faith's. For those things which ye have done in the flesh even they are spiritual, because ye have done every thing in Jesus Christ, and ye are prepared for the building of God the Father, and are raised up on high by the engine of Jesus Christ, which is the Cross, and ye are drawn by the rope, which is the Holy Ghost; and your pulley is your faith, (28) and your love is the way that leadeth up on high to God. Pray for all men, for there is hope of repentance for them, that they may be accounted worthy of God. By your works rather let them be instructed. Against their harsh words be ye conciliatory in meekness of mind and gentleness: against their blasphemies do ye pray: and against their error be ye armed with faith: and against their fierceness be ye peaceful and quiet: and be ye not astounded by them. (30) Let us then be imitators of our Lord in meekness, and [emulous] as to who shall be injured, and oppressed and defrauded more [than the rest]. (32) The work is not of promise, unless a man be found in the power of faith even to the end. It is better that a man be silent when he is something than that he should be speaking when he is not; that by those things which he speaks he should act, and by those things of which he is silent he should be known. (34) My spirit boweth down to the Cross, which is an offence to those who do not believe, but to you salvation and life eternal. (36) There was concealed from the ruler of this world the virginity of Mary, and the birth of our Lord, and the three mysteries of the shout, which were done in the quietness of God from the star. And here at the manifestation of the Son magic began to be destroyed, and all bonds were loosed, and the ancient kingdom and the error of evil was destroyed. From hence all things were moved together, and the destruction of death was devised, and there was the commencement of that which is perfected in God.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF THE SAME
SAINT IGNATIUS.

(P. 40.) Ignatius, who is Theophorus, to the Church which has been pitied in the greatness of the Father Most High; to her who presideth in the place of the country of the Romans, who is worthy of God, and worthy of life and happiness and praise and remembrance, and is worthy of prosperity, and presideth in love, and is perfected in the law of Christ blameless, much peace.

LONG since have I prayed to God that I might be accounted worthy to behold your faces, which are worthy of God: now therefore being bound in Jesus Christ, I hope to meet you and salute you (42), if there be the will that I should be accounted worthy to the end. For the beginning is well disposed, if I be accounted worthy to attain to the end, that I may receive my portion without hindrance through suffering. For I am afraid of your love, lest it should injure me. For you, indeed, it is easy for you to do what you wish; but for me, it is difficult for me to be accounted worthy of God, if indeed you spare me not. For there is no other time like this, that I should be accounted worthy of God; neither will ye, if ye be silent, be found in a better work than this. If ye leave me I shall be the word of God; but if ye love my flesh, again am I to myself a voice. Ye will not give me any thing better than this, that I should be sacrificed to God while the altar is ready (44); that ye may be in one concord in love, and may praise God the Father through Jesus Christ our Lord, because he has accounted a Bishop worthy to be God's, having called him from the East to the West. It is good that I should set from the world in God, that I may rise in Him in life.

Ye have never envied any one. Ye have taught others. Pray only for strength to be given to me from within and from without, that I may not only speak, but also may be willing; and not that I may be called a Christian only, but also that I may be found to be [one]: for if I am found to be [one], I am also able to be called [so]. Then [indeed] shall I be faithful, when I am no longer seen in the world. For there is nothing which is seen that is good. The work is not [a matter] of persuasion, but Christianity is great when the world hateth it. (46) I write to all the Churches, and declare to all men that I die willingly for God, if it be that ye hinder me not. I intreat you, be not [affected] towards me by love that is unseasonable. Leave me to be the beasts', that through them I may be accounted worthy of God. I am the wheat of God, and by the teeth of the beasts I am ground, that I may be found the pure bread of God. With provoking provoke ye the beasts, that they may be a grave for me, and may leave nothing of my body, that even after I am fallen asleep I may not be a burden upon any one. Then shall I be in truth a disciple of Jesus Christ, when the world seeth not even my body. Intreat our Lord for me, that through these instruments I may be found a sacrifice to God.

(48.) I do not charge you like Peter and Paul, who are Apostles, but I am one condemned: they indeed are free, but I am a slave even until now. But if I suffer, I shall be the freedman of Jesus Christ, and I shall rise from the dead in Him free. And now, being bound, I learn to desire nothing. From Syria, and even to Rome I am cast among beasts, by sea and by land, by night and by day, being bound between ten leopards, which are the band of soldiers, who, even while I do good to them, do evil the more to me. But I am the rather instructed by their injury, but not on this account am I justified to myself. I rejoice in the beasts that are prepared for me, and I pray that they may be quickly found for me; and I will provoke them to devour me speedily: and not as that which is afraid of some other men, and does not approach them (50); even should they not be willing to approach me, I will go with violence against them. Know me from myself. What is expedient for me? Let nothing envy me of those that are seen and that are not seen, that I should be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ. Fire and the cross, and the beasts that are prepared, amputation of the limbs, and scattering of the bones, and crushing of the whole body, hard torments of the devil, let these come upon me, and only may I be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ. The pains of the birth stand over me (52), and my love is crucified, and there is no fire in me for another love. I do not desire the food of corruption, neither the desires of this world. The bread of God I seek, which is the flesh of Jesus Christ, and his blood I seek, a drink which is love incorruptible (54). My spirit saluteth you, and the love of the Churches which received me as the name of Jesus Christ, for even those who were near to the way in the flesh preceded me in every city. Now therefore being about to arrive shortly at Rome, I know many things in God; but I moderate myself, that I may not perish through boasting; for now it behoveth me to fear the more, and not to regard those who puff me up. For they who say to me such things, scourge me: for I love to suffer, but I do not know if I am worthy. For to many zeal is not seen; but with me it has war: I have need therefore of meekness, by which the ruler of this world is destroyed. I am able to write to you of heavenly things; but I fear lest I should do you an injury. Know me from myself. For I am cautious, lest ye should not be able to receive it (56), and should be perplexed. For even I, not because I am bound, and am able to know heavenly things, and the places of angels, and the station of the powers that are seen and that are not seen, on this account am I a disciple: for I am far short of the perfection which is worthy of God. Be ye perfectly safe in the patience of Jesus Christ our God.

(P. 197.) Sentences selected from the Epistles of the holy Ignatius the disciple of the Apostles, the God-clad and Martyr, the second Bishop of Antioch: which have the force of Ecclesiastical Canons.

From the Epistle to the Ephesians.

LET us take heed therefore that we be not opposed to the Bishop; so that we may be subject to God. Because the more any one seeth the Bishop silent, let him be the more afraid of him. For every one whom the master of the house sendeth to his own administrations, it is right for us so to receive as him who sent him. It is evident, therefore, that it is right for us to look to the Bishop as to our Lord. c. v. vi.

And a little further. Be ye therefore careful to assemble together continually for the giving of thanks, and for the praise of God. For when ye are continually together, the power of Satan is destroyed, and his dominion is dissolved, by means of the unanimity of your faith. For there is nothing better than peace, by which all the wars of heavenly and earthly beings are frustrated. c. xiii.

And a little further. Better is it that a man be silent when he is something, than that he be speaking when he is not. For it is good that a man teach, if it be that he do what he says. c. xv.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Magnesians.

Those in whom there is no faith are of the ruler of this world; and those who are faithful in love are the image of God the Father, through Jesus Christ. And if we be not willing to die for his sake in his passion, his life is not in us. For as much, therefore, as I have beheld in those persons of whom I have written above, that is to say, the Bishops, the Presbyters, and the Deacons, your whole assemblage in faith and in love, I beseech you that ye take heed to do every thing in the unanimity of God; the Bishop presiding over you in the place of God, and the Presbyters in the place of the Angels of the Council, and the Deacons in the place of the Apostles. c. v. vi.

For when ye are subject to the Bishop as to Jesus Christ, ye seem to me not to be living in the flesh, but in Jesus Christ, who died for us; so that, believing in his death, ye may escape from dying. It is right, therefore, that ye should do nothing without the Bishop, as [indeed] ye do. And be ye subject also to the Presbyters as to the Apostles of Jesus Christ, our hope: so that we may be found living in the Same. It is becoming, therefore, to the Deacons also, who are sons of the mystery of Jesus Christ, to please all men in every manner; for they are not ministers of meat and drink, but of the Church of God. It is right for them to guard themselves against accusation as against fire. And in like manner, let every one be reverential towards the Deacons as towards Jesus Christ; and towards the Bishop, who is in the place of the Father; and towards the Presbyters as towards the sons of the council of God and members of the Apostles. Apart from these the Church is not named. c. ii. iii.

And a little after. For even I, not because I am bound and am able to know heavenly things, also the places of angels, and the station of the powers that are seen and that are not seen, on this account be ye disciples to me, for we are far short; that we fail not from God. I beseech you, therefore—it is not I, but the love of Jesus Christ—that ye use only the food of gratitude, and withdraw from the strange root which is of heresies, of those who mix themselves up in Jesus Christ so that they may be trusted: like those who give the poison of death in wine and honey, so that he who is ignorant in pleasure receiveth death. Beware, therefore, of those who are such. c. v. vi.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to Polycarp, Bishop of the city Smyrna.

Let not those then who seem to be something, and teach strange doctrines, astound thee, but stand in the truth, like a valiant man who is smitten; for it is [the part] of a great combatant to be smitten and conquer. But more especially on God's account it becometh us to endure every thing, so that He also may endure us. c. iii.

And again. Look to the Bishop, that God also may look upon you. (199.) I will be in the stead of your souls—of those who are subject to the Bishop, and the Presbyters, and the Deacons: with them may I have a portion near God. c. vi.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the city Philadelphia.

For they who are of God and of Jesus Christ, these are with the Bishop. And they who repent and come to the concord of the Church, these also are of God, that they may be living in Jesus Christ. Do not err, my brethren: whosoever cleaveth to him who rendeth the Church of God, shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Whosoever walketh in a strange mind, this man hath not consented to the passion of Christ. Take heed, therefore, to use one thanksgiving. For the flesh of our Lord Jesus Christ is one; and one is the cup of the concord of his blood. c. iii. iv.

And again. I cried, therefore, with the voice, being among you, and I spake with a loud voice, with the voice of God—attend to the Bishop, and the Presbyters, and the Deacons. And there are some who imagine respecting me, that I have said these things as though I know the divisions of some—but He in whom I am bound is witness to us, that I have not learned these things from men; but the Spirit cried and said these things: "Without the Bishop do nothing." c. vii.

Again. I tell you that I am informed that there is peace in the Church of Syria. It is becoming, therefore, to you, as a Church of God, to choose a Deacon, that he may be an ambassador of God to go thither and rejoice with them being assembled together, and that they should praise the name of the Lord. Blessed is he in Jesus Christ, whosoever is accounted worthy of this ministry. Ye also shall give praise, on account of your being willing. This is not difficult for you for the name of God, like those Holy Churches which have sent Bishops, and others, Presbyters and Deacons. c. x.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Church of Asia.

There is no power without the Bishop, neither to baptize nor to make refreshments. But whatsoever he approves, this is pleasing to God, that every thing that ye do may be true and faithful. And now it is becoming that we should be vigilant while we have time to repent towards God. This is good, that we know God and the Bishop. He who honoureth the Bishop is honoured of God. But he who doeth any thing which is concealed from the Bishop serveth Satan. Epist. Smyrn. c. viii. ix.

(P. 200.)—Again of the Same, from the same Epistle to the Magnesians, which has been mentioned above.

But consent to the Bishop, and to those who preside over you for the form and doctrine of incorruption: as, therefore, our Lord does nothing without his Father, neither in his own person, nor through his disciples, so neither do ye any thing without the Bishop and the Presbyters: neither do ye attempt that any thing should appear to be becoming to any one of you of himself and to himself, without the Bishop. c. vi. vii.

Again, from the Epistle to the Titilians (Trallians), which has been mentioned above.

Take ye then upon yourselves gentleness, and refresh yourselves in faith which is in the hope and the enjoyment of the blood of Jesus Christ. c. viii.

Again, from the Same. Be like deaf men when any one speaketh to you apart from Jesus Christ; who is of the race of the house of David from Mary; who in truth was born, and ate and drank, and in truth was persecuted in the time of Pontius Pilate, and in truth was crucified and died, while those who are in heaven, and those in earth, and those under the earth, beheld, and in truth he rose from the dead, whom his Father raised. So that the Father of Jesus Christ will in like manner raise us also who believe in him: without whom we have not the life of truth. But if as some without God, that is, without faith, say, that in supposition he was supposed to have suffered, as they themselves are in supposition, I then why am I bound, and why do I pray that I may be devoured by beasts? In vain then do I die. Why do I speak falsehood respecting our Lord? Flee, therefore, from evil off-shoots, which engender the fruits of death; that is, those which he whosoever eateth immediately dies. For these are not the plants of the Father; for if they had been the plants of the Father, they would have been seen to be the branches of the Cross; and their fruit would have continued incorruptible in the passion of the Cross of your Lord, whose members ye are. c. ix. x. xi.

Again, from that to Polycarp, which has been mentioned above.

It is becoming to thee, oh Polycarp, deserving of the happiness which is of God, that thou shouldest gather together to thee the sons of the council to a council suitable for God, and shouldest choose one that is much beloved by you (201), and is indefatigable, who might be able to be, and be called an ambassador of God. Let this man be persuaded to go to Syria: and they shall praise your love, which is unwearied for the glory of God. For the Christian has not power over himself, but is continually prepared for God. For this is God's work, and yours also, when ye shall have accomplished it. c. vii.

Here end these passages of the holy Ignatius, the God-clad and Martyr.

II.

From the Book of the holy Ignatius, the God-clad, Bishop of Antioch.

I WRITE to all the Churches, and declare to all men that I die willingly for God. I entreat you be not in love that is unseasonable. Leave me to be the beasts, that through them I may be accounted worthy of God. I am the wheat of God, and by the teeth of the beasts I am ground, that I may be found the pure bread of God. With provoking provoke ye the beasts, that they may be a grave for me, and may leave nothing of my body. Know me from myself, as to what is expedient for me. I know that now I begin to be a disciple. Let nothing envy me of those that are seen and of those that are not seen, that I should be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ. Fire and the Cross and the beasts that are prepared for me, and division and scattering of the bones, and amputation of the limbs, and torment of the whole body, and evil crushings of the Devil; let these come upon me, and only may I be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ. The boundaries of this world do not profit me, neither its kingdoms. It is better for me to die in Jesus Christ than to reign over all the boundaries of the earth. I seek him who suffered for me. I desire him who rose from the dead. And the pains of death stand. Know me from myself, brethren. Do not hinder me from life; do not desire my death. Do not honor me in this [who am one] that does not wish to be in the world. Do not provoke me to envy by those things that are seen. Leave me to receive the pure light: when I am gone thither I shall be perfected in light.¹ There is nothing which is hidden from our Lord, but even our secret things are near to him. Let us, therefore, do every thing, as though he dwelt within us; and let us be the temples of God, and he shall be God in us, from which we justly love him.² In one faith in Jesus Christ, in him who was in the flesh of the seed (202) of the house of David, who is the son of man and the Son of God.³ It is not proper when Jesus Christ is spoken of, that we should conduct ourselves like Jews; for Christianity has not believed into Judaism, but Judaism into Christianity, in which whosoever believeth is assembled before God.⁴ If then this was done in supposition by our Lord, I also am bound in supposition: and why have I delivered up myself to death, and to mocking, and to the sword, and to the beasts? But he who is near to the sword is near to God; and if he be among the beasts he is with God, only in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ who died for us: and that I may suffer with him I endure every thing. And God Jesus Christ strengtheneth me, whom some, not knowing him, deny; that is, he denyeth them.⁵ I persuade [thee] to add to thy course: be constant in fastings and in supplications to God, but not immoderately, so that thou mayest not prostrate thyself.⁶

From Eusebius' Third Book of the History of the Church.

Chapter the Twenty-second, that the second Bishop in Antioch was Ignatius.

But also in Antioch, after Evodius, who was the first Bishop there, in those times the second Bishop, Ignatius, was known. And in like manner also Simeon, the second Bishop in the Church of Jerusalem after James the brother of our Saviour, in those times held the Ministry.

Chapter the Thirty-sixth, respecting Ignatius, and respecting his Epistles.

And Ignatius, who even to this day is renowned by many, was the second Bishop in the Church of Antioch after Peter. But an account is told respecting him, that he was sent from Syria to the city of Rome, and was devoured by beasts for the sake of the testimony for Christ. When, therefore, he was passing through Asia, and was watched with much caution by the guards who kept him, he confirmed the cities into which he entered with words of consolation and encouragement; and more especially he exhorted them that they should first of all be on their guard against heresies, because that then they were already abundant; and he entreated them not to depart from the tradition of the Apostles (203). And for the greater caution, he determined to testify to them also by writing. And when he was come to Smyrna, where Polycarp was, he wrote one

Epistle to the Church at Ephesus, and mentions that they had a Pastor, Onesimus; and another to the city Magnesia, which is on the side of the river Menandrus, in which also he mentions that there was a Bishop there, whose name was Damas: and again another to the city Tralles; and he writes, that there was there a Chief, whose name was Polybius. And besides these, he also wrote to the Church of Rome, and presented in it a request to them, that they would not beg off his martyrdom, and deprive him of the hope which he loved. From which it is right that we should set down a few things, for a proof of what has been said. He wrote then in his words thus: "From Syria even to Rome I contend with beasts, by sea and by land, by night and by day, being bound with ten leopards, which are the band of soldiers, who, when we do good to them, they do evil: and by their evil treatment I become more a disciple; but not on this account am I justified to myself. I salute the beasts which are prepared for me, and I pray that they may be quickly found for me, and I will provoke them to devour me speedily; not as that which is afraid of others, and does not approach them: for even if they should refrain, and be not willing to approach me, I will go with violence against them. Know me from myself. What is expedient for me I know. Now I begin to be a disciple. Let nothing envy me of those that are seen and of those that are not seen, that I should be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ. Fire and the Cross and the collection of beasts, and scattering of the bones, and amputations of the limbs, and destruction of the whole body, and the torment of Satan—let all these come upon me, and only may I be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ." And these Epistles he wrote from that city of which we have spoken to those Churches which we have enumerated. When, then, they had passed Smyrna he wrote again from Troas to those who were in Philadelphia, and to the Church of Smyrna, but personally to the Bishop there, Polycarp, whom he knew to be an imitator of the Apostles; and like a good and true Pastor, he commended to him his flock in Antioch, and persuaded him to take care of it with diligence. And the same, writing to those who were at Smyrna, used these words; I know not from whence; that he said thus respecting Christ—"I also, after his resurrection in the flesh, know him; and I bear witness and believe that he is (204). And when he came to those of the house of Peter, he said to them, 'Take, feel me and see, that I am not a bodyless spirit:' and immediately they drew near to him and believed." But Irenæus also knew his martyrdom, and mentions his Epistles, and says thus: "As one of those belonging to us, who on account of the testimony for God was condemned to be thrown to beasts, said, 'I am the wheat of God, and by the teeth of beasts am I ground, that I may be found pure bread.'" Polycarp also mentions these same in the Epistle which he wrote to the Philippians, in these words: "I beseech you all to be persuaded, and continue in all that patience which ye saw with your eyes, not only in the blessed Ignatius and Rufus, and Zosimus, but also in others who were of you: also in Paul himself, and in the rest of the Apostles, being persuaded that all these have not run in vain, but in faith and righteousness, and are now in the place that is due to them near our Lord, with whom they suffered. For they loved not this [world], but Jesus Christ who died for us, and for our sakes rose again from the dead." And afterwards he said, "Ye have written to me, ye and Ignatius, that if any one go to Syria, he should also bear your letters, which thing I will do if I have a convenient time—either I, or he whom I send to be an ambassador also for you. The Epistles which were sent to us from Ignatius, and the others which we have by us, we have sent to you, as you gave charge, which are subjoined to this Epistle, from which ye may be much profited, for there is in them faith and patience, and all the edification which is requisite for the fear of our Lord. Respecting Ignatius, then, there are such things as these. But after him Heros receives the Bishopric of Antioch.

From Chapter the Thirty-seventh, respecting the Evangelists who flourished up to that time.

In as much, therefore, as it is not easy for us to enumerate by name all those who received the first succession of the Apostles, who were Pastors and Evangelists in all the Churches that are in all the world, we have made mention in writing by name of those only through whose writings we have even until now the tradition of the doctrine of the Apostles, as of Ignatius in the Epistles which we have enumerated.

(P. 205.) Chapter the Thirty-eighth, respecting the Epistles of Clement, and respecting those books which are falsely said to be his.

And of Clement, in the Epistle that he wrote, which all men acknowledge, which he wrote us from the Church of Rome to the Church of Corinth. Into this there are introduced by him many conceptions of thought from the Epistle to the Hebrews. And again, he has also written sentences in the form of writing, as it is expressed in that; and he has shewn plainly that the writing of this Epistle to the Hebrews is not recent. And on this account it is justly reckoned among the rest of the Epistles of the Apostle. For the Apostle wrote to the Hebrews, and spake with them in the language of the fathers. There are some who say that Luke the Evangelist translated it; and there are some who say this Clement did. And it is likely that this is true; for this Epistle to the Hebrews and his Epistle have one form of expression, and the conceptions of thought which are in both of them are not far apart from one another. But it is proper to know, that a second Epistle also is said to be by Clement; but we are not plainly persuaded that it is his, like the former, because we do not know of the ancients having used it. Again, also, some persons have a short time ago produced another book of many words as his, in which is a dispute of Peter and Apion: but no one of the ancients has mentioned it at all. For neither is there in it the form of the pure and true doctrine of the Apostles. The writing, therefore, of Clement, which all men confess is well known: but we have spoken also of Ignatius and Polycarp.

From the Eighth Chapter of the Fifth Book of the History of the Church.

And he (Irenæus) mentions again what a certain Presbyter recorded who had received from the Apostles, but whose name he has not handed down to us, and he introduces also explanations of the divine Scriptures by the same. And again, he also mentions Justin Martyr and Ignatius, and uses testimonies from their writings.

IV.

Of my Lord John the Monk, from the Epistle which he sent to the Monks Eutropius and Eusebius, who had requested him to write to them respecting the mystery of the communion of the truth in the new life—for what reason the truth of the future has been spoken in parables, and respecting the figures (206) in which God is spoken of, and proof respecting the soul, and how it is becoming for a man to meditate in this life upon the union of the divine and human natures, together with other matters.

Love at all times knoweth how to love, but to repay, never. And this we can understand from the example of the Lord of all. * *

As I said then, my brethren, it is right that we should manifest this love towards each other; more especially towards the Lord of all. For all the Saints who loved God, when their love towards him was hidden in the power of their soul, proclaimed their love by the Voice, that is, by the death of the flesh which is the Voice; because they were not able in any other way to shew their love, but by even going out of Voice, in being divested of the flesh, that they might become Word and not Voice. For whilst they were in the world of the Voice they were men of the Voice; but after they are gone out of the world of the Voice they will be men of the Word and not of the Voice.

Awake yourselves to what I say, and now more than ever be spiritual listeners to me, and if it be possible, by the senses of the spirit be moved at mysteries such as these. Not that we have risen above your knowledge, but that ye may be more confirmed in the knowledge of the hope of your calling. For to whom should we speak these things, but to him who resembles you in wisdom? But that it might be not supposed that I speak from opinion, and not from grace, respecting the man of the Voice and the Word, we will shew you evidently, by bringing, as testimony to our words, the authority of one of the Saints. And if many teachers have adduced authorities for the subjects before them from the writings of the learned Josephus, how much more just is it that the testimony of the Saints should be received—I mean of the blessed Ignatius, the glorious Martyr, who was the second Bishop after the Apostles in Antioch of Syria, who, when he went up to Rome in the testimony for Christ, wrote Epistles to certain cities; and in that to Rome, when he was persuading them not to hinder him from the testimony of Christ, said, "If ye be silent from me, I shall be the Word of God; but if ye love my flesh, again am I to myself a Voice (206). And he implored them to cease from intreating respecting him, and begged them not to love his life of the flesh better than his life in the spirit. Were these things spoken in an ordinary way by this Saint? What, then, is this, that after his departure from this world he is to himself a Word; but if he continue he is to himself a Voice? Do you wish that we should speak or be silent? Is this mystery made known to us without grace? Or is it becoming that we should make light of his saying, and pass it over in an ordinary manner? That be far from us. For this man of God deserves to be reckoned amongst the company of the Apostles, of whom I had almost said, that whilst he was in the flesh in the world he had immersed himself from the world with his Lord: as he also himself said, "Then am I faithful when I am not seen in the world;" and, "It is good for me that I should set from the world in God, that I may rise in Him in life." And again he said, "Let nothing envy me of those that are seen and that are not seen." That there might be no indignity, therefore, to the greatness of this man of God through what I say, I honour him in silence, and approach to the saying which he spake, "If ye are silent from me," and leave me to die in sacrifice, "I am to myself the Word of God;" but if not, "I am to myself a Voice." In that he says, I am to myself a Word, he wishes to shew us this, that in the world to come man is of the spirit, and that the wisdom of the truth is not known in this life of the flesh; because if the wisdom of the truth were spoken by the voice in the new life, there would be allegories and types even there, because the voice is not able to bring forth the mystery of the truth without the similitude of the flesh. And it is known that the similitude is to be done away with, according to the teaching of Paul for us—that we see now as in a mirror the similitude of the face of the truth, but at the last the image itself of its beauty, without the glass of allegories—the riches of his wisdom in the knowledge of the truth, as the vision of face to face, without any thing intermediate to shew the similitude: for the truth in the new life is made known to us openly. And this again, "If I shall continue I am to myself a Voice:" he desires to teach that the life here is the business of the flesh in a compound person; for the Word is not of the flesh, but of the spirit; but the Voice is not of the spirit, but of the flesh, because all bodies have the Voice only, but have not the Word, inasmuch as they have not in them the soul in the person. For every beast and bird, together with cattle and creeping thing of the earth, utter the Voice only; but because man has in him a soul, and is not like the rest of the other bodies (208), he uses the Word and the Voice, that by means of the Word the nature of the soul might be known, and by means of the Voice the body of his person. For the Word belongs to the power of the intellect of the soul, but the Voice to the conformation of the flesh. But because all bodies are of a nature without a soul, on this account also they are without the Word; and because the conformation of their nature is flesh only, on this account they utter only the Voice; for the Word is apart from all bodies, because the soul is separated from them all. Because, therefore, the soul dwelleth in man only, for this reason in man only is the Word found; but the Voice proceeds from the warmth of the blood, in which consists the moving principle of the life of the flesh. And because there is no other hidden nature implanted in those orders of beasts and fowls, so that from the cleverness of their knowledge they may produce something intelligible by the Voice, on this account from these bodies the Voice only is heard, without any distinction of the utterance of words. For the Word is concealed in the hidden parts of the flesh, like the soul, and is enunciated by the Voice; and like as the soul is mingled with the body, the Word is mixed with the Voice. Nor again, by the mechanism of the organ are the distinctions of the voices uttered without the motion of the wind, because even this has the understanding of the distinction of the voices from the knowledge of the power of the soul; by means of this organ which it has put on giving the distinctions of the voices by the art of the conformation of the organ; because the invention of this art proceeds from the wisdom of its knowledge. The understanding, therefore, of the nature of the soul is distinct from the proofs from the Scriptures. By these things is the power of the essence of the soul known; I mean, by the versatility of its thoughts, and by the variety of opinions, and by the invention of arts, and by the speculation upon hidden things: for the hidden nature which is set within us moves within us in the contemplation of hidden things, whereas the nature of body is limited to things that are manifest. For as the ear is not able to hear silence, nor the eye to see the spirit, but the hearing heareth the voice, and the sight seeth conformation; so there is nothing in the nature of the body that is able to look into hidden things, because the inspection of hidden things is a contemplation belonging to the nature of the soul, whose vision the body does not limit; nor does the wonderful mechanism of the heavens stand in the way of its contemplation; nor is it impeded by the magnitude of their glorious vision. But the contemplation of the soul can be with power on high mountains and in secret places, whereas every thing that stands in the way of the body can impede its vision, so that it may not be carried beyond it.

But I am not alleging (209), as in a discussion, proofs respecting the soul, to require many things to be said; but I am sowing a few things into your ears, that they may be instruction for you. But more especially from the reasoning faculty of the Word do we comprehend the power of the soul which is in us; because the reasoning faculty of the Word is not found in any of the bodies, as we have said, but in man only; for the Word of Life is not given in its intelligence to the mortal nature of the flesh, because it has only the Voice. And inasmuch as the soul is not able to speak to the flesh, that is, to another man, without the voice; more especially because the hearing faculty of the body is not able to hear without the voice: for this reason, those things being secret which in the midst of the covering of the flesh are set in the knowledge of the soul, together with the motion of the power of the soul desiring to bring to light its secret things, the body also is moved, in order that it may declare through the Voice to the hearing faculty those things which from the power of the soul were moved by the Word in the flesh: because the Voice is the interpreter of the Word; and according to the order of nature, the Voice is the declarer of the Word, and by it this is made known to the hearing.

Thus, also, was it effected in this economy of Christ, that John the Baptist, because he was about to preach respecting God the Word, was called a Voice—I am the Voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare the way. For whom? but for the Word the Lord, whom he preached that men should prepare a way in their souls for the coming of his doctrine. The Son is therefore called the Word, in order that he might shew us that he is from the Father in nature, like as the Word also is begotten from the power of the soul. Our Lord therefore put on the flesh, like the Word the Voice: and more than is the mixture of the Word with the Voice, is the mixture of God the Word with the flesh which he put on. And as the Word is in the Voice, because it has put it on, not like the form of clothing, but hidden in its reasoning faculty, being unlimited, and it is made known manifestly by the hearing; so the Word God dwelt in perfect flesh in his fulness, because in him dwelt all his fulness being unlimited. And as the Word continueth in the soul, and is sent forth from the soul that it may be known to the hearing of many, but taketh the Voice from the nature of the body, and by it is made known to the hearing, because the hearing faculties of men are not sufficient for it to be made manifest alone without the Voice; so also God the Word was with the Father: but when he was sent forth from the Fatherhood to be manifested to men, abiding still with the Father, he took a perfect body of our nature (210), and in it became visible and was manifested to the family of men: for alone without our image men were not able to see him.

Until they repent to that passion which is our resurrection. Let no man err. Even heavenly things and the glory of angels and principalities, visible and invisible, unless they believe in the blood of Christ that it is of God, there is judgment even for them. He who can receive it let him receive it. Let not place puff up any one, for all this is faith and charity, than which nothing is more excellent. c. v. vi.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Romans.

There is nothing which is seen that is becoming. For our God Jesus Christ, being in the Father, is the more seen. The work is not of persuasion, but the Christian is of greatness when he is hated by the world. I write to all the Churches (211), and charge all men that by my own will I die for God, if it be that ye hinder [me] not. c. iii. iv.

And after a few [words].

It is better for me to die for the sake of Jesus Christ than to reign over the ends of the earth. I seek him who died for us. I desire him who rose on our account. The birth is set over me. Leave me alone, my brethren. Do not hinder me from life: do not desire that I should die. Do not give the world to him who desireth to be God's. Neither entice me by any thing material: leave me to receive the pure light. When I go thither I shall be a man. Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God. If any one possess himself in himself, let him understand what I desire, and suffer with me, knowing those things which encompass me. c. vi.

Many proofs of the holy Fathers, which shew that the Virgin is the mother of God, and that Jesus Christ is true God, and that he is one and the same Son who of God the Father was divinely confessed, and of the Holy Virgin by taking of the flesh was written among the generations, and that by the birth of the Word in the flesh he submitted to suffering and death, and that Christ himself is the Word of God.

Of the blessed Ignatius, Bishop and Martyr, from the Epistle to the Ephesians.

Where is the wise? Where is the disputer? Where is the boasting of those who are called knowing? For our God Jesus Christ was conceived of Mary in the economy of God, of the seed of David, and of the Holy Ghost: who was born and baptized, that he might purify the passible waters. And there deceived the ruler of this world, the virginity of Mary and her child-birth, and in like manner also the death of the Lord, three mysteries of the shout, which were done in the silence of God. c. xviii. xix.

There is one God, who manifested himself through Jesus Christ his Son, who is his eternal Word: he did not proceed from silence: who in every thing pleased him who sent him. c. viii.

Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God. Epist. Rom. c. vi.

Of Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna and Martyr, from the Epistle to the Philippians.

But God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the chief Priest of eternity himself, God Jesus Christ, build you up in faith and truth, and in all meekness.

Of Clement, Bishop of Rome, from the first Epistle on Virginity.

Understandest thou then what honour chastity requires? Knowest thou then with what glory virginity has been glorified? The womb of the Virgin bare our Lord Jesus Christ, God the Word; and when our Lord was made man by the Virgin, with this conduct did he conduct himself in the world. By this thou mayest know the glory of virginity.

Of the Same, from the beginning of the third Epistle.

My brethren, thus it behoveth us to think concerning Jesus Christ, as concerning God, as concerning the Judge of the living and the dead. And it is not right for us to think small things concerning our salvation; for by our thinking small things concerning it, we also expect to receive small things. And when we hear as concerning small things, we sin, in that we do not know from whence we are called, and by whom, and to what place, and all those things which Jesus Christ endured to suffer for our sakes.

Of the Same.

There is one Christ our Lord, who saved us, who was first spirit, became then in the flesh, and thus called us.

From the book of my Lord the holy Severus, Patriarch of Antioch, against the wicked Grammaticus.

Testimonies of the holy Fathers who from Apostolic times delivered soundly the mystery of the right word of faith, and beheld Emmanuel one and the same in miracles and in suffering, and rejected the wicked distinction of a duality of natures after the union.

(P. 213.) Of Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, from the Epistle to the Romans.

Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God. But it is found in other copies, which are rather older than these, thus:— Permit ye me to be a disciple of the suffering of my God. c. vi.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to Polycarp.

Be observant of the times. Expect Him who is above the times, Him who is without times, Him invisible, Him who for our sakes was visible, Him impalpable, Him without suffering, Him who for our sakes was subject to suffering, Him who for our sakes endured in every manner. c. iii.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Ephesians.

When ye were inflamed by the blood of God, ye perfectly accomplished a deed worthy of the race. c. i.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to those who were in Magnesia.

Take care to do every thing, the Bishop sitting in the place of God, and the Presbyters in the place of the session of the Apostles, who are entrusted with the ministry of Jesus Christ; who before the worlds was with the Father, and in the end was manifested. c. vi.

Of the Same, from the same Epistle.

For the divine prophets lived in Jesus Christ: on this account, they were also persecuted, who by his grace were inspired with the Spirit, so that they who were not persuaded might be persuaded, that there is one God who revealed himself through Jesus Christ his Son, who is his Word, who proceeded from silence, who in every thing pleased him who sent him. c. viii.

“That he proceeded from silence” is, that he was ineffably begotten of the Father, and like the word incomprehensible what it might be, or the mind. Therefore it is just that he should be honoured in silence, and not that his divine and unprecedented birth should be enquired into: who, having this exaltation, for our sakes became man, not convertibly, but truly, and in every thing pleased the Father when he fulfilled the obedience for us.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Trallians.

For when ye are subject to the Bishop as to Jesus Christ (214), ye seem to me not to be living as men, but as Jesus Christ: who for our sakes died, that believing in his death ye may flee from this that ye are to die. c. ii.

Of the Same, from the same Epistle.

If then, like men who are without God, that is, do not believe, they say that in supposition he suffered, when they themselves are in supposition, I, why am I bound? Why then do I also pray that I may contend with beasts? In vain then do I die. I belie therefore the Lord. Flee therefore from evil branches which engender fruits that bear death, which if a man taste he dies immediately. c. x. xi.

Of the Same, from the Epistle to the Smyrneans.

I praise Jesus Christ God, who has thus made you wise. For I knew that ye were perfect in faith immoveable, as if ye were nailed to the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, in flesh and in spirit, and ye are confirmed in love in the blood of Christ; and it is confirmed to you that our Lord in truth is of the race of David in the flesh, but the Son of God by the will and the power of God, who was born in truth of the Virgin, who was baptized of John, in order that all righteousness might be fulfilled by him. Truly before Pontius Pilate and Herod the Tetrarch he was nailed for us in the flesh, whose fruit we are, from his suffering divinely blest, in order that he may raise a sign to eternity by his resurrection for his saints, and his believers, whether among the Jews or among the Gentiles, in one body of his church. For all these things he suffered for our sakes, in order that we may be saved; and truly he suffered, truly also he raised himself. c. i. ii.

Of Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna and Martyr, from the Epistle to the Philippians.

In the same manner the Deacons blameless before his righteousness, are Deacons of God and Christ, and not of men.

Of the Same, from the same Epistle.

But God himself and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the eternal Chief Priest himself (215), God Jesus Christ, build you up in faith and in truth, and in all gentleness, and in all absence of wrath, and patience, and endurance of Spirit, and in perseverance, and in chastity.

Of Clement, the third Bishop of Rome after the Apostles, from the second Epistle to the Corinthians.

My brethren, thus is it right for us to think concerning Jesus Christ, as concerning God, as concerning the Judge of the living and the dead, and it is not right for us to think small things concerning our salvation: for if we think small things concerning it, we hope also to receive small things. And when we hear as concerning small things, we sin, because we do not know from whence we are called, and by whom, and to what place; and how much Jesus Christ endured to suffer for us.

VIII.

From the First Book of the Epithronian Sermons of the holy Severus, Patriarch of Antioch.

From the thirty-seventh sermon, on Basil the Great and on Gregory Theologus. But it was delivered in the church of the Martyr the holy Ignatius.

Thus in their will they seemed martyrs, for they were not held by their seats, neither were they bound by the pleasures of this world. Since, then, they emulated the God-clad Ignatius, they said, "It is good to set from the world and to rise in Christ." c. ii. For this reason we have assembled you in this his house, the house of prayer, for the commemoration of these Saints; and we have proceeded in the discourse to their praises, honoring the teacher through his disciples.

From the Second Book of the Epithronian Sermons of the holy Severus, Patriarch of Antioch.

From the sixty-fifth sermon, on the holy Basil and Gregory; but a few additional words are spoken towards the end of it also respecting the God-clad Ignatius.

(215.) In the same manner, also, the God-clad Ignatius, who now has set before us this spiritual banquet in his house, which is the house of prayer, and who rejoices in the praiseworthy virtues of his disciples, was appropriately named Ignatius from facts, because he foreknew things future; for any one who is only moderately acquainted with the language of the Romans knows that Nūrono, that is, inflamed, as we also say, was derived from hence; for the Romans call the fire which is lighted up and in flames, Ignis.* Who then is he that has in himself the flame, that is to say, the lamp of divine love, and is inflamed by the desire to suffer for Christ? The same who also, in writing to the Romans, says: "Fire and beasts and ten thousand sorts of torments, let them come upon me, only may I be accounted worthy of Jesus Christ." c. v. And since he had this within him for him who was beloved, which is also wonderful, on this account also he crieth, "From within he saith to me, 'Come thou to my Father.'" c. vii. Not only, then, in the similarity of the name, which commencing with God, was appropriated to Basil and Gregory, did they resemble Ignatius, but also in the strenuous stand for the truth, in boldness of speech, in

* It is right to know also here that the Romans do not call fire simply Ignis; but those fires which are kindled on elevated places, and shew some signal which is not yet near, such and such; as those which are kindled upon hills and upon heights, and blaze and shew the approach of the enemies, according to a compact and sign prearranged, which the Greeks call πυρσος: for this reason the Teacher says, "because he foreknew things future."

contests, in suffering, in the harmony of preaching. For they knew God, and taught the word of God which without conversion was made flesh, and was crucified for us and suffered in the flesh; while they little heeded the Simonian and Nestorian advocacy, which is blinded and offended unholily at the suffering of the Godhead; for they are persuaded that the suffering did not touch that unpassable one, although by way of the economy as one made flesh and made man he would be in suffering when he was astonished at the sting of death which is against us and of sin. And Ignatius indeed said, "Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God." Epist. Rom. c. vi.

(217.) From the eighty-fourth sermon, on Basil the Great, and on Gregory Theologus. But it was delivered according to custom in the interior of the house of prayer of the God-clad Martyr Ignatius.

And they fixed their view towards heaven like the God-clad Ignatius, and looked for the excellent things which are above, and were steadfast, and conversed with bodyless spirits, and, were out of the flesh even when in the flesh. Take for me, as a proof of these things, the words of him who as in reality had put on God. "For I say, not because I am bound and am able to understand the heavenly things, and the places of angels, and the stations of principalities, visible and invisible, from this am I already a disciple; for many things are lacking to us, so that we may not be lacking of God." Epist. Trall. c. v.

Let us, therefore, since Christ is our head and master, and not man, as he says in the Gospels, be prepared for the kingdom of Heaven: like the saying of the Martyr Ignatius, "So that we may not be altogether lacking of God. To him to whom it is becoming, be praise for ever and ever. Amen.

IX.

From the Book of the Proofs of the Fathers against the wicked Grammaticus.

Of Ignatius Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, from the Epistle to the Romans.

Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God. c. vi. Of the Same, after some other [words], from the Epistle to the Ephesians.

(218.) Also Ignatius, in whom Christ dwelt and spake even as in Paul, and from this he was named the God-clad: for he wrote to the Ephesians after this manner. Ignatius:

Ignorance was dissipated, the antient kingdom was destroyed, when God was manifested [as] man, for the renewal of life without end: and that which was perfect by God took a beginning. From hence every thing was moved as one because the destruction of death was prepared. c. xix.

But also Ignatius the God-clad and Martyr, in writing to the Ephesians, taught that Christ, in that he was passible, that is, in the flesh, after the trial of sufferings and death was at the last impassible: when still in that he was always God, he was also always impassible. But he speaks thus. Ignatius:

There is one physician, carnal and spiritual, made and not made, God amongst men, true life in death, both from Mary and from God, first passible, and then impassible, Jesus Christ our Lord. c. vii.

Again of the same, from the Epistle to the Ephesians.

For there is one physician, carnal and spiritual, made and not made,

God in man, true life in death, from Mary and from God, first possible and then impassible, Jesus Christ our Lord. c. vii.

Of the holy Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, from his Epistle to the Smyrneans.

I warn you of evil men, who are beasts and possess only the form of men, that not only is it not right that you should receive them, but if it be possible ye should not even meet them, but only pray for them, that they may repent, which is difficult, but Jesus Christ has the power over this. c. iv.

XIII.

And again the blessed Ignatius, Patriarch of Antioch, who was the second after Peter the Apostle, and he also spake thus in the Epistle to the Ephesians. Ignatius :

But there deceived the ruler of this world the virginity of Mary and her child-birth, and in the same manner also the death of our Lord. c. xix.

Permit ye me to be an imitator of the suffering of my God. c. vi.

XV.

From the Epistle of my Lord the holy Philoxenus, Bishop of Mabug, against the passion of the soul.

XVI.

From the book called the Bee, which was composed by my Lord Solomon, Metropolitan of Perat Maisan.

John the son of Zebedee, he also was from Bethsaida of the tribe of Zabulon. He preached at first in Asia, and afterwards he was sent into banishment to the island of Patmos by Tiberius Cæsar, and then he went up to Ephesus and built a church there. And there went up with him three disciples—Ignatius, who was afterwards Bishop of Antioch, and was thrown to beasts at Rome, and Polycarp, who was Bishop in Syria (Smyrna) and received the crown of martyrdom by fire, and that John on whom he conferred the priesthood and the seat of the bishopric after him. He then, having lived a long time, died and was buried in Ephesus. For he gave charge that no man should know his sepulchre: and there are two sepulchres of the same in Ephesus: one concealed of the Evangelist himself, and the other of his disciple John, who wrote the Apocalypse, for he says that from the mouth of John the Evangelist he heard every thing that he wrote.

(221.) That child, whom our Lord called and set up and said—that unless ye be converted, become like a child, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven—was Ignatius who was Patriarch of Antioch. And he saw the angels ministering in two bands, and instituted that they should minister in the church in the same manner. And after a time this institution was abolished, and when Diodorus went with his father in the embassy to the country of Persia, and saw them ministering in two bands, he came to his own country Antioch, and renewed the practice of ministering in two bands.

Ignatius the God-clad saw in a divine vision the hosts on high chanting in two bands, and he delivered it to the holy church of God to chant in the same manner.

XVIII.

At that time Domitian raised a persecution against the Christians, and John the Evangelist was sent to Patmos. But when Evodius had continued 30 years in Antioch, Ignatius became Bishop there, and he first instituted that two bands should chant in the Church.

And also Ignatius, when he had ruled 15 years, was cast to beasts at Rome, and Heron stood in his stead. In the 9th year John the Evangelist departed this world, having continued in the Episcopate seventy years: and Ignatius and Polycarp were his disciples, and the life of John was prolonged to the 9th year of the reign of Trajan.

XIX.

In the year 119, Trajan made Armenia a province, and in the same year Ignatius, who had been the disciple of John the Evangelist, suffered Martyrdom in Antioch.

(222.) THE TESTIMONY OF MY LORD IGNATIUS,
WHICH HE TESTIFIED IN THE DAYS OF THE EMPEROR TRAJAN.

At that same time, when the wicked Emperor Trajan had received the government of the Romans, Ignatius, who was the disciple of the Apostle John the Evangelist, a man * * * who in all actions resembled the Apostles, and like a wise sailor directed the Church in Antioch, and with difficulty passed through the former tempests from the many persecutions in the days of Domitian, and like a good pilot, with the helm of prayer and constant fasting, and by the admonition of spiritual works stood up against the tumults of the power of the enemy, being afraid and fearful lest he should lose any of the humble and of little strength. And he therefore rejoiced at the stability of the Church, and at its rest a little from persecution: for he was subdued in himself lest he should go astray from that true love of Christ, to which he had been brought near, and should be hindered from the perfection of the rank of the Disciples. For it was set in his mind, that by the testimony of Confession, if it should happen and befall him, he would be brought very near to God. And on this account having been a few years constant in the Church, like a divine lamp, having enlightened the hearts of all men by explaining the Scriptures which were disclosed to him through prayer —.

Trajan, then, after nine years of his reign, his heart being lifted up on account of the conquest of the Scythians and the Dacians and of many other nations, and thinking that it was becoming to him, and that his victory was very imperfect unless he subdued the Christians and the people who feared God, to compel them also to worship devils, and together with all men to put on the superstition of the nations, while he threatened to persecute all the Saints, that either they should sacrifice to devils, or should receive punishment * * * he oppressed them. At the same time [being afraid] on account of the Churches at Antioch, that [noble] soldier of Christ, Ignatius, of his own free will * * * came even to Trajan; for he was [staying] at that time in Antioch, and was hastening next to make a descent upon Armenia and upon the Parthians. When then he stood before Trajan face to face, Trajan said to him, "What art thou, O ill-fated man! who art precipitate, and hastenest to transgress my orders, and persuadest (223) others also, to perish in an evil manner?" The holy Ignatius then said to him, "A man is not to call him ill-fated who is the habitation of God; for those devils and demons, which thou servest, are removed to a great distance from the servants of God. But if, because I am a burden upon those evil ones and against the unclean spirits, thou callest me ill-fated, even I myself confess this; because I have Christ the king who dwelleth in heaven, Him who destroys and frustrates all their inventions." Trajan said to him, "And who is he that has God clothed upon him?" Then Ignatius answered him and said to him, "He who has Christ in his heart." Trajan says to him, "With respect to us, then, dost thou not think that the gods are in our mind, since they are our helpers in the wars?" Ignatius then said to him, "The devils of the nations thou callest gods, so art thou in error; for there is one God who made all things in heaven and in earth and in the seas and in every thing that is in them, and one Jesus Christ his Son, who is the only [Son], whom I look to, that I may live in his love." Trajan says to him, "Dost thou speak of him who was crucified before Pontius Pilate?" Ignatius says to him, "Him I speak of, who has crucified sin and the inventor of it: Him who has condemned [the deceit] of devils, and subdued them under the feet of those * * * who bear him in their hearts." Trajan then said to him, "Hast thou, then, put him on and art clothed with Christ?" Ignatius said to him, "Yea: for it is written, I will dwell in them and I will walk in them." Trajan said, "We command that Ignatius who saith, that commonly in every place he beareth him who was crucified, should go in bonds and by the hands of the Romans, to Rome the great, and there be food for beasts, and that the people of the Romans may be pleased by him, when they see that which hath befallen him." When, then, the holy Martyr heard this order, he cried with great joy and said, "I thank thee, Lord, that thou hast accounted me worthy of thy perfect love, and hast deemed me worthy of the bonds of thy Apostle Paul, and hast bound me in iron." And having said these things, with great joy he received the bonds upon him; and prayed, first for the Church, with many tears, imitating his Lord in this, that like a notable ram of a good flock, he went at the head of it. And by the fierceness and the malice of the Romans he was snatched away, that he might be sent to Rome for the food of rapacious beasts. And with much readiness, then, and with great joy, in the desire of the sufferings of the cross, he went down from Antioch to Seleucia (221), and from thence he began to pass by the sea; and having with much labour arrived at the city of Smyrna, with great joy, having descended from the ship, he went to the holy Polycarp Bishop of Smyrna, who was his fellow in the obedience of Christ, whom also he was desirous of seeing, for formerly they had been disciples together of the Apostle John. And when he was come to him, and they had communicated with one another in the gifts of the Spirit, and communicated with one another also in bonds * * * * * he entreated him then that he also would forward his * * * * * and his alacrity. But the more because in all the churches in every place this holy man was received in a friendly manner by the Bishops, and Presbyters, and Deacons, who were in the churches of the cities, who assembled and came to him, that they also, perhaps, might have a portion and communion in his gifts, and might be reckoned worthy to receive some of his spiritual gifts, but more especially the holy Polycarp. For the blessed man looked forward, that by means of the beasts he might speedily depart from this world and might be known before the face of Christ. And thus he spake, and testified by many things of his love of Christ. Stretched out were his hands; and the hope of his heart [was], that he might obtain heavenly things by a good testimony, and by the help of the prayers of those who prayed for his struggle and his contest; and with much solicitude he besought God, that those churches might have their reward, which came to meet him by means of their chief persons, and conducted him with letters of thanks. When, then, he saw the love of all men towards him, and the access by means of their ministry to the love of God, he was afraid and feared lest he might go astray from his unanimity and love towards his Lord, by means of the solicitude which there was for him from many, and might wander from the door of that martyrdom to which he was sent. And he wrote and sent to the Church of the Romans, as it is written below.

“Ignatius, who has put on God, to her who is magnified in the greatness of the Most High and of Jesus Christ His only Son, the church beloved and illumined by the will of God who bindeth and holdeth all, and the love of Jesus Christ; her, who has the first seat in the place of the Romans, who is worthy of God and worthy of His splendour, and worthy of happiness and glory, and worthy of those things which she asketh, * * * and worthy of chastity, and sitteth in the seat of * * * * of love in the law of Christ; in the name of the Father I * * * *; and in the name of the Son (225), in the flesh and mixed with the Spirit, I, who am supported in all the commandments of God by His grace and His mercy, without division and purged from all strange things, more especially through Jesus Christ our God, blameless, peace and joy I give. I have prayed, and it has been granted to me, that I should behold their faces that are worthy of God, which from a long time I have asked, that I may find in the flesh; by Jesus Christ I hope to come and salute you, if there be this will, and I be accounted worthy to bear these things even to the end. For, if in the beginning, and if in the end, by the good administrations which I have begun I look forward, that I may obtain this grace even to the end, to receive my inheritance without hindrance; but I am afraid of your love, lest it should injure me. For I know that it is easy for you, to do all that you wish; but for me, it is difficult for me that I may find God, more especially if your sparing be upon me. But I entreat you, because I have no desire that you should please men, for lo also ye do please: for neither shall I find a time like this that I may draw near to God; nor will ye find, if it be that ye should ask, a deed like this, and will ye be more tranquil. For if ye be quiet from me, I am to myself the Word of God; but if ye love my flesh, I am then a Voice * * *

EXCERPTA IGNATIANA

Deus, conditor omnium creaturarum, devictor omnium¹ graduum et principatus omnium² naturarum, in tribus personis, perfectis ἐν εἰκότι καὶ προσώπῳ, cum in throno gloriæ suæ sederet Omnipotens, una e tribus personis³ in utero Dominæ nostræ, Sanctæ Virginis Mariæ habitavit, propter unionem Deitatis, de qua hoc loco loquimur, factam in Filio; non enim loquimur de Patre et Spiritu Sancto, neque unquam diximus, illos ad assumptionem humanæ naturæ in utero Virginis habitasse, sed potius Filium solum, unam e tribus personis, eumque natum esse ex illa.⁴ Ille crucifixus est in ligno crucis, et remittit culpam; ille in sepulchro, et resuscitat mortuos; ille extra sepulchrum, et relinquit sudarium in eo; ille, januis clausis, intravit ad discipulos suos, et dedit iis pacem. Credimus, esse Patrem in Filio et Spiritu Sancto, et Filium in Patre et Spiritu Sancto, et Spiritum Sanctum in Patre et Filio. Hæc Trinitas æqualis (est) sine separatione et sine commutatione, in tribus personis, et una Deitas unaque Majestas; et unum arbitrium unaque potestas; et unum regnum, una adoratio, et una gratiarum actio, et una gloria debetur Trino Sancto. est Trini Sancti. Pater est Pater, nec est Filius, nec Spiritus Sanctus; Filius est Filius, non est Pater, nec Spiritus Sanctus; et Spiritus Sanctus est Spiritus Sanctus, non est Pater, nec Filius. Nec convertitur Pater in Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, nec Filius in Patrem et Spiritum Sanctum, nec Spiritus Sanctus in Patrem et Filium. Hi Tres perfecti sunt in throno gloriæ, conjuncti vinculo unius Deitatis, quæ est lumen unum, unde exoritur Trinitas, et implet omnes creaturas, et illustrat eos, qui sub terra sunt; sicut scriptum est: “Ego impleo cœlum et terram, et qui infra in inferno sunt, gloriam meam aspiciunt.” (Jerem. xxiii. 24.).

Erubescas tu quoque, qui Deitatem passam et mortuam esse dicis, cum verba nostra audieris. Nos credimus, Christum Deum passum esse in carne, hominis instar, nec passum esse in Deitate, gustavisse mortem in carne, nec mortuum esse in Deitate. Et quum audieris, Deum Verbum passum esse pro nobis, et⁵ mortuum esse Deum Verbum⁶ propter redemptionem nostram, intelligas, nos Deitatem cum humanitate in unam naturam unire, et uno illo nomine, quod debetur Deo, nominare; sicut tu quoque e duabus naturis, i. e. anima et corpore, (compositus es), et uno illo nomine, quod debetur homini, nominaris. Et anima tua, quamvis non Deitas sit, immortalis est suâ ipsius naturâ, et diversa a corpore. Jam illam dignitatem, quam animis nostris, quia immortales sunt, attribuere placet, cur eandem attribuere non velis Deitati Trinitatis uni, quæ subsistit in Filio Unigenito, Domino nostro Jesu Christo? Nonne scis, dicendo—“Deitas mortua est,” te fieri interfectorem Trini Sancti, et corpus Domini nostri in sepulchro perfecte idem a te reddi, ac cadavera mortuorum⁷, et separari a Deitate sua, quia substantia Trinitatis una est, scilicet una Deitas? Jam ubinam erit is, qui mortem devicit, et infernum captivum duxit? Tu autem reddis eum tanquam imbecillum, numerandum cum mortuis, qui non moventur, viribus destituti.

Immo vero alii quoque Hæretici inter Theomachos, quod significat "Dei Inimicos," occurrunt, de corpore, quod Deus e corpore et sanguine Dominæ nostræ, Sanctæ Virginis Mariæ, sibi ædificavit, et cujus ipsi nōrunt eum esse Creatorem, ita sentientes, ut dicant, corpus illud esse sine anima, et Deitatem ei fuisse pro anima. Ergo, Deitate ex illo egressa ab eoque separata, corpus mortuum est in perpetuum? Sed nunc erubescat is, qui hæc dicit et ita negat; et audiat verbum illud Domini nostri, Jesu Christi: "Tristis est anima mea usque ad mortem!" De quo, Domine? De populo, qui perditur.

"Vere natus est Dominus noster, Jesus Christus, vere adolevit, vere edit et bibit, vere crucifixus, vere passus et mortuus et sepultus est, et resurrexit a mortuis. Hoc qui ita credit, beatus est; qui rejicit, a vita beata, quam nos speramus, separatus est. Atque illi, qui Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, Filium unigenitum, dividunt, et postquam unus factus est, in duas naturas dissecant, cum Judæis, Dei interfectoribus, numerantur, qui in injustitia sua dicunt: "non propter tuum opus bonum volumus lapidare te, sed propter blasphemiam tuam, qui, cum homo sis, facis te ipsum Deum." (Jo. x. 33). Eritque eorum hæreditas par cum illis, qui infirmitatem et diminutionem Filii Dei, Verbi, cogitant, eumque in duas naturas dissecant.

l. 1. [ܐܘܨܘܪܝܐ] “of Smyrna.” Both the Greek recensions have ἐκκλησίας Σμυρναίων; the Latin B. Smyrnenſium only, which is nearer the Syriac. And if, in this instance, Episcopo Smyrnenſium be the rendering of ἐπίσκοπον Σμύρνης, as Episcopum Smyrnenſium, three lines above, is of ἐπίσκοπον Σμύρνης, the copy of the Greek text B., from which the Latin version B. was made, agreed entirely with the Syriac in this respect.

l. 2. ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ “visited.” In employing this word the Syriac translator seems to have imitated the paronomasia of the Greek in ἐπισκοπημένω, referring it to [ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ], which has been used in the Peshito as the rendering of ἐπίσκοπος: thus, in 1 Pet. ii. 25, τὸν ποιμένα καὶ ἐπίσκοπον τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν is translated ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ [ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ] ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ. In a work written by Abú Nasr Yahya Ibn Harír, (or Jarír,) of Tecriť, entitled المصباح المرشد الي الفلاح والنجاح الهادي من التيه الي سبيل النجاة, in chapter the 31st, which treats on the Priesthood, في الكهنوة, there is found the following passage: فالمرتبة الاولى من مراتب خدم البيعة فيها ثلاثة مراتب وهي الفطركة والمطرنة والاسقفية والفطرك لفظه دخيلة في اللغة العربية واصلها في اللغة اليونانية فاطرياركيس تفسيرها اب الروسا والمطران لفظه عربية دخيلة معناها في اللغة اليونانية مطرافولييطس تفسيرها ربيس المدينة وقد يقال انها ام المدن وكذلك الاسقف اصل هذه اللفظة افيسقافوس وفي السرياني افيسقوفا اي الساعور ومعناها المتعهد اي الذي يتعاهد احوال المومنين ويتفقد امورهم في الشريعة

“The first order, then, of the orders of the Ministers of the Church, has in it three grades—the Patriarchal, the Metropolitan, and the Episcopal. Patrik (Patriarch) is a word adopted into the Arabic tongue, and its origin is in the Greek Πατριάρχης; and the meaning of it is ‘Father of the Chiefs.’ Matran (Metropolitan) is also a word adopted into the Arabic, being in the Greek Μητροπολίτης; the meaning of which is ‘Chief of the city’: it is also said that it is ‘Mother of cities.’ And so, also, Uskuf (Bishop); the origin of which word is Ἐπίσκοπος, and in the Syriac [ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ], that is, ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ; and the meaning of it is ‘Visitor,’ that is, one who visits the state of the faithful, and inspects their affairs in religion.” See MS. Pocock. No. 253 in the Bodleian Library. The ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ, however, according to the authorities adduced by Assemani, seems to have been ranked, both by the Jacobites and Nestorians, among the Presbyters, and not with the Bishops. His office was identical with that of the [ܘܘܨܘܪܝܐ], Περιοδευτής. See Diss. de Syris Monophysitis, §. x.; and Diss. de Syris Nestorianis, pp. DCCXCI. and DCCCXXXI.

l. 5. β and γ. ܡܝܠܠܘܘ . . . ܐܠܗܐ “God.” There is no equivalent for this in either of the Greek recensions: it seems, however, to be necessary to complete the sense after ὑπερδοξάζω.

l. 7. ܐܢܝ ܩܘܪܝܢ ܠܗܘܝܢ ܠܗܘܝܢ ܐܘܪܝܢ “and pray for all men,” does not correspond with καὶ πάντας παρακαλεῖν. β. reads ܐܘܪܝܢ.

l. 8. ܐܠܘܢ ܡܘܠܘܢ “and require things becoming,” stands here as the equivalent of ἐκδίκει σου τὸν τόπον. In the Peshito, Rom. ii. 18, ܐܠܘܢ is the translation of τὰ διαφέροντα. In the inscription of the Epistle to the Romans, p. 40, the word τόπω, although, indeed, not used in precisely the same sense, is rendered in this version by ܐܠܘܢ. I suspect, therefore, that when the Syriac version was made, the word here was ἀξίωμα, as we find in the Epistle to the Antiochians, c. viii. p. 138, οἱ διάκονοι γινωσκέτωσαν οἷον εἰσὶν ἀξιωματός; and in the first chapter of the Epistle to Hero the Deacon, p. 141, evidently borrowed from this place, Παρακαλῶ σε ἐν θεῷ προσθεῖναι τῷ δρόμῳ σου, καὶ ἐκδικεῖν σου τὸ ἀξίωμα; and again, in the Epistle to the Smyrneans of B. we find τόπος καὶ ἀξίωμα together, ch. vi. p. 107. There can be no doubt that many single words have been changed in these Epistles by design, as well as whole passages been interpolated, and entire Epistles fabricated; such as the substitution of ἔρις for ἐπιθυμία in the Epistle to the Ephesians, p. 23. This instance seems to be one in which the true reading has been retained in the passage which has been borrowed, to give the colour of genuineness to the spurious Epistle, while a false reading of a single word has been introduced into the text of the true Epistle. In the Constitutions of the Apostles, Book ii. ch. 18, we read Γνώριζε οὖν ὃ ἐπίσκοπε τὸ ἀξίωμα σου — καὶ ἀξίως τοῦ τόπου σου ἐν τῷδε τῷ βίῳ ἀναστρέφου. Compare the whole of that and the following chapter, which seem to be imitated from this Epistle of Ignatius to Polycarp. Bishop Pearson cites a passage from Origen, and another from Alexander of Jerusalem, writers of the third century, containing the expression of τὸν τόπον τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς, and two passages of Cyprian, where ‘locus’ seems to be used in a similar sense; but these are long subsequent to the time of Ignatius, and probably much nearer to the period at which his Epistles were first falsified.

l. 9. ܠܘܥܘܢ “unanimity,” does not quite coincide in meaning with τῆς ἐνώσεως. This word is used to translate ὁμονοία in the Syriac extract from the Epist. to Magnes. ch. vi. at page 197, l. 24. In the Peshito, 2 Cor. xiii. 11, ܠܘܥܘܢ is used to render τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν; and in Ephes. iv. 3. we find ܠܘܥܘܢ; ܠܘܥܘܢ for τὴν ἐνότητα τοῦ πνεύματος. The Syriac translator had perhaps in his copy ἐνότητος, a word frequently found in the spurious Epistles, and in the interpolated passages of the genuine, as in the 8th chapter of this to Polycarp. This seems to afford good ground for the supposition that it also existed somewhere in the true text, since it appears to have been the practice of the fabricator of the Ignatian Epistles frequently to repeat words and phrases which are found in the genuine text, to give a fair colour to the spurious. The expression used in the Epistle to Hero, ch. i. p. 141, borrowed from this place, is τῆς συμφωνίας—φρόντιζε. In the interpolated passages of the Epistle to the Ephesians we read, ἐν τῇ ὁμοιοῖα ἡμῶν καὶ συμφώνῳ ἀγάπῃ—σύμφωνοι ὄντες ἐν ὁμοιοῖα—ἵνα πάντα ἐν ἐνότητι σύμφωνοι ᾗ, p. 21. The word ἔνωσις seems to signify actual external union and conformity, as well as the concord of doctrine and opinions: such an union as the Henoticon of Zeno was intended to effect; and it therefore appears to refer to later times, when the Church was broken into sections and external divisions. The employment of so many terms relative to union in the Ignatian Epistles seems also to refer to the times when the question of the union of the natures of Christ agitated the theological world.

l. 10. ܕܢܘܢܐ ܕܢܘܢܐ ܕܢܘܢܐ “As our Lord beareth thee.” The word ܕܢܘܢܐ “beareth,” has no equivalent in the Greek, and has probably been added for the sake of perspicuity in the idiom of the Syriac, the repetition of the word βασιτάζει being unnecessary in the Greek.

ܐܢܗ ܕܢܘܢܐ, literally, “protract (or draw on) thy spirit,” the usual idiomatic expression for ‘patience,’ corresponds accurately with ἀρέχοι. As my perhaps too literal translation has given occasion to a misunderstanding, I have now rendered these words by “be patient.” See Jacobson Patt. Apost. 3d Edit. p. 464. n. 3.

P. 4. l. 1. ܐܢܗ ܕܢܘܢܐ “In prayer be constant.” The same expression is used in the Peshito, Col. iv. 2. ܐܢܗ ܕܢܘܢܐ, to translate Τῇ προσευχῇ προσκαρτερεῖτε; while ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε, 1 Thes. v. 17., which comes nearer to these words of Ignatius, is rendered in the Peshito ܐܢܗ ܕܢܘܢܐ ܕܢܘܢܐ. The word ἀδιαλείπτως, which was not in the copy of the Syrian translator, seems to have been borrowed from this place of St. Paul. Compare also Ignatius’ Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. x. p. 27, where a similar addition has been made. In the passage of the Epistle to Hero, borrowed from this place, ch. i. p. 141, ἀδιαλείπτως has not been added to καὶ δεήσεσι σχολάζε, which, as I have before observed, is a confirmation of the Syriac here. The words of 1 Cor. vii. 5, ἵνα σχολάσητε τῇ νηστεία καὶ τῇ προσευχῇ, are translated in the Peshito ܐܢܗ ܕܢܘܢܐ ܕܢܘܢܐ ܕܢܘܢܐ. Several critics reject τῇ νηστεία καὶ from this passage, in which case the words of Ignatius may seem to be a citation from St. Paul.

arisen from a misunderstanding of the word κακοτεχνίας, which appears to signify nothing more than any improper means of gaining a livelihood, and such as are unbecoming the Christian character. Ignatius, therefore, in this passage bids Polycarp shun and avoid these, in whomsoever they may be found; and, for the instruction of those under his spiritual charge, to speak and teach them what they are, that they may know how to avoid them. That this is the meaning of the word κακοτέχνια seems to be plain from the use of τέχνη in the Constitutions of the Apostles. Thus, Book i. ch. 4, Ὁὐκ ἔσῃ ὡς πετόμενος καὶ ἐμπεριπατῶν καὶ ἀλώμενος ἐν ταῖς ῥύμναις, ἀκαιροεπόπτῆς τῶν κακῶς ζώντων· ἀλλὰ τῇ τέχνῃ σου καὶ τῷ ἔργῳ σου προσέχων, τὰ τῷ Θεῷ φίλα ἀναζητεῖ ποιεῖν. Book iv. ch. 11, Οἱ μὲν τοι πατέρες, παιδεύετε τὰ τέκνα ὑμῶν ἐν Κυρίῳ, ἐκτρέφοντες αὐτὰ ἐν παιδείᾳ καὶ νοουσιᾷ Κυρίου, καὶ διδάσκετε αὐτὰ ἐπιτηδεύουσας καὶ ἀρμοζούσας τῷ λόγῳ τέχνας, ἵνα μὴ διὰ τῆς εὐκαιρίας στρηνιασάντα, κ.τ.λ. And Book ii. ch. 61, Εἰ δέ τις τὴν τοῦ ἔργου τοῦ ἰδίου πρόφασιν ἐπιφέρων, ὀλιγορεῖ, προφασιζόμενος προφάσεις ἐν ἁμαρτίαις· γινωσκέτω ὁ τοιοῦτος, ὡς αἱ τέχναι τῶν πιστῶν ἐπὲργία εἰσιν· ἔργον δὲ ἡ θεοσέβεια· τὰς οὖν τέχνας ὑμῶν ὡς ἐν παρέργῳ ποιεῖτε. In the next chapter we find the following enumeration of things to be avoided, which may be included under κακοτεχνίας—φεύγετε δὲ καὶ τὰ ἀπρεπῆ τῶν θεαμάτων· τὰ θεατρά φημι, καὶ τὰ Ἑλληνικὰς πομπὰς, ἐπαιοιδὰς, κληδόνας, μαντείας, καθαρισμοὺς, οἰωνισμοὺς, ὀρνιθοσκοπίας, νεκυομαντείας, ἐπιφωνήσεις. The last of these refer especially to magical arts, for which the writer of Περιοδοὶ Ἰωαννοῦ uses this very term: Μαγε, τον μαγον παραδος—ενοχος εἰ· που εστιν εκεινος ὁ κακοτεχνος, Birch, Auct. Cod. Apoc. p. 277. Εἶχε δὲ ο Νηητιανος πειραν μαγικης κακοτεχνιας καὶ βιβλια πολλα υπο δαιμονων συντιθεμενα. Ibid. p. 294. And in like manner, also, Theodoretus: Σίμων δὲ πρῶτος, ὁ Σαμαρείτης ὁ μάγος, τῆς τούτου κακοτεχνίας ὑπουργὸς ἀνεφάνη, Hæret. Fab. Lib. i. ch. i. Vol. iv. p. 286.

l. 2. β. reads ܩܘܪܝܐ for ܩܘܪܝܐ, and adds ܩܘܪܝܐ “their husbands.” I suspect the word συμβίοις, which occurs here both for ‘husbands’ and ‘wives.’ The Syriac has simply ܩܘܪܝܐ “their husbands” in the one case, and ܩܘܪܝܐ “their wives” in the other. In the passage imitated from this place in the Epistle to the Antiochians, ch. ix., we read οἱ ἄνδρες στεργέτωσαν τὰς ὁμοζύγους—αἱ γυναῖκες τιμάτωσαν τοὺς ἄνδρας—ἄνδρας τοὺς ὁμοζύγους, and similarly in that to the Tarsians, ch. ix. In that to Hero, ch. v., also imitated from hence, Ταῖς ἀδελφαῖς μου πάραρει ἀγαπᾶν τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ μόνον ἀρκεῖσθαι τοῖς ἰδίῳι ἀνδράσιν, κ.τ.λ. In the Apost. Const., B. i. ch. 8., perhaps borrowed from this place, Μετὰ—τὸν Κύριον—φοβήθητί σου τὸν ἄνδρα, ὡς γύναι, καὶ ἐντράπηθι, ἀντῷ μόνῳ ἀρέσκουσα. In Latin A., which generally follows the Greek so literally, we have ‘viris’ and ‘uxores.’ Ignatius may therefore have written simply ἀνδράσι and γυναῖκας. He was not, however, unacquainted with words compounded with συν, as we see a little further in this Epistle, p. 11. l. 3. In the Greek I have supplied ἐν, and read τῷ Κυρίῳ, to correspond with ܩܝܕܘܥ, as we find in the Epistle to Hero, ch. iv., ἀγαπᾶν οὖν χρῆ.—μόνον δὲ ἐν Κυρίῳ. It would, however, perhaps be as correct to supply κατὰ and retain τὸν Κύριον; as ܩܝܕܘܥ for κατὰ Κύριον six lines below, and in the Ep. to Eph., p. 18, l. 7, where we find ܘܩܘܕܘܥ for κατὰ Ἰησοῦν.

l. 6. β. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ], and γ. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ]. I have preferred πλήν of B. to πλέον of A. as coming nearest to the Syriac. The idea of this passage, εἰν γνωσθῆ πλήν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, ἔφθαρται, is copied in the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. vii. p. 65., μηδὲ ὑμεῖς ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου καὶ τῶν πρεσβύτερων, μηδὲν πράσσετε· μηδὲ πειράσητε εὐλόγον τι φαίνεσθαι ἰδίᾳ ὑμῖν. Compare also the following passage from the Constitutions of the Apostles: Μηδὲν δὲ ποιείτω τὸ σύνολον ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, μηδέ τι διδόντω τι ἄνευ τῆς ἐκεῖνου γνώμης. εἰν γὰρ ὡς θλιβομένου τινὸς λάθρα τοῦ ἐπισκόπου διδῶ τι, εἰς λοιδορίαν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου δώσει, καὶ διαβάλλει αὐτὸν ὡς ἀμελοῦντα τῶν θλιβομένων. Book ii. ch. 31.

ܩܘܘܕܘܥ ܩܘܘܕܘܥ: “that they may be married.” It does not seem probable that the Syriac translator had τὴν ἔνωσιν ποιῆσθαι in his copy; for although this may ultimately give the same meaning, he would hardly have used exactly the same expression to render these words as he has employed to translate ταῖς γαμοῦσιν καὶ ταῖς γαμουμέναις in the very same line. These words seem to have been adopted here at some subsequent period for the same purpose as the term ἔνωσις is otherwise so frequently used in the Ignatian Epistles. See note, p. 265 above.

l. 8. γ. ܩܘܘܕܘܥ.

l. 2. β. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ], γ. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ].

l. 3. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ] — ܩܘܘܕܘܥ “With them may there be for me a portion with God,” agrees with B., Antioch. Mon. p. 178., and Paral. Rupef. p. 183., in the omission of καὶ, and confirms παρὰ of B. rather than ἐν of A. I have retained the ἔχειν of B. after γένοιτο, but the Syriac does not require it; nor is it found in Paral. Rupef., but simply μέρος γένοιτο, as in the Syriac. See p. 183.

l. 4. [ܩܘܘܕܘܥ] “sleep with one another,” is omitted in β.

l. 7. β. and γ. have ܩܘܘܕܘܥ for ܩܘܘܕܘܥ. Both Greek copies have μένετω, and Latin A. ‘mancat,’ for the simple ܐܘܨܠ “be” of the Syriac. In Antiochus Mon., who does not, however, quote the passage literally, we read ἕστωσαν. See p. 177.

l. 8. γ. ܫܕܘܫ ܕܥܡܝܢ “your treasures,” for τὰ δεποσίτια ὑμῶν; and ܐܘܨܠ “gifts,” for τὰ ἄκκεπτα; and ܕܥܘܪܝܘܬܐ “rebel,” or “be a deserter,” for δεσέρτωρ εὐρεθῆ. Mr. Jacobson quotes very appropriately the following passage from Vegetius de Re Militari ii. §. 20.: Illud ab antiquis divinitus institutum est, ut ex donativo quod milites consequuntur dimidia pars sequestraretur apud signa et ibidem ipsis militibus servaretur Miles deinde qui sumptus suos scit apud signa depositos de deserendo nihil cogitat, magis diligat signa. Halloix writes respecting this passage: “Cum autem milites in expeditionem irent, tum ipsi in civitatibus peculia sua castrensia deponebant, quae reversi recipiebant. Illa igitur deposita appellabantur ab eo qui deponebat: accepta autem ab eo qui accipiebat. Confectis ergo bellis illi deposita repetebant, hi accepta restituebant.” See Illust. Script. Sæc. i. p. 458.

l. 9. ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܐܘܨܠ “Let your spirit be enduring,” or “be ye patient.” Both the Greek editions add οὖν, and the Latin A. ‘igitur;’ but this particle is omitted in Anton. Melissa and Paral. Rupef. pp. 185, 186. Both of these also read μακροθυμεῖτε, and add μεθ’ before ὑμῶν, as in B.

l. 10. ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܐܘܨܠ “I rejoice in you,” as the rendering of ὀναίμην ὑμῶν. Similar to this is ܐܘܨܠ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ “I rejoice in the beasts,” for ὀναίμην τῶν θηρίων, in the Epistle to the Romans, p. 48.; which words, however, as quoted by Eusebius in the translation of the extract, p. 203., are rendered by ܐܘܨܠ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ “I salute the beasts.”

β. ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ.

P. 14. l. 1. ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ — ܐܘܨܠ “but is ready to be subject to God.” This expresses more than ἀλλὰ Θεῷ σχολάζει of the Greek, which is rendered by the Syriac translator of the extract at p. 201., ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܐܘܨܠ ܐܘܨܠ “but is constantly ready for God.” Compare note 1. on p. 4. above. As this single sentence in the Greek occurs in a long interpolated passage, it is not improbable that the last word may have been altered, and σχολάζει have been borrowed from προσευχαῖς σκόλαζε above. According to the Syriac it should be ἀλλὰ ἕτοιμός ἐστι ἵνα Θεῷ ὑποταγῆ, or εἰς ὑποταγὴν Θεῷ. In the interpolated sentence following we find ὅτι ἕτοιμοί ἐστι εἰς εὐποιίαν Θεῷ; and in that of the Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. v., we have the expression, ἵνα ὦμεν Θεοῦ ὑποτασσόμενοι, perhaps imitated from this passage, as it originally stood in this place of the Epistle to Polycarp. This is also translated in the extract at p. 197, l. 6, by the same Syriac term, ܐܘܨܠ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ, as we find here.

l. 2. ܕܥܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ “to Antioch.” The Greek copies have Συρίαν; but in and Smyrneans; while the word πληρώματι, a term frequently used by various sects of the Docetae, seems to have been substituted here and employed in the inscription of the Epistle to the Trallians probably for one and the same purpose.

The Chev. Bunsen has well remarked that Ignatius, in writing to the Ephesians, seems to have borne in mind the beginning of St. Paul's Epistle to them. Ephes. i. 1—14., Εὐλογητὸς ὁ Θεὸς ὁ εὐλογήσας ἡμᾶς καθὼς ἐξελέξατο ἡμᾶς ἐν αὐτῷ πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἁγίους καὶ ἀμόμους κατενώπιον αὐτοῦ, ἐν ἀγάπῃ προορίσας ἡμᾶς εἰς ἔπαινον δόξης τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ.

l. 3. ܐܘܡܘܡܐ “and perfected.” Here we have the same Syriac word to correspond with ἡνωμένην as with πληρώματι above. It seems very improbable that the translator should have rendered this latter Greek term by the same word as the former. Ἠνωμένην appears to have been substituted here for some other term, with the same object in view as the introduction of ἔνωσις, &c., mentioned above in the Epistle to Polycarp. See note, p. 265 above. A few lines further we find the same verb, ܐܘܡܘܡܐ, employed to represent ἀπηρτίσατε: ܐܘܡܘܡܐ would therefore be equivalent to ἀπηρτισμένην, a word which does indeed occur at the end of this Epistle, or to κατηρτισμένην, which is likewise found in the interpolated passage ch. ii. of this, and also in ch. viii. of that to the Philadelphians. In this latter place the writer, wishing to keep up the same idea as is represented by ἡνωμένην, appears nevertheless to have retained the genuine word, which the Syriac seems to show that he found in this place, and consequently to have used the expression ὡς ἄνθρωπος εἰς ἔνωσιν κατηρτισμένος. I have printed ἡνωμένην and ἐκλελεγμένην, as they are found in both the Greek Recensions; but according to the Syriac, ἀτρέπτοι is to be referred to δόξαν, and the two following epithets should be in the dative case, to agree with ἐκκλησία. I suspect also the word ἀτρέπτοι, which is a dogmatic term of a later period, meaning “inconvertible.”

ܐܘܡܘܡܐ ܐܘܡܘܡܐ “In the purpose of truth.” I formerly supposed that this might have been an error of the copyist for ܐܘܡܘܡܐ ܐܘܡܘܡܐ, “in the passion of the truth,” to agree with ἐν πάθει ἀληθινῷ of the Greek. But the reading ܐܘܡܘܡܐ is confirmed also by γ.; and indeed it seems more probable that the Syriac, as it now stands, is correct—“chosen,” or “elect in the purpose of truth.” Compare 1 Pet. i. 2., “to the elect according to the foreknowledge of God.” Rom. ix. 11. “that the purpose of God according to the election, may remain,” ἵνα ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν πρόθεσις τοῦ Θεοῦ μένη. Eph. i. 11., προορισθέντες κατὰ πρόθεσιν τοῦ τὰ πάντα ἐνεργούντος κατὰ τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ θελήματος, “being predestinated according to the purpose of him,” &c.; to which latter place, as it has been remarked above, Ignatius seems

The Chev. Bunsen, referring to St. Paul, Rom. vii. 5, proposes to read here ἐνεργῆται for ἐνείρισται—a word which seems also to have displeased the author of the recension B., who has consequently substituted ἐπάρχει, and to replace βασανίσαι by βασκανίσαι, referring again to St. Paul, Gal. iii. 1. The Syriac agrees with A. in both.

l. 2. ܕܘܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “I rejoice in you, and offer supplication on your account,” is like ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ, which is the Peshito rendering of μετὰ χαρᾶς τὴν δέησιν ποιούμενος, Phil. i. 4; while πάντων περίψημα ἕως ἄρτι is translated in the Peshito by ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ: “I am the expiatory offering for every man even till now, 1 Cor. iv. 13; again, περίψημα τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα τοῦ σταυροῦ, occurring also in this Epistle, is rendered by ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “my spirit boweth down to the cross.” It does not seem probable, therefore, that the Syriac translator read the passage exactly as it now stands. For ἀγωνίζομαι he probably read ἀγωνίζομαι, which would be rendered ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ: this may have been afterwards changed into ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ; as we find in different copies of the Peshito, ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ and ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ for ἀγωνίζόμενος of Col. i. 29. See various readings to Schaaf’s edition of the Peshito New Testament. In Rom. xv. 30 we read συναγωνίσασθαί μοι ἐν ταῖς προσευχαῖς.

l. 3. ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “in all ages,” would require πάσι to be added. The Chev. Bunsen proposes that the passage be read thus: Περίψημα ἡμῶν καὶ ἄγνωσμα ἡμῶν, Ἐφεσίων ἐκκλησίας, τῆς διαβολῆτος τοῖς αἰῶσιν, οἱ σαρκικοί. Οἱ σαρκικοί, κ.τ.λ. See his reasons in note 14, p. 88.

P. 26. l. 1, γὰρ, which I have added in the text to correspond with the Syriac, is also found in Antiochus, οἱ γὰρ σαρκικοί, κ.τ.λ. See p. 178.

l. 3. ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “for they”: as if the reading were à γὰρ, not à δὲ.

l. 4. ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “ye have done;” and so in the line following, as if the word had been ἐπράσσετε. The Latin A. has ‘operata sunt,’ which also seems to indicate a different reading from the text of the Greek as it stands at present; and so, likewise, in the line following.

l. 6. γ. adds ܕܢܐܘܢܐ after ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ.

P. 28. l. 3. ܕܢܐܘܢܐ — ܕܢܐܘܢܐ ܕܢܐܘܢܐ “against them harsh words,” &c. The Syriac in this place varies so considerably from the text Peshito, Luke ix. 46, ܠܘܥܒܘܢ ܘܥܘܠܘܢ? ܠܘܥܒܘܢ ܠܘܥܒܘܢ, εἰσὼν δὲ διαλογισμὸς ἐν αὐτοῖς τὸ, τίς ἂν εἴη μείζων ἐν αὐτοῖς; and xxii. 24, ἐγένετο δὲ καὶ φιλονεικία ἐν αὐτοῖς, τὸ, τίς αὐτῶν δοκεῖ εἶναι μείζων. See also Mark ix. 34. There is a passage similar to this of Ignatius in the Constitutions of the Apostles, Book V. ch. vi. : διὸ καὶ ὁ εὐχόμενος ἐκείνου μαθητῆς εἶναι, ζηλοῦτω τοὺς αὐτοῦ ἀγῶνας, μιμνήσθω τὴν ὑπομόνην. Compare also Polycarp's Epistle, ch. viii., μιμηταὶ οὖν γενόμεθα τῆς ὑπομονῆς αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐὰν πάσχωμεν διὰ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, δοξάζομεν αὐτόν.

P. 32. l. 1. ܠܘܥܒܘܢ ܘܥܘܠܘܢ? ܘܥܘܠܘܢ “not of promise is the work.” This is the rendering to correspond with the Greek. If the Syriac stood alone, it would perhaps be more fitly translated “not that the promise is the deed.” A. has inserted nūn in this passage, which is rendered obscure by the long interpolation separating it from the original context, which relates solely to practical duties. In the Syriac the meaning is clear, and runs thus: “But let us endeavour to be followers of our Lord in meekness, and in our readiness to undergo any sufferings for the sake of our faith; for the mere profession of it is nothing, unless we continue stedfast in the practice of it even to the last.” The preceding passage, however, in A., οὐδεὶς πίστιν ἐπαγγελλόμενος ἀμαρτάνει—οἱ ἐπαγγελλόμενοι Χριστιανοὶ εἶναι δι’ ὧν πρᾶσσοσι ὀφθῆσοιται expresses the same meaning, and seems to be nothing more than a paraphrase of the original passage. B. expresses it οἱ ἐπαγγελλόμενοι Χριστοῦ εἶναι οὐκ ἐξ ὧν λέγουσι μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐξ ὧν πράττουσι γνωρίζονται, giving only the paraphrase, and omitting the original sentence. A similar form of expression is found in the Epistle to the Romans, p. 43, οὐ πεισμονῆς τὸ ἔργον. It is worth while to compare the following passages in the Constitutions of the Apostles, which seem evidently to refer to this place: καὶ λόγον ὑφέξει τῷ Θεῷ, οὐχ ὅτι δευτέρῳ γάμῳ συνήφθη, ἀλλ’ ὅτι τὴν ἐαυτῆς ἐπαγγελίαν οὐκ ἐφύλαξε, καταστρηνιάσα τοῦ Χριστοῦ· διότι μετὰ πίστεως καὶ φόβου Θεοῦ οὐκ ἦλθε φυλάξαι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν· διὸ χρὴ μὴ προπετῶς ποιεῖσθαι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν, ἀλλὰ μετ’ ἀσφαλείας· κρείσσον γὰρ αὐτῇ ἐστὶ μὴ εὐξασθαι, ἢ εὐξασθαι καὶ μὴ ἀποδοῦναι, Book III. ch. i. δεῖ γὰρ τὴν ἐπαγγελιαμένην, ἄξια τῆς ἐπαγγελίας ἔργα διαπρασσομένην δεικνύειν τὸ ἐπαγγέλημα αὐτῆς, ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀληθές. Pope Celestinus, in the 5th century, writes: μὴ ἐκδύσεται τὸν θώρακα τῆς πίστεως ὁ ἐπαγγελλόμενος στρατιώτης τοῦ Χριστοῦ. See Pontif. Roman. Epist., edit. Schoenemann, 8vo. Gotting. 1796. p. 824.

P. 34. l. 1. ܠܘܥܒܘܢ ܘܥܘܠܘܢ? ܘܥܘܠܘܢ “My spirit boweth down to the cross,” as the translation of περίψημα τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα τοῦ σταυροῦ of A., is so different from the rendering of περίψημα above, p. 23, that it hardly noch in derselben Aufschrift: προκαθήμενη τῆς ἀγάπης, ebenfalls mit dem Genitiv, in derselben Auffassung, des Vorsitzes über etwas, in etwas, nur dass der Sinn hier geistig gewandt wird, wie er in der ersten Stelle rein örtlich gefasst ist. Für den Gebrauch von ἐν τόπῳ in der angegebenen Bedeutung genügt es, auf den Anfang des Briefes an Polycarp zu verwiesen, wo es heisst: ἐκδίδκει σὸν τὸν τόπον, dein bischöfliches Amt, deine Bischofswurde." P. 114, not. 2.

l. 3. ܘܕܘܥܘܘܢܘ "and of remembrance." There is nothing similar to this in the Greek in this place. We find, however, in the inscription of the Epistle to the Tarsians, ἀξιομνημονεύτῳ immediately following ἀξιεπαίνῳ, and preceding ἀξιαγαπήτῳ; and as this has been borrowed from the genuine Epistle, it seems probable, that at the period of the fabrication of that to the Tarsians ἀξιομνημόνευτος occupied the place of ἀξιαγνος in the present copies of the Greek: this latter word is rendered literally by ܘܘܥܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘ in the Syriac inserted in the Acts of Martyrdom at p. 224.

l. 4. γ. reads ܘܕܘܥܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ "and perfected in the law of Christ." The interpolation in the Greek text has separated these words. We find them, however, retained in πεπληρωμένοις, and in Christi habens legem of A., whence Vossius conjectured Χριστόνομος for Χριστώνυμος. The Syriac translation at p. 224 has also ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ "in the law of Christ," as it is in this place. In the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. ii. p. 61, we find νόμῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, which is probably copied from hence. St. Paul writes, Gal. vi. 2, καὶ οὕτως ἀναπληρώσατε τὸν νόμον τοῦ Χριστοῦ. The punctuation of the Syriac in β. refers ἀμώμως to the preceding sentence, and not, as in the Greek, to πλείστα χαίρειν: γ. leaves it doubtful.

l. 6. ܘܘܥܘܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ "Long since have I prayed." I have chosen ἐπευξάμενος, which is the reading in Simeon Metaph., in preference to ἐπεὶ εἰξάμενος of the Colbert and other MSS., as being nearer to the Syriac, and also as affording a better sense. The conjecture of the Chev. Bunsen, not. 8, p. 115, adding πάλαι, which might have been the origin of πλέον in the interpolation following in the Greek, would bring the text still nearer to the Syriac. Nevertheless, ܘܘܥܘܘܘܘܢܘ ܘܥܥܥܘܘܘܢܘ may perhaps only serve to express more distinctly

l. 7. ܦܘܢ ܠܥܢ “now therefore.” The word ܠܥܢ “now,” which is important in enabling us to determine the time, and, consequently, the place at which this Epistle was written, has been omitted, probably by design. See note on p. 48, l. 5 below. ܦܘܢ seems to be the representative of γὰρ in B., and of enim in both the Latin versions.

γ. reads ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ ܕܠܥܢ — ܠܢ ;ܡܨܘܢܐ. Something more seems to be expressed by ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ ܕܠܥܢ ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ; “to meet (or receive) you and salute you,” than simply ὑμᾶς ἀσπάσασθαι: a word perhaps has fallen out of the text, or been omitted designedly.

P. 42. l. 1. ܠܥܢܘܢܐ ܕܠܥܢ ܕܠ “If there be the will,” agrees with ἐάνπερ θέλημα ἦ of B., while A. adds τοῦ Θεοῦ after θέλημα, an addition which seems to have been made subsequently to the Latin version A., which has simply voluntas. And this reading is confirmed by the fact of the interpolator having made use of this expression in other places; it having been his practice, as I have already observed, to borrow the genuine words of Ignatius, to give a colour to his own fabrications. Thus we find in the Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. xx. p. 37, ἐάν με καταξιώσῃ Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς — καὶ θέλημα ἦ; and again, in that to the Smyrneans, ch. xi. p. 113, κατὰ θέλημα δὲ κατηξιώθη; and also in that to Polycarp, ch. viii. p. 13, ὡς τὸ θέλημα προστάσσει.

l. 2. ܕܠܥܢܘܢܐ — ܠܥܢܘܢܐ ܕܠ “If I be deemed worthy to arrive at the end, that I may receive my portion without hindrance through suffering.” The word ܠܥܢܘܢܐ, as I have observed above, is used to represent ἐπιτυχεῖν as well as ἀξιωθῆναι. ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ agrees with εἰς πέρας of B., and is confirmed by ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ ܕܥܘܢܐ of the Syriac version of this Epistle at p. 225, l. 7. There is nothing to correspond with ܕܥܘܢܘܢܐ “to arrive,” in either of the Greek copies. It seems probable that the word ἔναι, which I have added, formerly existed in the text, and that it became changed to εἶναι, and was then transferred, to follow εἰς τέλος in the preceding sentence: compare in the Epistle to the Ephesians, p. 31, ἐάν τις εὐρεθῇ καὶ εἰς τέλος without the addition of εἶναι. The word χάριτος seems to have been a gloss introduced into the text, like μαρτυρίου in the Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. i. p. 17. See note on this place, p. 279 above.

l. 3. γ. reads ܕܠܥܢܘܢܐ “By suffering.” I have added in the text διὰ τοῦ παθεῖν, to correspond with this from ch. vii. p. 13 of the Epistle to Polycarp, where the interpolator, evidently borrowing from this place, has these words — ἐάν περ διὰ τοῦ παθεῖν Θεοῦ ἐπιτύχῃ, εἰς τὸ εὐρεθῆναι με ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει.

l. 5. ܕܕܕ — ܕܕܕ ܕܕܕ “If indeed ye do not spare me.” ܕܕܕ here seems to stand for περ of the Greek, or perhaps γε of the Cod. Nydpr. See Abp. Usher’s edit. p. 32, not. 19: it is, however, omitted in γ. The Syriac agrees with the reading μὴ of B., which is also confirmed by non of A.

ܕܕܕ ܕܕܕ “other time.” I have added ἄλλον, which is omitted in the other copies, upon the authority of Simeon Metaphrastes, to agree with the Syriac. γ. adds ܕܕ “to me,” after ܕܕܕ, and apparently correctly.

l. 6. γ. ܕܕܕ ܕܕܕܕܕܕ “will ye be found.” The Greek copies have ἔχετε ἐπιγραφήναι. This latter word is, in all probability, either an error for εἰρεθῆναι, an Aramaism very frequent in these Epistles, or a substitution for it.

ܕܕܕܕܕܕ ܕܕ “If ye leave me.” Although the meaning comes to the same, this varies much from ἐὰν σιωπήσητε ἀπ’ ἐμοῦ; but as this is found in both the Greek recensions and their corresponding Latin versions, I have retained it in the text. It is probably an error of the Syriac transcriber, from the similarity of ܕܕܕܕܕܕ, which is found in the same line, to ܕܕܕܕܕܕ. Simeon Metaphrastes agrees with the Syriac in omitting γὰρ of A. and τε γὰρ of B.

l. 7. ܕܕ — ܕܕܕܕܕܕܕܕܕܕܕ “I shall be the word of God; but if ye love my flesh, again am I to myself a voice;” i. e. “I shall then be only a voice.” This exactly corresponds with the ancient Latin version of the Corpus Christi MS., verbum Dei: si autem desideretis carnem meum, rursus factus sum vox. The other Syriac version of this Epistle inserted in the Acts of Martyrdom at p. 225, l. 14, also agrees entirely with this, using even the very same terms; and so, likewise, does the citation made by John the Monk at p. 206, l. 26. The testimony of these two independent Syriac versions, which vary so widely in other places, confirmed by the citation of John the Monk and the Latin version, seems to be conclusive that some word must have been omitted in the Greek corresponding with ܕܕܕܕܕܕ and verbum, and that τρέχων has been substituted for a term of which ܕܕܕ and vox are the proper representatives. In the Peshito version of the New Testament ܕܕܕܕܕܕ is always the corresponding term for λόγος, as verbum is also in the Latin versions. The word omitted is therefore doubtless λόγος; and it has probably been removed by some one who confounded λόγος Θεοῦ with ὁ λόγος Θεός, so frequently occurring in the earliest Patristical writings as an appellation peculiar to our Lord and Saviour Christ, and which ought not, therefore, to be applied to any other. This removal must have been made subsequently to the time of the transcription of the copy from which the Latin version in the MS. of Corpus Christi Col. was made. For ܕܕܕ of the Syriac, and vox of the Latin, we find τρέχων in the Greek, which is evidently erroneous.

From the circumstance of this Latin version, which in all probability was made long subsequently to the time of John Chrysostom, having retained the true reading, this error appears to have found its way into the text since the time of that writer; and it does not, therefore, appear improbable that it might have been taken from the following expressions of his in his eucologium upon Ignatius: καὶ πρὸς τὴν δύσιν τρέχων, see p. 168; ἐπὶ θάνατον τρέχοντα ὀρώσαι τὸν μάρτυρα, p. 169. Reference may also have been made to the Martyr's own words, προσθεῖναι τῷ δρόμῳ σου, Epist. to Polycarp, ch. i. p. 1. I formerly thought that τρέχων might have been a corruption from ἰχθῶν, which may be supposed to signify the same as ἄλο and vox; but upon reconsidering the passage, it appeared to me that Ignatius had in his mind the same idea as is expressed in the first chapter of St. John's Gospel, where the divine nature of Christ is called λόγος, verbum, ἰΛΛΩ; while the Baptist, contrasting his own merely human nature with that of our Lord, calls himself φωνὴ βοῶντος, ἄλο, vox, "the voice of one crying," &c. This view of the passage, which I had already communicated to the Chev. Bunsen, I found afterwards completely confirmed by an early writer, John the Monk, who cites both this passage of Ignatius and the words of the Gospel of St. John in illustration of what he advances with regard "to the men of the word and the men of the voice," in the extract which I have given from his letter to Eusebius and Eutropius. See p. 242. The view which he takes in considering λόγος to represent the spiritual man, and φωνή the natural man, seems to have been held by many early writers. In the Constitutions of the Apostles, Book vi. ch. 30, Christ is called ἀρχιερέα πάντων τῶν λογικῶν ταγμάτων. Origen, in his Commentary on John i. 10, writes: ὥσπερ ὁ κυρίως υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐχ ἕτερος λόγος ἢ τυγχάνων, χρῆται λόγῳ· αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ ἐν ἀρχῇ λόγος ἦν ὁ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὁ λόγος Θεός· οὕτως ὁ Ἰωάννης ὁ ὑπηρέτης ἐκείνου τοῦ λόγου, εἰ κυρίως ἀκούοιμεν τῆς γραφῆς, οὐχ ἕτερος ὢν φωνῆς, χρῆται φωνῇ δεικνυούση τὸν λόγον: Opera edit. Delarue, Vol. iv. p. 118. Compare also Ἠγοῦμαι — καὶ φωνὴ τὸν λόγον, p. 85 ibid; and, p. 149, τῷ κεκρατηκότι τῶν εἰρημένων περὶ τοῦ, φωνῆν μὲν εἶναι τὸν Ἰωάννην, λόγον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν, δηλοῖν ἔσται. In his Commentary on Matthew he writes: εἷς δὲ ποιμὴν τῶν λογικῶν ὁ λόγος, Vol. iii. p. 441, and ὥσπερ δὲ ἔρχεται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῇ δοξῇ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, οὕτως ἀγγελιογινόμενοι οἱ ἐν τοῖς προφήταις λόγοι μετ' αὐτοῦ παραγίνονται, ibid. p. 549. Origen always styles Christ ὁ λόγος Θεός and ὁ Θεός λόγος. See the reasons which he assigns why Christ is not called ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ in the Gospel of St. John, Vol. iv. p. 54, ibid. Athanasius calls man before the fall ὁ λογικός. Thus, in his Treatise de Incarnatione Verbi Dei, we read, ὁ δὲ λογικός καὶ κατ' εἰκόνα γενόμενος ἄνθρωπος ἠφανίζετο· καὶ τὸ ὑπὸ Θεοῦ γενόμενον ἔργον παραπάλλυτο. — ἀπρεπὲς δὲ ἦν πάλιν τὰ ἅπαξ γενόμενα λογικὰ καὶ τοῦ λόγου αὐτοῦ μετα- σχόντα παραπόλλυσθαι, edit. Bened. Vol. i. p. 52. And continuing his argument in the same Treatise, p. 58, he writes: ὅθεν ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος δι' ἑαυτοῦ παρεγένετο, ἵν' ὡς εἰκὼν ὢν τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν κατ' εἰκόνα ἄνθρωπον ἀνακτίσαι δινηθῆ. And in his first oration against the Arians, ibid. p. 446, οὐ γὰρ ἡλαττώθη ὁ λόγος σῶμα λαβὼν, ἵνα καὶ χάριν ζητήσῃ λαβεῖν, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον καὶ ἐθεοποίησεν ὅπερ ἐνεδύσατο, καὶ πλέον ἐχαρίσατο τῷ γένει τῶν ἀνθρώπων τούτο. Basil—or whoever may be the author of the Homilia adversus eos qui per calumniam dicunt dici a nobis Deos tres—writes: Ὁ Ἰωάννης, φωνὴ μὲν ἐλέγετο βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, ἄνθρωπος δὲ ἦν τὴν φύσιν μὴ οὖν ἀναίρει διὰ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ λόγου τὴν τοῦ μονογενοῦς ὑπόστασιν: Opera edit. Garnier, Vol. ii. p. 612, c. In the Hodegus of Anastasius the following words are put into the mouth of Acephalus: Καὶ πῶς πάλιν εὐρίσκομεν τὸν μακάριον Ἀθανάσιον πρὸς Ἰουβενιανὸν τὸν βασιλέα γράφοντα· ὅτι ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, ἵνα καὶ ἡ σὰρξ γένηται λόγος. See Gretser opera, Vol. xiv. p. 102.

P. 44. l. 1. $\zeta\iota\sigma$ —— ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ ; “That in love ye may be in one concord, and may praise God the Father, through Jesus Christ our Lord.” This passage as it stands, although it expresses to a certain extent the same sentiment as the Greek, does not come sufficiently near to be a translation of it. I suspect that some alteration has been made here in the Greek, to favour the notion of the practice of chaunting in the churches having been introduced by Ignatius, as we find it mentioned by Socrates in his Ecclesiastical History, Book vi. ch. 8. See p. 172. Scultetus also suspected that this passage of Socrates gave rise to some alteration in the Epistle to the Trallians. See Vedelius' Edit. p. 33. There is nothing in either of the Greek recensions to correspond with $\zeta\iota\sigma$ “our Lord;” neither is the word Θεῶ, for ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ , before πατρὶ, now found in them; but it seems to have been in the copy from which the Latin B. was made, for this has ‘Deo Patri,’ conformably to the Syriac. The variation has probably arisen from some subsequent copyist mistaking the contracted form $\theta\bar{\omega}$ for the article τῷ; and thus reading τῷ πατρὶ instead of θεῷ πατρὶ.

l. 2. γ. reads ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ , and adds after it ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ which agrees with the Greek: this would therefore require the insertion of Συρίας in the text. I have changed ὁ Θεὸς into τοῦ Θεοῦ, and added εἶναι to agree with ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ , to make the sentence correspond with the Syriac; and the passage then is similar to ἄφετέ με θηρίων εἶναι below, p. 45. Ἐνρεθῆναι, as it is found in both the Greek recensions, might perhaps have been retained; but it is itself an Aramaism, being a literal translation of ܕܘܨܘܕܝܘܨ , which is the word otherwise employed to correspond with it in these Epistles. The Colbert MS. and Simeon Metaph. invert the order, and place ὁ Θεὸς before κατηξίωσεν: the other copies retain the order of the Syriac.

l. 3. γ . adds ܠܘܢ after ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ : so also the quotation by John the Monk, p. 207, l. 10. ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “That I may rise in him in life.” There is nothing in the Greek to agree with “in life”; but John the Monk had also this reading, and indeed he uses the very words of the Syriac text. See p. 207. The MS. of De Thou reads ἀνατείλωμεν for ἀνατείλω (see Whiston’s edit. p. 240); and so, also, Simeon Mataph.: $\zeta\omega\eta$ may probably have been effaced in the copy, and the next transcriber, to give a meaning to the passage, have inserted μ before the particle $\epsilon\nu$, and thus formed the plural termination. See note p. 280. The reading of the Syriac seems to be confirmed by the fact of our finding $\zeta\omega\eta$ connected with ἀπέτελεν in ch. ix. of the Epistle to the Magnesians, p. 67. The Syriac would suggest $\epsilon\nu$ $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omega$ for $\epsilon\iota\varsigma$ $\alpha\iota\tau\omicron\nu$, which both Latin versions in ipso seem to confirm; and Severus also by ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “in Christ.” See p. 215, l. 19.

l. 5. ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “to be given.” There is nothing to correspond with this in the Colbert MS., nor in the usual editions of the other recension. I have therefore inserted δοθῆναι from the MS. of De Thou (see Whiston’s edit. p. 240), and Simeon Metaph. (see Cotelerius), where the true reading, as in the Syriac, has been retained. The writer of the Epistle to the Smyrneans has copied this $\eta\nu$ $\epsilon\iota\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ $\tau\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\iota\alpha\nu$ $\mu\omicron\iota$ $\delta\omicron\theta\eta\nu\alpha\iota$, ch. xi. p. 113.

l. 6. ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “and not.” The Greek texts vary here from each other, one reading $\delta\pi\omega\varsigma$, and the other $\textit{ἕνα}$; while, according to the Syriac, the true reading seems to be $\kappa\alpha\iota$. It is remarkable in this Epistle, that in the passages in which the Greek recensions agree generally so very closely with the Syriac, when they vary in a single word from the Syriac they also vary from each other. I have adopted $\kappa\alpha\iota$ $\mu\eta$ in the text, as it is read in the Syriac.

l. 7. γ . prefixes ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ to ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ , and thus confirms my suggestion in my former note 17 on this Epistle. ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ — ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “Then shall I be faithful, when I am not seen in the world.” This passage is cited by John the Monk in the very words of this Syriac translation. $\textit{Τότε ἔσομαι}$, which I have adopted to correspond with ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ , is like $\textit{τότε ἔσομαι μαθητῆς}$, p. 45 below: the Syriac expression is identical in both places.

l. 8. γ . reads ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ , and adds ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ after ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ . The reading of the Nydpr. MS., $\textit{ὅτε κόσμῳ μὴ φαινόμεαι}$, would agree more literally with the Syriac than the readings of the other MSS. which I have retained in the text.

ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ — ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ “For there is nothing which is seen which is good.” I have inserted $\gamma\grave{\alpha}\rho$ in the Greek, as required by the Syriac, upon the authority of the MS. of De Thou (see Whiston’s edit. p. 240), and Simeon Metaph. (see Cotelerius); and it is also supported by enim of B. It has been omitted in the Colbert and other MSS., probably on account of the recurrence of this particle in the interpolated passage, τὰ γὰρ βλεπόμενα, κ.τ.λ., immediately following I have substituted καλὸν for αἰώνιον, to correspond with ܡܘܨܗ, which word represents καλὸν only five lines above. The Latin A. reads bonum, and Timotheus of Alexandria ܡܘܨܗ “becoming,” corresponding also with καλὸν. The change to αἰώνιον has doubtless been made in consequence of the insertion from 2 Cor. iv. 18; for both the Latin A. and Timotheus, which have retained the reading as it is found in the Syriac, have not this insertion. This place is very important for the history of the text of these Epistles. It shews that this passage from 2 Cor. has been introduced into the Greek text, not only subsequently to the time of Timotheus, but also to the period at which the copy was transcribed from which the Latin version A. was made. I observe, also, that B. has omitted the next passage, ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς—φαίνεται, which exists in the Latin A., and is also quoted by Timotheus. This likewise seems to furnish evidence that B., in its present state, is subsequent to the date of this Patriarch of Alexandria. In Simeon Metaph. the rest of the chapter after αἰώνια is omitted.

l. 9. ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ “The work is not of persuasion,” or, as the Syriac may be equally rendered, if we do not consider the Greek, “Not that persuasion is the work.” It is similar to the expression εὐ γὰρ ἐπαγγελίας τὸ ἔργον in the Epistle to the Ephesians. See note, p. 284 above. This agrees with the Greek B. and the Latin A., and is further supported by the citation of Timotheus of Alexandria at p. 210: σιωπῆς μόνου of A. may have been only a corruption of πεισμονῆς; for out of the nine letters of which this word is composed, eight are found in the eleven which form the other two words; or, indeed, it may have been an intentional change. ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ agrees with Χριστιανισμὸς of A. and ‘Christianitas’ of B. Timotheus of Alexandria has ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ with Χριστιανὸς of B. and ‘Christianus’ of A. Such variations may easily occur from the practice of contracting these words in MSS. ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ — ܡܘܨܗ “when the world hateth it.” The reading of the Syriac is exactly confirmed by the Armenian version: “Ail mjeds intsch ê khristonêuthiunn, horsham ateah zna asch’charh; d. i. aber etwas Grosses ist das Christenthum, wenn die Welt es hasst.” See Prof. Petermann, Ueber das Verhältniss der Armen. Uebers. der Briefe des Ignatius, in Jahresbericht der Deutschen Morgenl. Gesellschaft für 1846, p. 202. I have retained ὅταν μισῆται ἰπὸ κόσμου of B., confirmed by both Latin versions. This has been omitted in the Colbert MS., probably from an oversight of the transcriber. It is rendered by Timotheus, at p. 210, ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ ܡܘܨܗ “when it is hated by the world.”

ⲓⲗⲏⲥ — ⲃⲟⲥⲓⲟ “And I shall rise in him from the dead.” Ἀναστήσομαι expresses this. I have not, therefore, added in the text ἐκ νεκρῶν, or ἀπὸ νεκρῶν as we find in the Epistle to the Trallians, ch. ix.

l. 4. ⲓⲛⲓ ⲛⲓ ⲃⲟⲥⲓⲟ “To desire nothing.” Both Greek texts add κοσμικὸν ἢ μάταιον, which is probably a gloss, and is subsequent to the Latin version A.

l. 5. ⲛⲓ ⲛⲓ ⲓⲗⲟⲓⲛⲏ ⲗⲏⲥ “I am thrown among beasts,” as the representation of θηριομαχῶ, agrees exactly with the Armenian version: “I mêdsch gazanatz jem arkeal, ‘mitten unten wilde Thiere bin ich geworfen.’” See Petermann, in Jahresbericht, above cited, p. 202. See note on the Epistle to the Ephesians above, p. 279. γ. reads ⲗⲏⲥ for ⲗⲏⲥ.

l. 5. ⲓⲛⲓⲥⲟⲛⲟ ⲓⲛⲓⲗⲏⲥ “By sea and by land,” which would invert the order of the Greek, and read διὰ θαλάσσης καὶ γῆς. Jerome also has this order, “in mari et in terra”; and it is further confirmed by the Syriac version of Eusebius, p. 203. If Ignatius wrote this letter from Smyrna, as the interpolator states, ch. x., and had come from Seleucia thither, as the Acts of Martyrdom state, see ch. iii. p. 192, he had indeed been subject to the ill-treatment of his guard during a considerable voyage by sea; but he was still at the place where he disembarked, and could not, therefore, subsequently have received the same treatment during any long journey by land. The land journey in this case could only have been that from Antioch to Seleucia, too short a distance to seem to warrant these words of Ignatius; but the only one which could be alleged. This circumstance might have caused the change in the order of these words. Bp. Pearson saw this difficulty, and offered the following explanation of it: “Male hæc suggillant quidam, quæ recte explicari possunt, præsertim ex Philone, p. 1028. B. C. terra marique: terra scilicet ab Antiochia ad Seleuciam, et jam nunc Smyrnæ: mari à Seleucia ad Smyrnam.” See Annot. Dr. Smith’s edit. p. 54.

l. 9. γ. ⲓⲛⲓⲗⲏⲥ ⲓⲛⲓⲗⲏⲥ. I have adopted σύντομα of B., which reading is also confirmed by Eusebius, as being nearer ⲓⲛⲓⲗⲏⲥ of the Syriac than ἔτοιμα of the Colbert MS. In the next line we have also ⲓⲛⲓⲗⲏⲥ for συντόμως.

l. 10. ⲓⲟⲥⲁ ——— ⲛⲓⲟ “And not as that which is afraid of other men, and does not approach them.” The Syriac rendering of this passage, as it is quoted by Eusebius at p. 203, agrees exactly with this, with the exception of reading ⲟⲥ “not,” for ⲛⲓⲟ “and not,” and omitting ⲓⲗⲏⲥ “men,” (or “some”). The Greek text of this passage, as it is given in the editions of Eusebius, agrees with the text of A. and B. But there seems evidently to be some corruption here. Rufinus renders the passage, “deprecabor ne forte, ut in nonnullis fecerunt, timeant contingere corpus meum.” See p. 161. Jerome gives it, “ne sicut et aliorum martyrum, non audeant corpus meum contingere," p. 165. Gildas follows Rufinus, p. 175. Freculphus follows Jerome, p. 189. Upon the authority of the Syriac I have added ἄλλων, which seems to have been in the text of Eusebius when the Syriac version at p. 302 was made, which has ܐܠܠܐܝܢ, and also in the copies whence Jerome took aliorum. It appears that the beasts not unfrequently refused to injure the victims exposed to them. Thus, in the case of Blandina: προῦκειται βορὰ τῶν εἰσβαλλομένων θηρίων—καὶ μηδενὸς ἀψαμένον τότε τῶν θηρίων αὐτῆς: and so, likewise, in that of Maturus and Sanctus. See Epist. ab Eccles. Vien. et Lugd. ad Asiæ et Phryg. Eccl., in Eusebius' Hist. Eccl. Book v. ch. 1; and in Rowth's Reliq. Sacr. edit. sec. Vol. i. pp. 309, 310.

P. 50. l. 1. ܐܢܝܢ — ܐܢܝܢ “And even if they should not be willing to approach me.” The Syriac translator could hardly have read the passage as it now stands in the Greek. The discrepancy between the two texts, and the variation of Eusebius from both in reading ἄκορτα with A. and θέλη with B., suggest the probability of some error here; and this not only in the text of the Epistle, but also in that of Eusebius. The quotation made by him, as translated by Rufinus, is, “Quin imo et si eunctabuntur, ego vim faciam,” see p. 161, which in some degree corresponds with the Syriac version of the same, at p. 203, ܐܢܝܢ ܠܐ ܢܘܨܝܢ ܡܢ ܐܢܝܢ ܡܢ ܐܢܝܢ “and even should they refrain, and not be willing to approach me”; while Jerome has “quod si venire noluerint.” See p. 165. The error seems to have arisen from some confusion in reading θέλη for ἐλοη. Probably the true reading might have been κᾶν αὐτὰ δὲ ἐκόρτα (or ἄκορτα) μὴ ἔλοη ἐπ’ ἐμὲ. Ση (CH) of θελήσῃ in the Colbert MS. may be a corruption of ἐπ (ΕΠ), partly obliterated, and εμε have been dropped before εγω the next word. Sophronius' version of Jerome has εἰ γὰρ ἐπελθεῖν μὴ θελήσουσιν, p. 165.

l. 2. ܐܢܝܢ ܠܐ ܢܘܨܝܢ ܡܢ ܐܢܝܢ “Know me (or for me) from myself.” This is an expression which I do not remember to have met with elsewhere than in these Epistles. It is evidently intended to convey the same meaning as Συγγνώμην μοι ἔχετε in this place, and συγγνωμίτε μοι at p. 53. The same words are also used in the Syriac translation of Eusebius, p. 203, and in the extract containing this passage, p. 201. The meaning of the Syriac appears to be, “I crave your indulgence to leave the knowledge of what is expedient for me to my own conscience”; in which sense the interpolator seems to have understood it; for having borrowed the expression Συγγνωτέ μοι in the addition which he has made immediately following, he then subjoins these words: εἴ τις αὐτὸν ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἔχει, νοησάτο ὃ θέλω καὶ συμπαθείτω μοι. Or, it may be simply, “Grant me your indulgence. What is expedient for me? that nothing should envy,” &c. Ἐγὼ γινώσκω of the Greek is perhaps a gloss, intended to explain the abrupt and somewhat obscure passage as it stands otherwise. These, together with the following words, vûv—εἶναι, of both the Greek recensions, had already been introduced into the text before the time of Eusebius. The Syriac extract at p. 201 has also these additions, but reads ܦܫܬܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “what is ordered,” for ܦܫܬܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “what is expedient,” an error probably of the transcriber, caused by the similarity of the two words.

l. 4. ܦܫܬܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “And the beasts which are prepared”; and so, also, in the extract p. 201, as if the reading had been ἡτοιμάσμενα, as above, p. 47, l. 10. Both the Greek recensions and Eusebius have θηρίων τε συστάσεις: but we find συστάσεις rendered below, in this same Epistle, by ܦܫܬܐ. See p. 56, l. 2. In the Syriac version of Eusebius we have ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “and the collection (or assemblage) of beasts.” See p. 203, l. 20. Rufinus, p. 161, and Jerome, p. 165, and, after them, Gildas and Freculphus, have “bestiæ” only, which agrees with the quotation made by Severus, p. 216, where we have simply ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “beasts.” The following words, ἀνατομαὶ, διαιρέσεις, of both the Greek recensions are an addition, subsequent, not only to the time of Eusebius, see p. 161, but also to the period when the MS. was transcribed from which the Latin version A. was made, like κοσμικὸν ἢ ματαιὸν above.

l. 5. ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “Hard torments.” The Colbert MS. has κακαὶ κολάσεις; B. καὶ κόλασις. The Greek editions of Eusebius have κολάσεις; the Syriac version, p. 203, ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “and punishment,” with B.; Rufinus, “ac pœnæ”; Jerome, “et tota tormenta”; the Syriac extract, p. 201, ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “and evil crushings,” probably by a transposition for ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “torment,” which occupies the place of ܕܥܘܠܡܐ in the words immediately preceding. Severus, who seems to quote only from memory, has ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “and ten thousand kinds of torments,” p. 216, l. 9. The probable reading of the Syriac seems to be ܕܥܘܠܡܐ for ܕܥܘܠܡܐ. The ܥ and ܥ in ancient MSS. vary only by a slight vertical stroke, which might have been effaced, and the ܥ and ܥ then transposed: this would make it correspond exactly with the reading of the Colbert MS.

l. 6. ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “The pains of the birth are set over me.” The Syriac extract, p. 201, l. 19, has ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ “and the pains of death are set”; but ܕܥܘܠܡܐ seems only to be an error of the copyist for ܕܥܘܠܡܐ, like ܦܫܬܐ for ܦܫܬܐ, as I have mentioned above. In the long interpolated passage here these words have been altogether omitted by B. In the Colbert MS. we find ὁ δὲ τοκετός μοι ἐπίκειται, which is literally translated in the Syriac version of Timotheus of Alexandria, p. 211, l. 6, ܡܘܨܪ ܕܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ “but the birth is set over me.” The Latin A. has rendered it by “Ille lucrum mihi adjacet”; which interpretation, although approved by some, and amongst them by Dr. T. Smith, who compares Phil. i. 21, καὶ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν, κέρδος, is evidently erroneous, and has arisen from the obscurity caused by the long passages inserted both before and after these words, which destroy the context of Ignatius’ own sentences.

P. 52. l. 1. ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ ——— ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ “And my love is crucified, and there is not in me the fire for another love”; γ. reads ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ “of another love.” This passage also is rendered obscure in the Greek from having been separated by the interpolations so far from its proper context. I have added in the text ἄλλω ἔρωσι, to agree with ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ of the Syriac, traces of which still seem to remain in φιλόυλον ὕδωρ of A., and φιλοῦντί ὕδωρ of B. The mention of fire in himself by Ignatius seems to have brought its opposite element, water, into the mind of the interpolator, and to have suggested to him, in this place, the words of our Lord in his conversation with the Woman of Samaria: Jo. iv. 14. Origen refers the word ἔρωσι to Christ. See p. 159. It seems, however, from the context, to mean rather worldly affections and desires, and to be similar to the expression of St. Paul, Gal. vi. 14, ἐμοὶ κόσμος ἐσταίρωται. The meaning of the whole passage appears to be, that Ignatius, bearing in mind the words of our Lord, Jo. xv. 21, “A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow because her hour is come,” was desirous of signifying to the Romans that his hour of departure was at hand; and further, to shew them, that since the great object of his love had been crucified, he was himself anxious to undergo the ordeal that awaited him, by which he would be brought into near communion with Him who had so entirely engrossed the whole of his affections as to leave in him no warm desire for any other object that could be found on earth. The same sentiment he continues in the words following: “I have no pleasure in the food of corruption,” &c.

l. 2. γ. ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ “Of this world.” These Syriac words are used for αἰῶνος τούτου in the two places of these Epistles. See p. 36, l. 1, and p. 54, l. 8. In this same Epistle ܕܡܝܢ ܕܡܝܢ occurs four times for κόσμος, p. 44, l. 3, 8, 9, p. 46, l. 8. We should therefore have been led, from the Syriac, to expect αἰῶνος or κόσμου, rather than βίου as we find it in the Greek. Some Latin MSS. have also “Mundi hujus” in this place. See Usher, not. 81 on Epist. to Rom. p. 38. Montfaucon makes the following remark with respect to the use of the word βίος by Eusebius: “Singularis est apud Eusebium vocis βίος significatio: passim quippe pro genere hominum accipitur: sic p. 31, b. τοιοῦτος οὖν ἐτύχαιεν πᾶς ὁ πρὸ τοῦ σωτήρος ἡμῶν παρουν-this contradicts the account given in the Acts of his Martyrdom, that he embarked at Selucia, and went thence by sea to Smyrna (see ch. iii. p. 192); for he could, in that case, have passed by no cities, nor have been received by any Churches on his way to Smyrna. Bishop Pearson, with his usual sagacity, has perceived this difficulty, and attempts to obviate it by the following note: “αἱ μὴ προσήκονσά μοι. Int. Vet. male. Potius, ad me non spectantes; ad meam jurisdictionem non spectantes. Interpres male putavit Ignatium per urbes illas peditem Smyrnā usque pervenisse. Sed cogita. Illic enim locus accuratam explicationem postulat, ut cum passione conspiraret.” Hefele has given the correct explanation, “quæ non ad viam sitæ erant,” but without perceiving the dilemma in which this places him while he continues to uphold the genuineness both of the Ignatian Epistles of the Medicean MS., and of the Acts of Martyrdom of the Colbert MS.

l. 3. ܠܚܘܨܝܢ — ܘܠܒܘܒܘܠ “Now, therefore, being about to arrive shortly at Rome.” ܓ. adds ܘ before ܠܚܘܨܝܢ, correctly. This sentence is not found in the Greek, where, indeed, it would be unnecessary after the passage immediately following in the Syriac had been removed to form the nucleus of another Epistle, viz. that to the Trallians. We find, however, still traces of it in the spurious chapter which has been substituted: περὶ τῶν προελθόντων με εἰς Ῥώμην—ἐγγύς με ὄντα. I have replaced ܘܠܒܘܒܘܠ in the text by λοιπὸν οὖν, because it is the equivalent for these two words in the Peshito, 1 Thes. iv. 1, and because I find the interpolator has used λοιπὸν in the Epist. to the Ephesians, ch. xi. p. 29, and in that to the Smyrneans, ch. ix. p. 111. The particle οὖν should, however, be omitted. See note, p. 317 below.

P. 3. ܠܘܠܘܢ — ܠܘܠܘܢ, πολλὰ φρονῶ — τελειωθῶ. This passage is not found in the Greek in the Epistle to the Romans, but in that to the Trallians, whither it has been transferred by the author of this latter Epistle, to give a fair colour to the fabrication by introducing a part of the genuine writing of Ignatius, as we find in all the spurious Epistles that sentences and expressions have been borrowed largely from the true. The idea of transferring this considerable passage appears to have been suggested by the circumstance of the salutation in the preceding chapter seeming to form an appropriate and usual termination to the Epistle to the Romans, while the passage itself contained nothing which might not be removed without injuring the sense of what had preceded. It contains an additional argument why the Romans should accede to the wishes of St. Ignatius with respect to the execution of the sentence pronounced against him when he should arrive at Rome, but does not otherwise affect any of those which he had urged before.

l. 5. ܠܘܠܘܢ — ܠܘܠܘܢ “For they who say to me such things scourge me." I have added τοιαῦτα in the text, to correspond with ܩܘܝܐܘܬܐ : something is evidently wanted in A., which has only οἱ γὰρ λέγοντες μοι. The arranger of B. has thought to make this intelligible by substituting ἐπαίνοντες for λέγοντες. Dr. Smith and Chev. Bunsen suggest that μάρτυς or μάρτυς ἔση should be added instead of τοιαῦτα; but this rests upon the authority of the Syriac, while the other is only conjecture. It is quite plain, from the whole tenor of this Epistle, that some intimation had been conveyed to Ignatius from the Christians at Rome who had influence, that they were anxious to exert it in reversing his sentence and saving him from suffering. They appear to have urged his great spiritual knowledge as an argument why he should desire to have his life spared for the good of the Church; to which no reply could be more appropriate than that which is contained in these and the following words of this Epistle: where he affirms that they who "say such things to him scourge him." He seems to have borne in mind the circumstances of our Lord's sufferings, and to compare the flattery which some addressed to him when he was on the eve of his own execution to the scourging which preceded that of our Lord, or perhaps the scourging which the Martyrs seem to have undergone previously to their being exposed to the beasts. Thus, in the Epistle of the Church of Vienna, cited above, we read: ὁ μὲν οὖν Μάτουρος καὶ ὁ Σάγκτος καὶ ἡ Βλανδίνα καὶ Ἄτταλος ἤγοντο ἐπὶ τὰ θηρία εἰς τὸ δημόσιον — καὶ ὁ μὲν Μάτουρος καὶ ὁ Σάγκτος αὐτοῖς διήεσαν ἐν τῷ ἀμφιθέατρῳ διὰ πάσης κολάσεως, ὡς μηδὲν ὄλως προπεπονθότες· μάλλον δὲ ὡς διὰ πλείονων ἤδη κλήρων ἐκβεβιακότες τὸν ἀντίπαλον, καὶ περὶ τοῦ στέφανου αὐτοῦ τὸν ἀγῶνα ἔχοντες, ὑπέφερον πάλιν τὰς διεξόδους τῶν μαστιγῶν τὰς ἐκεῖσε ἐθισμένας; and a little below, speaking of Blandina: ἔσπευδε πρὸς αὐτοὺς χαίρουσα καὶ ἀγαλλιωμένα ἐπὶ τῇ ἐξόδῳ, ὡς εἰς νιμφικὸν δεῖπνον κεκλημένη, ἀλλὰ μὴ πρὸς θηρία βεβλημένη· καὶ μετὰ τὰς μαστιγὰς, μετὰ τὰ θηρία, κ.τ.λ. Rowth, Reliq. Sac. Edit. ii. Vol. pp. 309, 316.

l. 8. γ. ܩܘܝܐܘܬܐ . A. has Μὴ οὐ δύναμαι; B. Μὴ γὰρ οὐκ ἐβουλόμην.

l. 9. ܩܘܝܐܘܬܐ "To you," agrees with ὑμῖν in B., and "vobis" both in A. and B. γ. ܩܘܝܐܘܬܐ .

l. 10. ܩܘܝܐܘܬܐ "For I am cautious." These words, which appear to be necessary for the sense, are omitted in the Greek. The meaning of Ignatius is—Although I may be able to write to you on heavenly subjects, I am, nevertheless, afraid of causing you mischief thereby. Grant me your indulgence therefore, for I am cautious, lest not being able to comprehend,

&c. I have put φυλάσσομαι γὰρ in the text to correspond with $\text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܫܝ}$, perhaps, however, the proper word should be ἀσφαλίζομαι, as we read in ch. v. of the Epistle to the Philadelphians, p. 93, which is evidently borrowed from this place.

P. 56. l. 1. $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “And am able to know,” agrees with δύναμαι νοεῖν of B., ‘potens scire’ of A., and ‘possum intelligere’ of B. A. reads δυναμένος, probably an error from δύναμαι νοεῖν, as Chev. Bunsen has observed. I would further remark, that in MSS. written in uncial letters, and without the division of the words, such a change would be most easy. The sound of ε and αι is very similar; and they are frequently interchanged in ancient MSS. In a very ancient Palimpsest copy of the Gospel of St. Luke which I am now collating, ch. vi. v. 2, is read τι ποιεται ο ουκ αιξεστιν τοις σαββασι: but two verses below it is written εξεστιν. Dr. Jacobson gives one instance of this even from the modern Medicean MS., only a few lines below this passage, where γεύσετε is written for γεύσεται. See Patt. Apostt. p. 360, not.; and in a note at p. 483, ibid, he observes “ε et αι a librario nostro sæpissime commutantur.” The Ε and the С are very similar, only varying by a slight stroke from the centre of the former, which being effaced or faded would reduce it to the form of the С: the final Ν is very frequently omitted, and replaced by a slight horizontal line above, thus —. With these easy changes ΔΥΝΑΜΑΙΝΟΕΙΝ becomes ΔΥΝΑΜΕ-ΝΟCΙ. The Iota is the smallest letter of the alphabet, and may be easily effaced, together with the slight line over it.

l. 3. $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$, μαθητής, “A disciple;” that is, a perfect disciple, as the following words shew. Ignatius seems to allude to our Saviour’s words: “Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect,” Matth. v. 48. And again: “The disciple is not above his master; but every one that is perfect shall be as his master,” Luke vi. 40. To this he thought he should attain by martyrdom, as he writes above: τότε ἔσομαι μαθητής ἀληθῶς Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅτε οὐδὲ τὸ σῶμά μου ὁ κόσμος ὄψεται, p. 45. And again: ἐν δὲ τοῖς ἀδικήμασι αὐτῶν μάλλον μαθητεύομαι, p. 47. The Syriac extract at p. 198, l. 16, has $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “have ye been to me disciples;” or it may be rendered, “be ye disciples to me.” Severus, p. 217, l. 10, $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “lo, already am I even a disciple.”

l. 3. $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “For I am far short of that perfection which is worthy of God.” I have introduced into the text μοι of B., which agrees with the Syriac: not ἡμῖν of A. The extract at p. 198, l. 16, reads $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “for we are far short,” and Severus, at p. 217, l. 10, $\text{ܦܦܫܝܢ} | \text{ܦܠ} | \text{ܦܦܫܝܢ}$ “for many things are lacking to us.” Ἀξίως has been added, as it is required by the Syriac: the interpolator has retained the words ἀξιοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ in his last chapter; and in the inscription of this Epistle we find ἀξιώθεος and ἀξιώθεα πρόσωπα: and this word is also borrowed by the interpolator in the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. ii., and in the inscription of that to the Trallians. To agree with the Syriac, I have adopted τελειωθῶ, of which ἀπολειφθῶ of B. seems to be a corruption, after which it appeared necessary to add the negative μὴ to give any meaning to the passage. We find in B., in this same sentence, ἤδη τετελείωμαι ἢ μαθητῆς εἶμι; and at the end of ch. iii. p. 75, εἰν δὲ τελειωθῶ τάχα γενήσομαι. In the Epistle to the Philippians, ch. xv. p. 156, μέμνησθέ μου τῶν δεσμῶν, ἵνα τελειωθῶ. In the Martyrdom of Ignatius, ch. vi. p. 195, we read, τὴν ἰδίαν ἐπεθύμει γενέσθαι τελείωσιν, where the writer apparently refers to this very place, as he expressly does to another passage from this Epistle in the words immediately preceding those which I have quoted. The word τελειοῦμαι is employed as an euphemism for ‘death’ by the writers of the New Testament. Our Saviour, in his reply to the Pharisees, who said to him, “Get thee out and depart hence, for Herod will kill thee,” answers, “Go ye and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected (τελειοῦμαι): nevertheless, I must walk to-day and to-morrow, and the day following; for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.” Luke xiii. 31. Compare Heb. ii. 9, 10. v. 8, 9. with Phil. ii. 8. The word τελειοῦμαι was afterwards frequently applied to Martyrs. Chrysostom applies it to Ignatius himself: συνεχώρησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐκεῖ τελειωθῆναι τὸν ἅγιον. See p. 169 above. In the Synodical Letter of the Council of Constantinople, given by Theodoretus, Hist. Eccl. Book v. ch. 9, we read: τῶν δὲ καὶ τελειώθεντων ἐν ταῖς ἐξορίαις ἐπανεκομίσθη τὰ λείψανα: and a few lines below, λίθοις παρ’ αὐτῶν τελειωθέντες κατὰ τὸν μακάριον Στεφανον. In the Epistle of the Church of Vienna, Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. Book v. ch. 2, καὶ μετὰ δακρῶν παρεκάλουν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς δεόμενοι ἵνα ἐκτενεῖς εὐχαὶ γίνωνται πρὸς τὸ τελειωθῆναι αὐτούς: καὶ τὴν μὲν δύναμιν τῆς μαρτυρίας ἔργῳ ἐπεδείκνυτο. See also Routh’s Reliq. Sacr. Vol. i. p. 321.

l. 5. ρσ Δ “our God”—τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν. These words are not found in either of the Greek recensions; but they evidently belonged to the text at the time the additions were made to the Epistle to Polycarp, for the interpolator, imitating the manner in which Ignatius closes his Epistle to the Romans, has retained them in the termination of his own additions—ἐρρώσθαι ἡμᾶς διὰ παντὸς ἐν Θεῷ ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. See pp. 55, 310.

γ. adds Δ Δ Δ Δ “Here endeth the third.”

NOTES ON THE INTERPOLATED COPIES OF THE THREE GENUINE LETTERS, AND ON THE SPURIOUS EPISTLES,

AS EXHIBITED IN BOTH OF THE GREEK RECENSIONS.

It is not my intention in this place to enter upon any philological questions as to the state of the text of these Recensions, but to confine my observations principally to such passages as may tend to throw light upon the history of the Ignatian Epistles. In the text A. of the seven Epistles enumerated by Eusebius I have followed the accurate edition of Dr. Jacobson, by whom the Medicean and Colbert MSS. have been collated more recently than by any other editor; except in a very few instances, where I have retained the reading of the MS. instead of adopting the emendations which he has introduced into the text. In the Latin A. I have also followed Dr. Jacobson's edition, with the slight alteration of having occasionally adopted the variations of the MS. belonging to the College of Corpus Christi, which he had supplied in the margin. In the Greek and Latin text of B. I have chiefly followed the edition of Archbp. Usher, occasionally substituting the reading of other MSS. which the Archbishop did not make use of in his work. I have not thought it necessary to point out separately the several alterations which I have introduced into the text, because they are unimportant to the question which I have now before me, and will be easily manifest to any one who will take the pains to compare this text and that of the Archbishop with the editions of Cotelierius and Whiston, in which the variations of the different MSS. are noted.

ON THE EPISTLE TO POLYCARP.

Upon comparing the text of this Epistle, as it is represented by the Syriac, with that of the two recensions of the Greek, it will be found to have suffered comparatively little from the hands of the interpolator. In A. the text of the six first chapters has undergone scarcely any change, in no place exceeding the alteration or insertion of a single word; and in B. only a very few unimportant insertions have been made. The united testimony, therefore, of all the three recensions shews that these six chapters remain most nearly in the original state in which they proceeded from the author's pen, and, consequently, supply the best data upon which to ground any criticism with respect to the style of his genuine writings. At the end of the Epistle so much additional matter has been inserted as to swell two small sentences into the same number of chapters.

The first addition to this Epistle in A. is the insertion of the word ἐκκλησίας in the inscription, which, although apparently unimportant, evidently proceeds from the same intention as several other passages in the interpolated parts of the genuine, and in the spurious Epistles, which bear so strongly upon the subject of Church government, and of obedience to the same. The word ἐκκλησία, although occurring but once in the six chapters of the genuine text of this Epistle, see ch. v. p. 9, where Ignatius, apparently imitating St. Paul, and partly borrowing his words, Ephes. v. 28, 29, bids husbands to love their wives as the Lord does His Church, is found no less than three times in the two spurious chapters which follow. See p. 13. It appears to have been introduced with the same object as the following passage in the Epistle to the Trallians, ch. iii. p. 75: χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται: i. e. without a Bishop, Presbyters, and Deacons.

In the first chapter we find the epithet τοῦ ἀνώμου added to προσώπου σου. This word is used elsewhere by Ignatius. It may have been inadvertently omitted in the Syriac; or it may have been added in the Greek, to give greater weight to the name of Polycarp. The rest of the variations have been already mentioned in the notes upon the Syriac text.

With ch. vii. the interpolation begins, and betrays itself at once by the dissimilarity of the style. The difference of the construction of the first sentence of ch. vii. from any which precede it is immediately apparent; and in this and the next we find εὐθυμοτέρος—ἀμεριμνία—θεομακαριστότατε—συμβούλιον ἀγαγεῖν θεοπρεπέστατον—θεόδρομος—εὐποιῖαν—terms which are not used in the genuine passages, and such as would hardly have been employed by a Syrian, the rest of whose writings abound in Aramaisms, as I have already remarked. Several words and expressions have indeed been borrowed from the genuine Ignatius to give a cloke to the forgery; such as, Θεοῦ ἐπιτύχω—εὐρεθῆναι—δυνήσεται καλεῖσθαι—Θεοῦ γνώμην κεκτημένος, &c.

But the interpolator was evidently ignorant of the exact meaning of all these terms in their peculiar idiomatic force, as used by Ignatius; and thus, while he endeavours to imitate him by borrowing his expressions, betrays himself in misapplying them. We have an example of this in the employment of καταξιῶσαι in ch. vii. This verb occurs twice in the passive voice in this Epistle, pp. 1, 13, and once in the simple form ἀξιωθῆναι in that to the Romans, p. 41. The meaning, in all three places is plainly that of being accounted worthy by God; or, in other words, God having granted it so. Instances of the employment of this verb in the New Testament will readily suggest themselves to the reader. Thus, Luke xx. 35, “But they which shall be accounted worthy (οἱ δὲ καταξιωθέντες) to obtain that world;”

xxi. 36, "That ye may be accounted worthy (ἵνα καταξιωθῆτε) to escape;" Acts v. 41, "Rejoicing that they were counted worthy (κατηξιώθησαν) to suffer shame for his name;" 2 Thes. i. 5, "That ye may be counted worthy (εἰς τὸ καταξιωθῆναι) of the kingdom of God." Compare, also, 2 Thes. i. 11, 1 Tim. v. 17, Heb. x. 29. It is evident that the interpolator himself understood it in this sense in the Epistle to the Romans, from his adding τοῦ Θεοῦ after θέλημα, p. 41. In the only example in which it occurs in the active voice God is distinctly named as the agent, p. 43.

Now the interpolator, in inserting so much of his own matter as to amplify the two last sentences of this Epistle into two chapters, was evidently desirous of disguising the additions which he made by borrowing some of the usual expressions of Ignatius to mingle with his own; instances of which I have just enumerated. Moreover, having observed that the word καταξιῶσθαι, besides being employed in the last genuine sentence of this Epistle, had been used elsewhere by Ignatius, he adopts this verb, but applies it very differently from the idiomatic sense in which it occurs in the genuine text; and thus makes Ignatius request that Polycarp should convene a council (συμβούλιον) to ordain (χειροτονῆσαι) a person, and "count him worthy (καταξιῶσαι) to go to Syria." He thus transfers to the council a term which, according to the peculiarity of idiom, and the example of every instance of its occurrence in the genuine Epistles, is only attributed to the Supreme Disposer of events.

In the seventh chapter the address is still maintained in the plural number, as in the genuine part of the Epistle immediately preceding, in which Ignatius is speaking to the Smyrneans, as the letter evidently was intended for the common edification both of the Bishop of Smyrna and the flock committed to his charge.

In the eighth chapter the address again reverts to the singular number, in which respect the closing words of the genuine Epistle have been imitated, although they have been removed from the text. At the end the interpolator returns again to the plural, imitating the close of the Epistle to the Romans; and in so doing he has retained the words Θεῶ ἡμῶν in conjunction with Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, which have been lost from their proper place in the Greek copies, (see p. 55); while for ἐν ὑπομονῇ has been substituted ἐν ἐνότῃ καὶ ἐπισκοπῇ, agreeably to the general purport of the rest of the spurious additions.

The variations of B. from A. in this Epistle are very slight, amounting only to a few words, which appear to have been added rather by way of explanation or illustration than for any dogmatical purpose. This will be manifest from the comparison of the two recensions. The addition of ἀμὴν, ἡ χάρις in B. at the end of the last chapter, (see also the end of the Epistle to

At the beginning of the seventh chapter we find that the writer, continuing his address to Ignatius and the Smyrneans, states that it had been "made known to him, that on account of their prayers the Church in Antioch of Syria was at peace; and he therefore exhorts them to ordain one who may be called a Θεόδωρος, to go to Syria; that this might evince their unwearied love. In the Epistle to the Smyrneans, ch. xi. p. 113, the same thing is repeated. The person there to be ordained is called Θεοπροσβύτην; and the object of his journey is to congratulate the Antiochians upon being again at peace, "and upon having recovered their own greatness, and having had their own body restored to them": ὅτι εἰρηνεύουσιν, καὶ ἀπελάβον τὸ ἴδιον μέγεθος, καὶ ἀπεκατεστάθη αὐτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σωματεῖον. See also Epist. to Philad., ch. x. Now unless there had been great dissensions and schisms in that Church—of which no account whatever has been handed down—it is impossible to understand these words with reference to any other circumstance than the persecution of the Christians by Trajan, during which Ignatius himself was condemned. Bishop Pearson, in his note upon this passage, says expressly this persecution is alluded to: "Quum esset Troade, certior factus est, finem persecutioni Antiochiæ per Trajanum impositum esse. De qua re dubitari non debet: nam à Joanne Antiocheno, Historico probato, apud Suidam, observatum est, ὅτι Τραϊανὸς τοῖς Χριστιανοῖς ἀνακωχὴν τινα τῆς τιμωρίας παρέσχεν et tum subjungit Tiberiani historiam. Tiberiani autem relatio facta est ad Trajanum, quum esset Antiochiæ, ut testatur Joannes Malela (Lib. xi.) Antiochenus et ipse." See Annot., Dr. Smith's Edit. p. 32. Many of my readers will probably agree with me, that the grounds which the learned Bishop adduces do not appear sufficient to remove all doubt on this head.*

Now, these three letters profess to have been written from Troas, at which city Ignatius had arrived on his journey to Rome, to suffer according to the condemnation pronounced against him by Trajan during his persecution of the Christians at Antioch. This to Polycarp, according to the statement made in the last chapter, was written under circumstances of such haste as to preclude the possibility of his writing to other Churches, as he wished to do. In the Acts of the Martyrdom of Ignatius it is stated, that upon his hearing the sentence of Trajan "he cried out with joy, offered thanks to God, and, having done this, he put on the bonds with gladness; and having prayed for the Church, he was snatched away by the brutish violence of the soldiers." Proceeding then from Antioch with great alacrity, he embarked at Seleucia, and touched, after much fatigue, at Smyrna; whence he again embarked, being hurried by the soldiers that they might proceed to Rome, and landed at Troas. Now all this implies that the journey of Ignatius was made with all convenient speed, and that no time was unnecessarily lost. How, then, it may be asked, could intelligence have overtaken Ignatius at Troas, of the persecution of the Christians at Antioch having ceased, and of the Church "having had its own magnitude restored, and having recovered its own body." For this to have been the case, the condemnation of Ignatius by Trajan for the profession of Christianity at Antioch, and his entire inhibition of the persecution of the Christians there, so that their Church could recover its former magnitude and constitution, must have followed so quickly, that the tidings of all this could overtake Ignatius on his way to Rome, when, even under some circumstances of urgency, he had only arrived at Troas. Moreover, Trajan must have suspended his hostility to the Christians immediately upon the departure of their Bishop, without reversing or mitigating in the slightest degree his cruel sentence against him. This seems to carry improbability, if not contradiction, upon the very face of it.

* To guard myself from the imputation of presumption, of which some have been ready to accuse me for venturing to differ from the opinion of this learned Prelate, I quote here the words of a still more learned man, J. A. Fabricius, respecting the two historians mentioned by Bp. Pearson: "Joannes Antiochenus, cognomento Malelas, diversus ab altero Joanne Monacho Antiocheno, itidem chronographo atque similia passim tradente, et similibus delectato fabulis." See Bibl. Græc. Vol. VI. p. 138.

I am aware that some persons, who profess their belief in the Divine inspiration of the seven Epistles of the shorter recension which have been enumerated by Eusebius, may allege that Ignatius, when he writes ὡς ἐδήλωθή μοι, alludes to a Divine revelation made to him on this point; as we find pretensions of this kind in other places of the Ignatian Epistles: see Epist. to Ephes. ch. xx., to Philad. ch. vii., and to Trall. ch. viii. But this view of the matter can hardly be admitted in a critical investigation respecting these Epistles.

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

The occasion of this letter, as we gather from its contents exhibited in the text of the Syriac version, was to thank the Ephesians for their kindness in sending their Bishop, Onesimus, to greet him on his journey, and probably, also, to exhibit some other pledges of their esteem and love which might tend to alleviate the inconveniences which he was suffering as a prisoner in bonds. Having testified how acceptable and gratifying this attention on their part was to his own feelings, and having spoken in commendation of their Bishop, who had been the means of conveying it to him; and, further, having expressed a prayer that they might all follow in the steps of their worthy Bishop, he proceeds to offer a very few words of exhortation and advice respecting their duties as disciples of Christ, urging his love as an excuse for taking upon himself to do so. I mention this, because, although the form of this Epistle has been imitated in some measure in the beginning of that to the Magnesians, the character of it is in direct opposition to the tenor of most of the spurious Epistles, in which we find that Ignatius is made to put himself forward to write upon subjects apparently irrelevant to his position as a person on his way to suffer martyrdom; and even to the latter part of the Epistle to the Ephesians, as exhibited in the shorter recension, where he is made to volunteer, upon a future occasion, "to write another little book, and make known to them the economy which he had commenced towards the new man, Jesus Christ." See ch. xx. p. 37.

The Syriac recension makes no mention of any other persons, besides Onesimus, having gone to visit Ignatius in the name of the Ephesians. To have sent a large deputation to meet this Bishop on his way to martyrdom for the profession of Christianity, while he was under a strict guard of soldiers, and during the time that a persecution was raging against the Christians, in which the emperor himself personally took a part, would certainly have been an incautious proceeding, and probably not unattended with danger to the Church at Ephesus.

But according to the Greek recensions, Onesimus was accompanied by at least four others—Crocus, Euplus, Fronto, and Burrus the Deacon; and these went the whole distance from Ephesus to Smyrna to meet him. Compare ch. ii. xxi., and ch. xv. of the Epistle to the Magnesians. Of these he requests that Burrus should remain with him for their honour, and for that of the Bishop. See ch. ii. Upon such an occasion, however, as this, in the midst of the persecution of the Christians, when he himself was bound a prisoner among soldiers, of whose continued ill-treatment of him by night and by day he complains, comparing them to wild beasts, and on his way to suffer death for the profession of his faith, it seems scarcely probable that Ignatius should have requested that a Deacon of the Church of Ephesus should be left with him for the honour of that Church and of their Bishop, or, as it is expressed in the Epistle to the Philadelphians, ch. xi., simply εἰς λόγον τιμῆς; and still less probable that the strict guard under whose custody he was placed should have consented and allowed of such a proceeding.

The reason for the introduction, by the interpolator, of such a request as this into the genuine Epistle to the Ephesians, seems plainly to have been this—to afford him what would appear a plausible method for conveying the spurious Letters which he had then either already written, or formed the intention of writing, when he made the additions to Ignatius' own Letter. Accordingly, in agreement with the plan thus prepared, we find that Burrus is made to accompany Ignatius to Troas; and from thence to be the bearer of the Epistle to the Philadelphians, ch. xi., and of that to the Smyrneans, ch. xii.

With respect to Burrus, in the Epistle to the Smyrneans, ch. xii., he is said to have been sent by the Smyrneans. In this Epistle, ch. ii., he is called a Deacon of the Ephesians. In that to the Philadelphians, ch. xi., it is stated that he was sent by the Ephesians and Smyrneans conjointly εις λόγον τιμῆς. In these two latter places in B. he is called Βούργου; and in the former, Βίρρου.

In this Epistle, as it is restored by the Syriac version, there is no mention either of the place where Onesimus met Ignatius, nor of that from which he wrote the letter. In the Acts of Martyrdom he is stated not to have disembarked before he reached Smyrna. It is not, however, improbable that the vessel might have touched at the port of Ephesus on the way; and that the Ephesians, having heard of his being in bonds, might have sent Onesimus to visit him, and render any assistance which he might be able to supply; and thus have afforded Ignatius the occasion of writing this Epistle. Indeed, if we were to take the recension A. as it is found in the Medicean MS., and consider the Epistle to the Ephesians, as it stands there, apart from the other Epistles, we should necessarily draw the inference that such must have been the case, and that four out of the five whom Ignatius is stated to have seen, in ch. ii., did not go to Smyrna; for at the end of the Epistle, ch. xxi., he speaks in the singular, as if one person only had been sent to Smyrna: ὃν ἐπέμψατε εἰς Θεοῦ τιμὴν εἰς Σμύρναν· ὃθεν καὶ γράφω, κ. τ. λ. But the true reading seems to be ὧν of B.: and in the other Epistles, said to have been written from Smyrna, the plural form is used; while in that to the Romans Crocus is expressly mentioned. See Epist. to Rom. ch. x. p. 53; to Magnes. ch. xv. p. 73; to Trall. ch. xiii. p. 85. We are therefore necessarily brought to the conclusion, that all the five persons mentioned in ch. ii. are supposed to have gone from Ephesus to Smyrna to meet Ignatius. The distance between these two cities is 320 stadia, or 40 miles, in a straight line; and the journey taking up thirteen or fourteen hours, would necessarily occupy a part of two days. See Dr. Chandler's Travels in Asia Minor, p. 109. Supposing, therefore, that immediately upon the arrival of Ignatius at Smyrna a messenger had been despatched with intelligence to Ephesus, we can hardly infer that an interval of less than about four days must have elapsed before the deputation from the Church of Ephesus could have reached Smyrna and visited Ignatius. If we are to take into account here the additional time which would be necessary to carry onward the intelligence to Magnesia and Tralles, this period would be more than doubled. We have no information whatever as to how long or how short the sojourn of Ignatius might have been at Smyrna; but as I have before observed, we have good grounds to conclude that his journey was hurried, and that no time was unnecessarily lost. There appears, therefore, to be some inconsistency between this and the hypothesis that intelligence was sent to the Ephesians of Ignatius being at Smyrna after he had arrived there. If he had touched at the port of Ephesus as he passed, the journey of the Ephesians to Smyrna would seem to have been unnecessary; but if neither of these was the case, it is difficult to understand by what means they could have obtained information respecting the journey of Ignatius from Seleucia to Smyrna, and have been able to arrange their mission so happily as to arrive at the latter city exactly at the time when he was passing.

The variations in the inscription of this Epistle in A. from the Syriac have been already noticed, pp. 275—277.

Ch. i.—Besides the variations specified above, pp. 277—280, the expression, “a disciple of God,” has been modified by the introduction of the words of St. Paul, Eph. v. 2, to “a disciple of him who offered himself for us an offering and sacrifice to God,” which makes it tantamount to simply “a disciple of Christ”; whereas the other expression, “a disciple of God,” is not used in the Scriptures. The variations of B. from A. here seem to be of an Arian tendency. In the inscription, instead of “the Father and Jesus Christ our God,” B. has “God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ.” In ch. i., for “imitators of God,” and “fervent in the blood of God,” which can refer only to Christ, B. reads “imitators of the philanthropy of God,” and “fervent in the blood of Christ.” The other additions, Χριστοῦ, ὁ Θεὸς, and ἐν Χριστῷ, seem to be merely explanatory.

Ch. ii.—The Syriac shews this to be altogether due to the interpolator. It relates to the persons who are said to have accompanied Ignatius. Of this I have spoken above. It introduces mention of a Deacon, Bishop, and Presbytery, and urges the necessity of submission to them, and of unanimity, as the means of sanctification in every thing. The interpolator appears in this place to begin to expand to his own views the idea expressed by Ignatius himself towards the end of the Epistle to Polycarp: τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ προσέχετε—παρὰ Θεῷ, p. 11, l. 1; and in order to give a colour to his own words, he borrows thence the expressions, ὑποτασσόμενοι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, and ὀναίμην ὑμῶν διὰ παντός. See p. 11. The variations of B. from A. in this chapter are unimportant, consisting of only one or two additional epithets, and a quotation from St. Paul.

Ch. iii.—Part of the true Epistle has been retained here, and some of the genuine expressions of Ignatius been borrowed from his Epistle to the Romans, p. 47, l. 1, and p. 55, l. 1. Christ is called τὸ ἀδιάκριτον ἡμῶν ζῆν, which is altogether omitted in B., and a totally different passage substituted. Bishops are said to be appointed, κατὰ τὰ πέρατα, and to be ἐν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ γνώμη, the precise meaning of which does not seem to be very clear. If this passage existed when the recension B. was made, the author of the latter does not seem to have understood A.; for he has entirely omitted it, and substituted, “therefore we also ought to live according to the mind of God in Christ, and be emulous, as St. Paul, &c.” In the former part of the chapter B. has substituted ὁμοδόλοις for συνδιδασκαλίταις, respecting which Br. Pearson writes: “Mira vox: neque enim puto vocem simplicem διδασκαλίτης uspiam occurrere” (see Annot. Dr. Smith’s Edit. p. 35), and ὑπομνησθῆναι for ὑπαλειφθῆναι.

Ch. iv.—vi. are altogether interpolated, and relate almost entirely to the duty of obedience to the Bishop, and of union with him. The Bishop is compared to a harp, the chords of which are the Presbytery, and the chorus is formed of the other individual members of the church, by whom God is praised in concert through Christ. This seems to be evidently connected with the story which became current about the fifth century respecting the institution of chaunting in churches having originated with Ignatius. See note, p. 293 above. The variations of B. in these chapters consist not only of additions, but also of omissions. The former are principally illustrative or amplificatory. Of the passages omitted three are subjunctive, commencing with the particle ἵνα, as in ch. iv., ἵνα ὑμῶν—αὐτοῦ, and ἵνα—μετέχητε; and in ch. v., ἵνα ὦμεν Θεοῦ ὑποτασσόμενοι. The fourth passage omitted is οἷτος—δέκρινεν, which seems to refer to the same subject as τὸ ἀδιάκριτον in ch. iii. In ch. v., besides the additions and omissions, the order has also been inverted. Of verbal alterations it is worth while noticing that the strange expression χρώμα Θεοῦ has been replaced by another, συνάφειαν Θεοῦ.

Ch. vii. is also the work of the interpolator. Having spoken, at the end of the preceding chapter, of the praise which Onesimus had bestowed upon the Ephesians on account of their good order and freedom from heresy, he proceeds in this to mention certain heretics, and warn them against them. In it is found the celebrated passage, Εἰς ἰατρός, κ. τ. λ., said to have been quoted by Athanasius and others. In B. this has been altered considerably, apparently with an Arian tendency.

Ch. viii., ix., x., contain each a part of the genuine text mingled with interpolated passages. The variations of B. from A. in these chapters do not seem to have any doctrinal tendency. In ch. viii. B. has retained the true reading, ἐπιθυμία, for which ἔρις has been substituted in A. at a later period. The beginning of ch. ix., which contains some strange and harsh metaphors (see Whiston's Diss. p. 24), has been extended and modified in B. Towards the end of the chapter the following words, ἐστὲ οὖν καὶ σύνοδοι πάντες, θεοφόροι, καὶ ναοφόροι, χριστοφόροι, ἀγιοφόροι, are very dissimilar to any thing found in the text which the Syriac acknowledges as genuine, and such as we should hardly expect to meet with in writings, the idiom of which betrays the Aramaisms of the author. The strange term, σύνοδοι, seems to have displeased the arranger of the recension B., and therefore to have been removed by him. With respect to the particle οὖν, I observe that it only occurs twice in the whole text of the three genuine Epistles, as I have arranged it to correspond with the Syriac; once in that to the Ephesians, p. 17, l. 5: Ἐπεὶ οὖν, κ.τ.λ.; and even in this place the particle καὶ shews that the translator most probably did not read οὖν, but δὲ, as in the Epistle to Polycarp, p. 9, l. 1, 9; in this Epistle, p. 29, l. 1, p. 33, l. 2, &c.; and again in the Epistle to the Romans: χρηρίζω οὖν, p. 53, l. 9, where we find, corresponding with it, ܘܢܘܨܐ, its usual equivalent in Syriac. It appears, then, from the Syriac, that this particle has not been used more than once by Ignatius. In the genuine text of the two first Epistles it does not occur at all. So soon, however, as we enter upon the province of the interpolator we find the particle οὖν. Thus, in ch. vii. of the Epistle to Polycarp, with which the interpolation commences; in ch. ii. of the Epistle to the Ephesians also, where it again commences; and, further, in chapters iv., v., vi., viii., ix., xiii., xv., xvi., xix., all in passages which the Syriac shews to be spurious; and again in ch. vii. of the Epistle to the Romans. I further observe that, although this particle is found only once in the text of these three Epistles, acknowledged as genuine by the Syriac, it occurs not less than twelve times in the Epistle to the Magnesians, eleven in that to the Trallians, and five in each of those to the Philadelphians and Smyrneans. But besides the recurrence of this particle in the spurious passages, we find it also inserted by the interpolator into the genuine. Thus, in the Epistle to Polycarp, ch. vi. p. 11, it is added after μακροθυμήσατε; and in that to the Ephesians, ch. x. p. 27, after ἐπιτρέψατε, evidently with the object of softening the abruptness of the original style, of which we find numerous instances in these three Epistles. Thus, in the Epistle to Polycarp, ch. i., the insertion of καὶ between ὡς and σε, and between ὡσπερ and ποιεῖς; ch. iii., the addition of δὲ after μάλιστα; ch. v., the insertion of the conjunction καὶ between the two sentences beginning with ἐὰν, &c. The addition of μαρτυρίου in ch. i., of νῦν in ch. xiv. of the Epistle to the Ephesians, and of τοῦ Θεοῦ and χαρίτος in ch. i., of βορὰν in ch. ii., of κοσμικὸν ἢ ματαίον in ch. iv. of the Epistle to the Romans, and others, doubtless originated in the same cause. I had substi-

At the end of ch. x. we have the expression, τοῦ διαβόλου βοτάνη. In the Epistle to the Trallians, ch. vi. p. 77, we find ἀλλοτρίαις δὲ βοτάνης ἀπέχεσθαι, ἧτις ἐστὶν αἵρεσις; to the Philadelphians, ch. iii. p. 89, Ἀπέχεσθε τῶν κακῶν βοτανῶν, ἅστινας οὐ γεωργεῖ Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς διὰ τὸ μὴ εἶναι αὐτοὺς φυτεῖαν Πατρὸς; to the Trallians, ch. xi. p. 83, φεύγετε οὖν τὰς κακὰς παραφνάδας—οὗτοι γὰρ οὐκ εἰσὶν φυτεῖα Πατρὸς. From this it is evident that the writer regards βοτάνη and παραφνάδας as heresies, with which we may compare the following sentence of Irenæus: “Jam multæ propagines multarum hæresium factæ sunt.” Edit. Massuet. p. 106. But φυτεῖα Πατρὸς is taken as the true church. This seems to be borrowed from the Constitutions of the Apostles, Book i. ch. i.: Θεοῦ φυτεῖα ἡ καθολικὴ ἐκκλησία.

In this place B. adds πικρὰ γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ ἀλμυρά τις αὕτη, with which compare πάσαν φάγε βοτάνην, τὴν δὲ πικρίαν ἔχουσαν μὴ φάγῃς, from the Gospel to the Egyptians. See Jones’s New and Full Method, Vol. i. p. 199. Fabricius Cod. Apoc. Nov. Test. p. 336. At the end of the chapter σαρκικῶς καὶ πνευματικῶς has been omitted in B.

Ch. xi., xii., xiii. are entirely spurious. The variations in B. do not seem to have any dogmatical tendency. In ch. xi. we find another instance of the omission of a subjunctive sentence, as mentioned above: ἵνα—γένηται. The strange expression πάροδος ἐστε τῶν εἰς θεὸν ἀναιρουμένων of ch. xii. has been altered and modified. Θεοῦ ἐπιτύχω has been changed to Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, both of which are found in the genuine text of Ignatius: see pp. 5, 7, 41, and 49. ὃς ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ μνημονεύει ὑμῶν, “who makes mention of you in every Epistle,” which would not be true if πάσῃ be taken in its ordinary signification, has been changed to “who always makes mention of you in his prayers,” which is an allusion to St. Paul’s own words in his Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. i. v. 16.

Ch. xiv. and xv. contain each a small portion of the genuine text. The last sentence of ch. xiv., which belongs to this, has been omitted from B. The preceding interpolated passage in A. being little more than a paraphrase of this, the arranger of B. seems to have omitted it as unnecessary. Compare note on l. 3, p. 17 above, p. 279. In ch. xv. the long passage, εἰς οὖν—γινώσκηται, has been omitted. The occurrence of the words σιγῶν and σιγᾶ seems in some measure to have influenced this omission. In ch. vi., where σιγῶντα occurs, it has been changed in B. to σιωπῶντα; or, indeed, vice versâ. In the Epistle to the Romans, p. 41, we find σιωπήσητε used by Ignatius, but in the sense of refraining from speaking.

In the Epistle to the Magnesians, ch. viii. p. 67, ἀίδιος οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προέλωιν has been also omitted in B. The term σιγῶν does, however, occur in B., in the Epistle to the Philadelphians, ch. i. p. 89.

The last sentence of ch. xv., ὅπερ καὶ ἔστιν—αὐτόν, which, to say the least, is certainly very obscure, has been omitted in B., and another, altogether different, substituted.

Chapters xvi. and xvii. are the work of the interpolator. The meaning of ch. xvi., which is obscure in A., has been rendered more intelligible by the additions in B., from which, however, the last part of this chapter, ὁ ποιούτος—αὐτοῦ, has been omitted.

It is not easy to apprehend the meaning of the writer in ch. xviii. when he says: "On this account the Lord took ointment on his head, that he might breathe incorruption to his church." We find in Irenæus a similar expression: τὸ μὲν ὑλικὸν, ὃ καὶ ἀριστερὸν καλοῦσιν, ἄτε μηδεμίαν ἐπιδέξασθαι πνοὴν ἀφθαρσίας δυνάμενον, edit. Massuet. p. 28; with which we may compare ἔχουσά τινα ὁδμὴν ἀφθαρσίας ἐγκαταλειφθεῖσαν αὐτῇ ὑπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Ibid. p. 18.

The first sentence of ch. xviii. is a passage from the genuine Epistle: the rest belongs to the interpolator. Περίψημα τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα is omitted in B. See note, p. 284. In the latter part, the error of those who denied that Christ was born of Mary and of the seed of David is combatted. This is again repeated in ch. xx., and in the interpolated part of ch. vii. of the Epistle to the Romans, p. 51, and in several places of the spurious epistles. In B. we find again here an Arian tendency, in the substitution of ὁ γὰρ τοῦ Θεοῦ υἱὸς for ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς of A. We find, indeed, in B., in this Epistle, ch. vii., τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν Θεὸν Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν; but it is there put in direct distinction to ὁ μόνος ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς, ὁ ἀγέννητος καὶ ἀπρόσιτος. The last words, ἵνα τῷ πάθει τὸ ὕδωρ καθάρισις, of which it is difficult to ascertain the exact meaning, have been removed from B., and another sentence supplied. Both Theodoretus and Timotheus of Alexandria read them differently from the present text. See pp. 171 and 211, l. 20.

Ch. xix. consists of a part of the genuine text mixed with interpolations. See notes, pp. 285—287.

Chapters xxi. and xxii. belong to the interpolator. In the beginning of the former the writer states that it was his intention, "if Jesus Christ should count him worthy, to make known to the Ephesians, in another little book which he was about to write, what economy he had begun towards the new man in Christ." That Ignatius, having been condemned as a culprit by the Emperor, in the close custody of ten soldiers, who, he himself informs us, harrassed him "by day and by night, by sea and by land," should have been able to write such, and so long an Epistle as this, even as it stands in the Medicean text, appears in itself to be highly improbable; but under the same circumstances, while the time of his departure was drawing every day nearer at hand, and he was hurried onwards to Rome to undergo his sentence, that he should still contemplate writing a second "little book respecting the economy which he had begun towards the new man Jesus Christ," and that this was to be sent to the Ephesians, with whom he seems to have had no personal connection further than having received on his journey, through Onesimus, their πολυπλήθειαν (whatever this might have been), appears to be altogether incongruous and incredible. Moreover, it is plain, from the whole tenor of the Epistle to the Romans, that he did not wish nor hope that his life should be spared and prolonged, which alone might have afforded him time to write again to Ephesus. And further, it is evident from the same Epistle (see p. 53), that to the Romans, at least, he did not think it advisable to communicate his knowledge on heavenly things, and this also appears inconsistent with the promise that is here put into the mouth of Ignatius. All this seems to have struck the author of the recension B., who, to give more weight to his own work, has altogether omitted this passage. The introduction of it into A. appears to have been with the design of preparing the way for other fabrications, should this pass off successfully.

The sentence μάλιστα—ἀποκαλύψει, in which the writer seems to refer to the probability of a Divine revelation being made to him, has also been removed from B. This likewise seems to have been intended as preparatory for some other fabrication, which was not only to have the authority of the venerable name of Ignatius attached to it, but was further to be sanctioned by Divine revelations made to him; as we find a Divine authority was assigned to the practice of chaunting alternately in churches, by alledging its institution by Ignatius in consequence of a vision of angels. See the passage of Socrates cited p. 172, and note, p. 293.

Towards the close of ch. xx. reference is again made to the subject of obedience to the Bishop and Presbytery, and the "one bread" is called "the medicine of immortality, the antidote against death": this is very different from Ignatius' own terms in the Epistle to the Romans, p. 51, "I seek the bread of God, which is the flesh of Christ; and I seek his blood, a drink which is love incorruptible"; to which indeed the interpolator has added, "and everlasting life," in the same spirit as in this place of the Epistle to the Ephesians. See note, p. 303.

It is not necessary to make any remark upon the last chapter, further than to notice that the interpolator has borrowed the cloke of several of the general expressions of Ignatius; such as, ἀντίψυχον ἰμῶν—δεδεμένος εἰς Πάμην—ἡξιώθην—Θεοῦ εὐρεθῆναι, and ἔρρώσθε from the end of the Epistle to the Romans.

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

The entire scope of this letter of Ignatius is to entreat the Christians at Rome, who seem to have conveyed to him some intimation of their anxiety to exert themselves to save him, and of the probability of their being successful, to suffer the sentence pronounced against him to take its course, and to use no endeavours to deprive him of the crown of martyrdom which he ardently desired. The whole tenor of the Epistle is earnestly impassioned, and written with a degree of warmth and excitement, such as we should naturally be led to expect from one under the circumstances in which he is said to have been placed. He had boldly maintained the confession of his faith in Christ crucified before the Roman Emperor himself; he had manifested the greatest alacrity to undergo the sentence which had been decreed against him; he had already suffered many hardships and injuries in travelling a considerable distance towards the seat of the empire where it was to be executed upon him; and his emotion would therefore necessarily become greater as he drew nearer to Rome. In the full confidence of faith he felt as St. Paul, that for himself "to depart and to be with Christ would be far better," Phil. i. 23; and that if strength were granted to him to seal his confession with his blood, as that Apostle and St. Peter had done before him in the very city to which he was then approaching, all the dangers and temptations of this world would then be over: he would no longer be subject to the infirmities of the flesh; but that he should then be (to use his own words) "the freedman of Jesus Christ, and should rise again from the dead free." See p. 47.

But we should probably be guilty of injustice towards this disciple of the Apostles if we were to assert that he was moved only by the personal considerations of himself and of his own advantage, even although that was to be eternal, in urging this entreaty upon the Christians at Rome. He was doubtless influenced by the desire of strengthening their faith by shewing the steadfastness of his own, "even to the end"; and thus, by the benefit of his example, of rendering a service to the whole Christian Church. He does not seem to have deemed it, in his own case, as in that of St. Paul, to be more needful for those under his pastoral care, and indeed for the whole Church, that he should "abide in the flesh," although the concluding part of this Epistle seems evidently to imply that some such argument, drawn from the loss which the Church would sustain in being deprived of his knowledge of spiritual and heavenly things, had been pressed upon him. See note, p. 305. He was already far advanced in years, and he could not therefore, in the course of nature, continue much longer to benefit them by his instructions on earth. As Bishop of the famous and populous city where the disciples of our Lord were first called Christians, he had been publicly summoned before the Emperor himself, and by him had been condemned to be devoured by wild beasts for having professed himself a Christian, and had been ordered to be conveyed to the seat of the empire to suffer the punishment denounced against him in the public amphitheatre. His case was therefore most notorious; and while he was thus exhibited as a spectacle to the heathen, the influence of his conduct would necessarily be felt by all the Christian world. To have shrunk back, then, at such a moment, by availing himself of the exertions of his friends at Rome to procure a remission of his sentence, would have tended to cast a suspicion upon the strength and efficacy of his belief; and thus would have brought injury and reproach upon the whole cause of Christianity. In the Epistle, therefore, before us Ignatius earnestly entreats the Christians at Rome to abstain from exerting themselves to procure any remission of his sentence by a variety of arguments, which will be best understood from the perusal of the Letter itself. They are all urged with a degree of personal emotion and earnestness, which could hardly be assumed by one who did not feel deeply what he was writing; and they appear to me to furnish as strong internal evidence of genuineness and truth as could possibly be wished for.

Those who have objected to this eager desire of Ignatius to undergo martyrdom as being unworthy of a disciple of the Apostles, seem to have neglected to take into consideration the circumstances which I have just stated, overlooking also the fact of St. Paul's own earnest wish to be offered up, and to depart and be with Christ; and to have forgotten that, although the high principles and constraining motives of Christianity can and ought to govern and rectify all our sentiments and affections, they do not, nor were they intended entirely to suppress and extinguish those natural feelings and emotions which form an essential part in the constitution of man as he came from the hands of his creator.

In this Epistle, as restored by the Syriac, there is no mention of the persons by whom it was sent, nor of the place where it was written. In the interpolated chapter x. of the Greek the author states that he wrote from Smyrna by some "Ephesians most worthy of happiness"; and "that he had with him Crocus, together with many others"; that he believed the Romans had been already informed respecting certain persons "who were gone before him from Syria to Rome for the glory of God"; and he begs them to make those persons acquainted with the fact of his being near at hand; and dates his letter on "the ninth of the Calends of September, that is, on the twenty-third of August." The Acts of Martyrdom agree with this, as to Smyrna having been the place whence the letter was written (see p. 193); and they also state that his journey thence was hurried by the soldiers who had the charge of him; and that immediately upon his arrival at Rome he was thrown to the wild beasts and devoured by them ; and that this took place on the twentieth of December. Thus, if both these accounts were true, his journey from Smyrna to Rome must have occupied about four months.

Now in this there are many things which appear highly improbable, and difficult to account for, and also to be at variance with the tenor of the Epistle itself, in which we find Ignatius complaining of the very harsh treatment of the soldiers who guarded him by sea and by land, by night and by day ; comparing them to ten leopards, who for every act of kindness on his part—probably some admonitions and endeavours to convert them to Christianity—treated him the more rigorously. Now such being the case, it seems to be very unlikely that they should have allowed him to have many Christian friends with him, or, as we read in the Epistle to the Trallians, ch. xii. p. 85, to have with him “Churches of God.” And this improbability is the more striking when we compare it with St. Paul’s journey to Rome. We find it mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles as a mark of kindness worth recording on the part of Julius the Centurion, that upon their touching at Sidon “he courteously entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go to his friends and refresh himself.” Acts xxvii. 3. St. Paul enjoyed the privilege of being a Roman citizen ; and although he had been accused by the Jews, he had, after his defence before the Governor Festus and King Agrippa, been declared to have done “nothing worthy of death or of bonds” ; and he was then on his way to Rome solely in consequence of his own appeal to Cæsar. Ignatius, according to the account transmitted to us, had been condemned to death by a decree of the Emperor himself. Immediately after this sentence had been pronounced he was put into bonds ; and at the time when he is said to have written these Epistles he was on his way to Rome, under strict custody, to undergo the punishment which had been decreed against him. It would seem, therefore, to be scarcely credible that Ignatius in his position should have received the same indulgence from the ten soldiers, of whose harsh treatment he complains, as St. Paul did from the humane Centurion Julius, whose kindness towards him is again mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, ch. xxvii. 43. But this indulgence, or even greater in some respects, must have been granted to him, if these soldiers gave him permission to see, receive, and have with him so many friends and deputations from various Churches, as he must have done, both at Smyrna and Troas, if the statements made here and in the other spurious passages and Epistles were correct.

Again, St. Ignatius speaks in this Epistle of Churches having received him in the name of the Lord Jesus, and of their having preceded him (or having come to meet him), city by city ; or, as we read in the Syriac, in every city. See p. 54, and note, p. 303. But if we are to take the account furnished by the Acts of his Martyrdom to be correct, Smyrna was the first city at which he landed after having embarked at Seleucia. What Churches, then, could he speak of as having received him on the way—whether near or distant from it, if the Epistle to the Romans was written from Smyrna, the only city which, as yet, according to the Acts of Martyrdom, he is said to have touched at?

Further, in the conclusion of this Epistle, even as it is read in the spurious additions to the Greek, he is stated to desire those to whom it was addressed to inform some persons who had gone before him from Syria to Rome that he himself was near (p. 55); and in the Syriac, from which this has doubtless been borrowed (see note, p. 304), we find it written, “And now I am near to arrive at Rome,” (p. 54). And again, in another genuine passage of the Greek, “from Syria even to Rome, μέχρι Ρώμης, I fight with beasts,” (p. 47). To me it certainly does seem very improbable that he should have written in such terms if he had not yet accomplished half of his journey, and was still four months distant from Rome, as the dates of this Epistle, and of the Acts of Martyrdom, would shew, if they were to be relied upon.

Moreover, from the whole bearing of the Letter, it appears to be quite evident that some intimation had been conveyed to Ignatius of the desire of the Christians at Rome to save his life; and probably, also, of their being possessed of some influence likely to effect this. See p. 41. Indeed, it appears to be plain, from the purport of the Letter itself, that some knowledge of this was the chief occasion of his writing it. If such were the case, the account of Ignatius having been condemned to be sent to Rome to become a spectacle in the amphitheatre must have travelled all the way thither from Antioch, and an intimation of the wishes and intentions of the Roman Christians have been conveyed back to him to Smyrna, while he had only advanced thus far upon his journey from Antioch since his condemnation, although, as I have before remarked, that journey is stated to have been made under some circumstances of haste. This appears to be altogether inconsistent with the dates and accounts, such as they are, which we have before us. Taking all these considerations together, it would seem scarcely credible that Ignatius, under these circumstances, should have written his Epistle to the Romans from Smyrna, even had we not discovered the Syriac text, in which there is no authority whatever for any such accounts.

It is needless to speculate upon the locality where this letter was written; but from the data furnished by the Epistle itself it would appear to be from some place at which Ignatius had arrived after he had journeyed by land as well as by sea—had already passed several cities or towns in which were congregations of Christians, and where he was now no longer at any great distance from Rome. It seems not improbable that as he drew near to the city some of the Roman Christians, having heard of his arrival, went to meet him, as they went to meet St. Paul as far as Appii Forum and the Three Taverns (Acts xxviii. 15); that they informed him of the desire of the brethren to exert themselves to save so eminent a servant of Christ from the cruel punishment to which he was condemned; and that this afforded him the occasion of writing his earnest appeal to them not to interfere on his behalf, and thus deprive him of the crown of martyrdom. After I had arrived at this conclusion from totally different premises, it was satisfactory to me to read the following words of Vossius in a note upon the beginning of this Epistle: “Ἐπέτυχον ἰδεῖν—Mos loquendi imposuit viris doctissimis ut locum hunc immutatum irent. Et certe quis est, qui ex his verbis non colligat, Ignatium Romæ fuisse, cum ista scriberet? Atqui Smyrnæ hæc sunt exarata, ut ex tota Epistola constat; non tantum ex fine. Quod eo magis dico, ne quis putet, epilogum esse spurium.” See Vossius’ Edit. p. 293.

There are three distinct Greek recensions of this Epistle. One, A., which is inserted in the Acts of Martyrdom of St. Ignatius, as exhibited in the Colbert MS. Another, B., which belongs to the Longer recension of these Epistles; and the third, the text given by Simeon Metaphrastes in his account of the Acts of Ignatius. This last, besides other variations, omits several passages which are found in A., not less than in B., and some even of those which belong to the genuine Epistle, as it will be seen by referring to the Syriac. Simeon Metaphrastes doubtless wrote subsequently to the time of the publication of both the other recensions; but so many liberties of every kind seem to have been taken with the text of this Epistle, that it would be useless to speculate whether these omissions and variations are to be referred to him or to some other editor or transcriber before or after his time.

The method which the interpolator has adopted with respect to this Epistle resembles that which he followed in the one to Polycarp, rather than that in the Letter to the Ephesians. The five first chapters are left nearly in their original state, with the exception of a very few merely verbal alterations, the insertion of a sentence of five words into ch. i., of another of twelve words into ch. ii., and of two, each containing eleven words, and a quotation from St. Paul in ch. iii. Only one word is inserted in ch. iv., and three are added at the end by way of explanation; while the whole addition to ch. v. amounts only to six words in one place, and two in another. These additions, therefore, are not such as altogether to obscure the original style of the writer, as in the case of the Epistle to the Ephesians; nor do they appear to be of any doctrinal import, except the passage in ch. iii., Ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἡμῶν—φαίνεται, which seems to have been omitted in B., as unfavourable to the apparently Arian tendency of that recension.

Ch. vi. contains but one short sentence of the original Epistle. Amongst other matter of no doctrinal import, our Lord's passion, death, and resurrection are distinctly asserted, and he himself called God: a passage is also cited from the Gospels. The few further additions in B. seem to be favourable to the Arian views.

Ch. vii. consists of a part of the genuine Epistle mixed up with spurious additions. In these, which otherwise have little reference to doctrine, the birth of the Son of God from the seed of David and Abraham is asserted, as I have already observed with respect to similar passages of the Epistle to the Ephesians.

Ch. viii. contains a part of the genuine Epistle. The author states that he had "written this, not according to the flesh, but according to the mind of God."

The first part of ch. x. is spurious: the latter part belongs to the genuine Epistle, with one or two slight variations. The remainder of the genuine Epistle has been removed from its proper place to form the nucleus of the spurious Epistle to the Trallians, and ch. x., retaining the final valediction of the true Epistle, been substituted in its place. See notes, pp. 304, 307. In all of these the interpolator has endeavoured to give a fair colour to his own additions by borrowing terms and endeavouring to imitate certain phrases of the genuine text.

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE MAGNESIANS.

The inscription of this Epistle purports that it was addressed to the Church at Magnesia, on the Mæander; and in the last chapter it is stated that it was written from Smyrna, at which place it would appear, from ch. ii., that Damas, the Bishop of Magnesia, accompanied by two Presbyters, Bassus and Apollonius, and attended by a Deacon named Sotio, had met Ignatius: and their meeting, it is evident, was not fortuitous. The road from Smyrna to Magnesia passed through Ephesus—and these two latter cities are, according to Pliny, fifteen Roman miles apart; but Picenini makes the journey from Aiasalúck, near the site of ancient Ephesus, to Magnesia to occupy eleven hours. See Chandler's Travels in Asia Minor, p. 208. The whole distance, therefore, between Smyrna and Magnesia must have occupied about three days. See p. 314 above. Now the question naturally suggests itself—how could the Christians of Magnesia have obtained such precise information respecting the journey of St. Ignatius as to have timed their arrangements so exactly as to meet him when he touched at Smyrna?

Are we to suppose that tidings had been conveyed to them from Antioch, that he had left that city at a certain time, and consequently might be expected to arrive at Smyrna at a certain period? Or are we to conclude, that after he had reached Smyrna intelligence of his arrival had been despatched to the Magnesians, and that their Bishop Damas, accompanied by two Presbyters and a Deacon, immediately set out to visit him? This would have required about five or six days. It is true, as I have already remarked, that we have no positive data from which to ascertain the length of the sojourn of Ignatius at Smyrna; but if we are to follow such evidence as is supplied by the Acts of Martyrdom, the inference is, that it was not protracted longer than was ordinarily necessary for the continuance of his journey.

The Epistle to the Ephesians, with the additions made to it by the interpolator, has been to a certain extent the model after which this to the Magnesians has been fashioned; and several expressions have been borrowed, and passages imitated from the genuine Epistles, to give it the appearance of having been written by the same hand. The address is imitated from those of the genuine Epistles to the Ephesians and Romans, with some omissions and additions, among which we find ἀσπάζομαι, which occurs in the interpolated part of the inscription of the Epistle to the Romans.

The first sentence of ch. i., Γνοὺς——ὑμῶν, is imitated from the passage of Ignatius' Epistle to the Ephesians, ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ—ὑμᾶς, p. 19. The next, καταξιωθείς—θεοπρεπεστάτου, imitates καταξιωθείς—σου, occupying the same relative position in the Epistle to Polycarp, p. 1, as it does in this to the Magnesians. The words θεοπρεπεστάτου occurs nowhere in the genuine text of the three Epistles, but is first introduced in the interpolated ch. vii. of that to Polycarp. At the beginning of ch. ii. we read ἐπεὶ—ἐπισκόπου; and again, in ch. vi., ἐπεὶ—ἀγαπήσα, copied from ἐπεὶ—ἐπισκόπου ὑμῶν, Ignatius' own words to the Ephesians. See p. 17.

But besides these imitations, we find numerous other expressions borrowed from the genuine Epistles, and inserted to give a fair colour to the spurious; such as in ch. i., σαρκὸς καὶ πνεύματος, see Pol. p. 1; πίστεώς τε καὶ ἀγάπης, Ephes. p. 15; ἧς οὐδὲν προκέκριται, Pol. p. 1; τοῦ ἄρχοντος τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, Rom. p. 53; Θεοῦ τευξόμεθα, Rom. p. 41. In ch. ii., οὐ ἐγὼ ἀναίμην, see Pol. p. 1. In ch. iv., μὴ μόνον καλεῖσθαι Χριστιανούς, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι, Rom. p. 43. In ch. vi., ὁμοίθειαν Θεοῦ, Pol. p. 3. Μηδὲν ἔστω ἐν ὑμῶν, ὃ δυνήσεται ὑμᾶς μερίσαι, Ephes. p. 23. In ch. vii., οὐ ἄμεινον οὐδὲν ἔστιν, Pol. p. 1. Ἐν τῇ χαρᾷ τῇ ἀμώμῳ, Ephes. p. 15, &c. &c.

The scope and object of this Epistle agrees with that of the interpolations in the Epistle to the Ephesians. In ch. ii. of this latter Epistle, where the interpolation begins (see p. 17), we find the three orders of the Priesthood brought forward—the Bishop, the Presbyter, and the Deacon. Crocus is called ὁ θεοῦ ἀξίως: Burrus is called τοῦ συνδούλου μου, τοῦ κατὰ θεὸν διακόνου ἡμῶν. The phrase ἀνάμνην ἡμῶν διὰ παντός, borrowed from the genuine text (see p. 11), and the words ὑποτασσόμενοι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ occur.

The second chapter of the Epistle to the Magnesians is the exact counterpart of this. We find mention of a Bishop, Presbyters, and a Deacon introduced. Damas is called ἀξιοθέου. Sotio the Deacon is called τοῦ συνδούλου μου διακόνου. The same expression, οὐ ἐγὼ ἀνάμνην, is borrowed from the genuine text; and the chapter ends, ὅτι ὑποτάσσεται τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, καὶ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ.

In the interpolations continued in ch. iii.—vii. of the Epistle to the Ephesians the author goes on to insist upon the duty of concurrence with the mind of the Bishop, and of union with the Church governed by him in harmony and concert; of the efficacy of the prayers of the Church in conjunction with those of the Bishop. He urges the necessity of respect to the Bishop, although he should be silent;—by which probably it is to be understood that his popularity ought not to depend upon his eloquence; and he assigns as a reason for this, that every one whom the master of the house sendeth to his household ought to be received as the master who sends him; and, consequently, that the Bishop ought to be looked up to in the same manner as our Lord.

In ch. iii.—viii. of this Epistle to the Magnesians the same precepts are inculcated, although not in precisely the same order. The Bishop must not be despised although he be young, any more than if he be silent. Whosoever deceives the visible Bishop despises the unseen Bishop of all men—the Father of Jesus Christ. Those who do any thing apart from the Bishop are not right in their conscience, because they do not assemble themselves according to the commandment. Every thing must be done in the concord of God, the Bishop sitting in the place of God, the Presbyters in the place of the assembly of the Apostles, and the Deacons being entrusted with the ministry of Christ. Nothing must divide us; but we must all be united with the Bishop and those who preside over us for the form and doctrine of incorruption.

The rest of the passages interpolated into the Epistle to the Ephesians relate to the errors of different heretics; but at the end of those occurring at the close of the Epistle the writer again reverts to the subject of obedience to the Bishop. See ch. xx.

So also in this Epistle to the Magnesians we find the remainder of it employed in combating various heresies; and just before the close the writer again reverts to the duty of submission to the Bishop and to one another. The end of this Epistle runs almost in the very same terms as those of the interpolated conclusions both of the Epistles to the Ephesians and the Romans.

But besides the similarities between this Epistle and the interpolated parts of that to the Ephesians already mentioned, the following may be also noticed: καὶ ὑμῖν δὲ πρέπει—εἰς τιμὴν οὖν—πρέπον ἐστίν, ch. iii., πρέπον οὖν ἐστίν, ch. iv., in the Epistle to the Magnesians; and πρέπον οὖν ἐστίν κατὰ πάντα τρόπον, ch. ii., ὅθεν πρέπει ὑμῖν, ch. iv., of the Epistle to the Ephesians. Without adducing numerous other similarities and coincidences of idea and expression which may be found between this Epistle and those passages of the Greek of the three preceding Letters which the Syriac text condemns, those which have been already advanced seem to be amply sufficient to prove, either that both are the production of the same author, or, at least, that the one has been borrowed from the other, which is all that I am desirous of establishing in this place.

The chief heresies combated in this Epistle are those of the Judaizing Christians, who kept the Sabbath and observed the Law of Moses (see ch. viii.—x.); that of Valentinus, with respect to the procession of the λόγος, ch. vii. viii., see Daillé, De Scriptis quæ sub Dionysii Areop. et Ignatii Antioch. nomine circumferuntur, Lib. ii. ch. 12; and that of the Docetæ who denied the reality of our Lord's birth, passion and resurrection, ch. xi.

In comparing the two recensions of this Epistle together, besides the additions and extensions in B., we find, as in the preceding Epistles, certain passages existing in A. which are omitted in B. Some of these appear to be unimportant; but others are deserving of notice. Of the latter are the two passages which distinctly mention the three Persons of Holy Trinity, ch. xii. The omissions, τοῦ διαπαντός ἡμῶν ζῆν, ch. i., ζωῶν ζῶντες, ch. ix., διὰ τοῦτο—ζῆν, ch. x., we may compare with the omissions in the Epistle to the Ephesians: τὸ ἀδιάκριτον ἡμῶν ζῆν, ch. iii., ὑμᾶς—ζῆν, ch. xvii.; which prove that the omission of these passages from B., or their insertion at a later period into A., had some definite object. Διὰ παντός is also again omitted in ch. vi., as also in the Ephesians, ch. xx. The omission of the last sentence of ch. vi. deserves notice. At the end of ch. vii., τὸν ἀφ' ἐνὸς Πατρὸς προέλθοντα, καὶ εἰς ἓνα ὄντα καὶ χωρήσαντα, which should be considered in connection with ὁς—προέλθων, also omitted in ch. viii., has been removed, and replaced in B. by τὸν ἀρχιερέα τοῦ ἀγεννήτου Θεοῦ. Daillé supposes the cause of this change to have been the desire to obviate the manifest anachronism in A. in this direct and distinct opposition to the tenets of Valentinus. See ibid. ch. xii.

Ch. ix. has not only been much extended in B., but the order has been inverted, and so much of A. been omitted as amounts to about one third part of the chapter. The last words omitted are παρῶν ἡγήρειν αὐτοὺς ἐκ νεκρῶν, referring to the Prophets mentioned immediately above, "who being Disciples in the spirit, expected him as master; and on this account, he whom they righteously awaited being arrived, raised them from the dead." What prophets, we may justly ask, did our Lord raise from the dead? We have no account of his raising to life any other than the daughter of the Centurion, the son of the widow of Nain, and Lazarus. Moses and Elias indeed appeared to Christ at his transfiguration, but he did not raise them from the dead. Dr. Jacobson supposes that reference is made to Matth. xxvii. 52, 53, but this will hardly explain the matter. The editor of the recension B. seems to have felt this difficulty, and to have attempted to obviate it by removing the passage altogether from the text, as he seems to have done in several other instances. In ch. x. he has omitted ἐπεὶ ἀπὸ τῆς ὀσμῆς ἐλεγχθήσεται, doubtless offended by the expression, "ye shall be found out by the stink." I have retained ὀσμῆς in the text as it is found in the MS. There can be little doubt, however, both from the context and the Latin version odore, that the true reading is ὀσμῆς, which almost all editors have adopted. Compare p. 319.

In the last chapter ἐπισκόπῳ Σμυρνάϊων has been omitted after Πολυκάρπῳ. The editor of B. seems to have thought justly that it was quite unnecessary for Ignatius, in writing to the Magnesians, and dating his Letter from Smyrna, to tell them that Polycarp was "Bishop of the Smyrneans."

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE TRALLIANS.

This Letter is addressed to the Church at Tralles, a town situated on the Mæander, about eighteen Roman miles from Magnesia, and it is said to have been written from Smyrna, where Polybius, Bishop of the Trallians, had met Ignatius. The way from Smyrna to Tralles lay through Ephesus and Magnesia: consequently the difficulties which occur with respect to the distance of the two former cities from Smyrna will be increased here.

I do not think it necessary to take any pains to prove that this and the two following Epistles to the Philadelphians and Smyrneans are due to the same hand as the passages in the Epistle to the Ephesians which the Syriac text condemns as spurious. They have been universally acknowledged to be the work of the same person as the Letter to the Magnesians; the same arguments, therefore, which apply to that Letter, and the deductions which follow as the consequence of those arguments, are equally applicable to this to the Trallians and to the two succeeding Epistles. I shall not, therefore, stop to point out all the words and phrases which have been borrowed here from the genuine text, but simply observe, that we find in this Epistle two entire chapters, v. and vi., which have been transferred from the Epistle to the Romans as it exists in the Syriac, to give a fair colour to this by the admixture of something of the true text with the false. I have stated what appears to me to be the probable cause why this passage was removed from the Epistle to the Romans to this in my note, p. 304. But this transposition has not been effected with much skill; and the two chapters have been so clumsily mixed up with the rest that their incongruity and difference of style from the context was seen and pointed out by Vedelius more than two centuries before the discovery of the Syriac text disclosed the source from which they had been taken. Respecting these two chapters he writes: "Est enim hic locus planè suppositivus usque ad hæc verba ἵνα Θεοῦ μὴ ἀπολειφθῶ. Patet hoc primo ex stylo, secundo ex materia subjecta. Quod ad stylum attinet, is ineptissimus est, et planè ab Ignatii stylo alienus. Primo enim, quàm ab æquali et plano stylo Ignatii aliena sunt ista et horrida: μὴ γὰρ οὐκ ἐβουλόμην, &c. Certè antecedentia et consequentia docent verba hæc nullo modo ad rem facere." See Vedelius' Edition, Exercitatio viii. in Epist. ad Trallenses, p. 32.

A further cause, however, for the introduction of these chapters, in which Ignatius speaks of his knowledge of heavenly things, into this Epistle, seems to have been to give countenance to the prophetic foresight with respect to heresies, which the fabricator of this Epistle assumes to himself in ch. viii.;—a foresight necessary, indeed, to justify the condemnation of doctrines which seem to have developed themselves after the time of Ignatius, such as those of the Docetæ, or, indeed, of the Phantasiastæ of much later days, whose tenets are especially condemned in ch. ix.

It is not necessary for my present object to point out in this and in the following Epistles the several passages in A. which have been omitted in B., and other peculiarities which occur. They offer, however, some curious phenomena, which may be well worthy of the attention of any one wishing to investigate thoroughly the variations of the two recensions, and the interesting questions involved in them.

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILADELPHIANS.

This Epistle is said to have been written from Troas, where Ignatius had arrived on his way towards Rome, and to have been conveyed by Burrus the Deacon to Philadelphia of Asia, as it is stated in A., which city is distant from Troas about 200 miles.

We have no tradition handed down to us from antiquity of any connection between Ignatius and the Church of Philadelphia which might have afforded an occasion for his writing to them, although, from some of the expressions made use of in the Letter—such as, οὐχ' ὅτι παρ' ὑμῶν μερισμὸν εὔρον, ch. iii., ἐκράγασα μεταξὺ ἄν, ch. vii., ἐπὶ ἡκουσά τιων λέγοντων, ch. viii.—some have concluded that Ignatius must have visited Philadelphia. See Jacobson's Edit. p. 413. Indeed, from this, and from several other circumstances, Whiston, the defender of the recension B., has inferred that Philadelphia of Cilicia must have been the city to which this Epistle was directed, and not Philadelphia of Asia or Lydia. He writes: “— still supposing, by the objection and his reply, that he had been at this Philadelphia, and there heard such things said as produced the answer there set down; which yet could hardly be true of the Asiatic Philadelphia at 400 miles distance from Antioch.” See Diss. upon the Epistles of Ignatius, p. 77. Of course it would be an absurdity to suppose that, on his journey to Troas, the soldiers who had charge of Ignatius allowed him time and liberty to make a deflection from the way to visit the Church at the Asiatic Philadelphia. Düsterdieck, in his defence of the Epistles of the recension A., is staggered at this difficulty, and writes thus: “Etsi quomodo factum sit, ut in oppidum illud pervenerit Ignatius, a recta ad Troadem via satis distans quidem, hæc res parum liquet, neque vero ex ipsa epistola necessitate quadam consequens est; sed cum nave veheretur Ignatius Seleucia ad Troadem, Smyrnam tantum appulsum esse eum suspicor, quo misissent legatos Ephesini, Magnesiani, Tralliani; in Troade autem recepisse videtur legatos Philadelphensorum, epistolamque rursus ad illos scripsisse.” Diss. de Ignatianarum Epistolarum authentia, p. 19. Hefele has adopted this explanation in his third edition of the Apostolic Fathers, with the following supposition: “More suo Ignatius ita loquitur, ac si in legatis totam ecclesiam Philadelphensem conspexisset,” p. 215. And Dr. Jacobson has copied Hefele's note into the third edition of his work. But even if we were to allow such an explanation to be at all admissible, what feasible explanation will these learned men be able to give to cover the great improbability that the Church at Philadelphia should have received an account of the condemnation of the Bishop of Antioch, a city situated about 400 miles to the south-east of their own, and have so timed their embassy as to meet him at Troas, about 200 miles to the north-west, just as he was passing on his journey to Rome, whither he had been despatched immediately after his condemnation?

In the last chapter, Burrus, the Deacon of the Ephesians, is said to have been the bearer of this Letter; but Philadelphia, which is situated about 90 miles to the east of Smyrna, would lie very considerably out of his way upon his return from Troas to Ephesus, whither I conclude he is supposed to have returned, as we find that he is made the bearer of the Letter to the Smyrneans, written also from Troas. See Epist. to Smyrn. ch. xii.

The only ground which the Epistle supplies us with, as likely to have afforded any occasion to Ignatius of writing to the Philadelphians, is the circumstance which is alleged in the first chapter, of his having been acquainted with their Bishop, whom he most highly commends and admires in every respect. But still, although the Philadelphians were under the charge of such an able and excellent pastor, the writer of this Epistle is represented as putting himself forward to caution them against heresy and divisions, of which, nevertheless, he states that he had found no trace among them, but the contrary. See ch. iii. Some indeed, he adds, might suspect that he had had previous knowledge of the division of some; but Christ was his witness that no man had given him any information to this effect. But the Spirit cried, saying, without the Bishop do nothing; keep your flesh as the temple of God; love union, avoid divisions. Ch. vii. In this place Ignatius is certainly represented as asserting that a Divine communication had been made to him by the Spirit.

The divisions, want of unanimity and union in the Church, and separation from the Bishop, as mentioned in this Epistle, would seem almost to agree better with the description of the distracted state of Christendom in the fourth or fifth century than with any other previous period of which accounts have reached us.

ON THE EPISTLE TO THE SMYRNEANS.

This Letter is said to have been written from Troas, and to have been sent to Smyrna by Burrus the Deacon, ch. xii. None of the difficulties with respect to time and distance, which suggest themselves so strongly in the three preceding Epistles, occur here. If Ignatius had touched at Smyrna on his journey, and had been kindly received by the Church of that city, and by their Bishop, it would be perfectly natural and probable that, were an opportunity afforded to him, he should have written to them from Troas, the next city at which he stopped. But that he should have written from thence, at the same time, two Epistles, so different from each other in matter and in style as the one to Polycarp and the other to the Smyrneans, is most highly improbable. It is needless for me to point out the wide discrepancies between these Epistles, as it has been commented upon by critics more than two centuries before the new element of criticism supplied by the discovery of the Syriac version was available. They rejected the Epistle to Polycarp as being very different in style and character from the others which bore the name of Ignatius; and they retained that to the Smyrneans, as being from the same hand as the rest. Among them Archbp. Usher is conspicuous. The following passages are taken from his Dissertation De Ignatii ad Polycarpum Epistola: “At ante hos omnes Augustodunensis Honorius, in libro de Luminaribus Ecclesiæ Epistolam ad Polycarpum in censu scriptorum Ignatii planè prætermittendum esse judicavit,” p. viii. “Nam ad illa, quæ hodie Ignatii nomine ad Polycarpum feruntur scripta, quod attinet: in eâ totâ ferè epistolâ γνήσιον Ignatium desiderare se, non sine causâ pronuntiavit vir doctissimus, mihique amicissimus, Abrahamus Scultetus. Sed et ipse Jesuita Halloixius, reliquarum omnium epistolarum propugnator accerimus, in hujus defensione titubanter sanè loquitur: atque nonnulla esse, quæ non minimam suspicionis ansam afferant, aliqua in eam aliunde irrepsisse, dissimulare non potuit: integræ quoque epistolæ γνησιότητα in quæstionem similiter vocaturus, si non obstitisset, ex jam dictorum verborum Polycarpi, Eusebii et Hieronymi minùs rectè perceptâ sententiâ, obortum illi præjudicium; constitutum et fixum manere, adeoque negari non posse, hanc epistolam saltem ex parte non parvâ, esse Ignatii,” p. ix. Vossius writes respecting the Epistle to Polycarp: “Inter omnes Ignatii Epistolas nulla est, de cujus veritate magis disceptatum sit inter doctos, quam illa ad Polycarpum. Nec inficior, aliqua hic esse, quæ potuerint reddere suspectam: plura tamen, majoraque esse puto, quæ aliud iis debuerant persuadere.” See Vossius’ Edit. p. 264. All the objections, therefore, which these and other critics have brought against the Epistle to Polycarp, on account of its discrepancy from the other Ignatian Epistles, become so many arguments against that to the Smyrneans, if the genuineness of the Letter to Polycarp be once established.

In ch. iii. the passage Ἐγὼ——ἐπίστευσαν has been cited by Eusebius, who says that he does not know from whence Ignatius took the words which he quotes. See p. 162. Jerome, in copying from Eusebius the account respecting Ignatius, says they were taken from the Gospel which he had translated a short time previously—“de Evangelio quod nuper a me translatum est.” The Gospel to which he alludes is the Gospel according to the Hebrews: In Evangelio, quo utuntur Nazareni et Ebionitæ quod nuper in Græcum de Hebræo sermone transtulimus.” See Com. in Matt. xii. 13, and xxiii. 35. Origen, in his Treatise de Principiis, citing the same words as are found in the Epistle to the Smyrneans, “non sum dæmonium incorporeum,” says that they are taken from a book called the Doctrine of Peter. Redepenning, in his note on this passage of Origen, p. 94, writes: “Eundem ad quem in textu provocatur locum Ignatius in Ep. ad Smyrn. c. iii. exhibet ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ δαιμόνιον ἀσώματον; annotat vero Hieronymus in Catal.

p. 108, desumpta esse hæc ex Evangelio Nazaræorum. Itaque aut memoria lapsus est Origenes, aut in utroque apocrypho eadem reperiebantur." These words might indeed have existed in both of the apocryphal works referred to; but if not, and either of these writers has been guilty of a fault of memory, Jerome is far more likely to have erred than Origen. There is however, I think, another passage in this Epistle which proves that the writer of it had before him the book attributed to St. Peter; for in the following ch. iv. we find ἐγγύς μαχαίρας, ἐγγύς Θεοῦ· μεταξύ θηρίων μεταξύ Θεοῦ, which seem plainly to have been suggested by the same words attributed to St. Peter as are thus cited by Gregory of Nazianzum: κάμνουσα γὰρ ψυχὴ ἐγγύς ἐστι Θεοῦ, φησί που θαυμασιώτατα λέγων ὁ Πέτρος. See Epist. ad Cæsarium, Basilii Opera, Edit. Fed. Morelli, tom. i. p. 778. C.

The whole of the passage of Origen from which the words above quoted are taken bears upon the question respecting this Epistle to the Smyrneans: I therefore transcribe it. "Appellatio autem ἀσωμάτου, id est, incorporei, non solum apud multos alios, verum etiam apud nostras scripturas est inusitata et incognita. Si vero quis velit nobis proferre ex illo libello qui Petri Doctrina appellatur, ubi Salvator videtur ad discipulos dicere: 'Non sum dæmonium incorporeum': primo respondendum est ei, quoniam ille liber inter libros ecclesiasticos non habetur; et ostendendum quia neque Petri est ipsa scriptura, neque alterius cujusquam qui spiritu Dei, fuerit inspiratus." See de Principiis, Redepenning's Edit. p. 94. From this passage we may very justly infer that the Epistle to the Smyrneans, in which Ignatius is not only made to employ the word ἀσώματος himself, but also to cite a passage as of authority from a work which is here condemned as spurious, was either unknown to Origen, or rejected by him. In the Ignatian Epistles the writer speaks of himself as inspired. See Epist. to Philad. ch. vii. Origen must have been ignorant of this fact, or he would not have condemned as being the work of no inspired person a book quoted as authority by one who was himself inspired; or, were he acquainted with this and the other Ignatian Epistles of the Medicean MS., he must have deemed them too palpably spurious to be deserving of any notice. Moreover, in his remarks respecting the word ἀσώματος, it seems hardly probable that he should have omitted any mention of its occurrence in the writings of one who was a disciple of the Apostles, and whose authority, consequently, was secondary only to theirs, if he had known any thing respecting this Epistle to the Smyrneans, or believed it to be genuine.

But there is another objection against this Epistle suggested by the employment of this word. The writer, in speaking against the heresy of the Docetæ, denounces them in the following terms: "And as they think, so shall it befall them, being bodiless and devilish"—καὶ καθὼς φρονοῦσιν καὶ συμβήσεται αὐτοῖς ὅσων ἀσωμάτων καὶ δαιμονικοῖς. Could the disciple of St. John have been ignorant of the Christian doctrine of the resurrection of the body, both of the just and the unjust—that every one may receive the things done in his body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad? The author of the recension B. seems to have been aware of this incongruity, and has consequently removed this passage altogether from his text.

There are numerous other passages in A. which are not found in B. I shall only make observations upon a few.

In ch. i. the words κατὰ θέλημα καὶ δύναμιν Θεοῦ, immediately following εἶδὼν Θεοῦ, have been removed. See Daillé, Lib. ii. ch. xvi. p. 336.

In ch. vi. the long passage, ἢ λελυμένον—ἤγειρεν, in which mention is made of certain heretics abstaining from the Eucharist and prayer, because they did not confess that the Eucharist was the flesh of the Saviour, together with the sentence commencing the next chapter, has been entirely omitted in B. I quote Daillé's words on this passage. "Illud mitto, quod hos non modo Eucharistia, sed etiam oratione ideo abstinuisse dicit, quod non confiterentur Eucharistiam carnem esse Salvatoris; quod ineptum est et incredibile. Cur enim oratione quisquam idcirco abstineat, quod Eucharistiam neget esse Salvatoris carnem? Ista, ut omnes vident, non cohærent. —Itaque cum nullus Ecclesiæ scriptor hæreticos Ignatianis temporibus extitisse dicat, qui Eucharistiam reprobarent, clarum est hunc epistolæ auctorem qui solus id affirmat, rem dubiam et incertam, pro vera Smyrnæis suis temere venditasse; quod profecto facturum nequaquam erat sanctissimus Martyr Ignatius; Quod probe intellexisse videtur posterior ille Ignatianorum interpolator, qui hanc de hæreticis Docetis eucharistiâ abstinentibus sententiam totam ex suis codicibus erasit, veritus ne ea si retineretur, auctorem alium quam Ignatium fuisse proderet, hæreticorum peregrinum et inauditum apud illius ævi scriptores genus commemorans, quod ipse nusquam apud quemquam aliquid hujusmodi extare cerneret. Eo factum est ut in vulgatis codicibus neque Græcis neque Latinis, qui omnes scilicet ex illius interpolatoris exemplari descripti ac disseminati sunt, ulla relicta sint illius sententiæ vestigia; sed ejus loco substituta longissima quædam ac plane diversa ῥῆσις." Lib. ii. cap. xxii. pp. 366, 368.

The same arguments which are used by Daillé will also apply to the omission of the sentence ἐκεῖ ἡ καθολικὴ ἐκκλησία from B. The term Catholic Church does not seem to have been known till some years after the time when Ignatius wrote his Epistles. The following are the words of De Valois in a note on Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. Lib. vii. 10. Edit. Reading, p. 333: "Cæterum Catholicæ cognomen quando primum adhæserit Ecclesiæ Dei, difficile est dicere. In Epistola quidem Smyrneorum de martyrio B. Polycarpi, mentio fit Ecclesiæ Catholicæ. Item in actis Passionis Pionii

Archbp. Usher assigns the date of Polycarp's martyrdom to A.D. 169. See notes on Polycarpi acta, p. 70. Greswell to A.D. 164. See Dissertation xxvii. Vol. iv. p. 531. A period, therefore, of full fifty years or more must have intervened between the time when Ignatius wrote and the first trace we find of the term Catholic Church. The author of the recension B. was probably aware that there was some incongruity in the use of it by one at the earlier period, and consequently suppressed it.

In ch. ix. we read, "he that doeth any thing without the knowledge of the Bishop serveth the devil." These last words have been also omitted in B. apparently as being too strong and improbable.

ON THE OTHER IGNATIAN EPISTLES NOT MENTIONED BY EUSEBIUS.

The text of these Epistles is based upon the edition of Archbp. Usher. That of Aldrich has enabled me to point out the words and passages which are not found in the Medicean manuscript.

These Six Greek Epistles, one of which is attributed to Maria Cassobolita, and the Three which are found only in Latin, have been so generally acknowledged to be spurious since the works of Vedelius and Usher, that it would be quite unnecessary for my present purpose to attempt to adduce any further arguments to strengthen the conclusions at which they have arrived. But while I have the fullest conviction that those conclusions themselves are correct, I cannot rest satisfied with the process of reasoning by which they have been obtained. The assumption has been, that all the Epistles mentioned by Eusebius were genuine, and that those of which he has not spoken either did not exist at the time when he wrote, or were rejected by him as spurious. But there are two elements needed to turn this into an argument of any weight or force; one, that the authority of Eusebius should be decisive as to the genuineness of these Epistles; and the other, that by not mentioning the rest of the Epistles he intended to condemn them. And not only are there good reasons to question the authority of Eusebius on many points, but, further, it is plain that he speaks even doubtingly of the seven Epistles which he does enumerate: and if his own arguments with respect to other ecclesiastical documents are to be applied to the Ignatian Epistles, we must reject, even upon his authority, all but the Three which the Syriac acknowledges. This is treated of more fully in the Introduction.

Again, unless Eusebius, or some other ecclesiastical writer deserving of consideration, had stated that Ignatius wrote no other Epistles than those enumerated—to reject the rest bearing his name, simply and solely because they have not been mentioned by that ecclesiastical historian, is a violation of the true rules of criticism.

The external evidence from the testimony of manuscripts in favour of the rejected Greek Epistles, with the exception of that to the Philippians, is certainly greater than that in favour of those which have been received. They are found in all the manuscripts, both Greek and Latin, in the same form; while the others exhibit two distinct and very different recensions, if we except the Epistle to Polycarp, in which the variations are very few. Of these two recensions the shorter has been most generally received: the circumstance of its being shorter seems much to have influenced its reception; and the text of the Medicean Codex and of the two copies of the corresponding Latin version belonging to Caius College, Cambridge, and Corpus Christi College, Oxford, has been adopted. The Medicean manuscript is unfortunately imperfect, and ends with the words, ἀνεπίστατοι γὰρ εἰσὶν τοῦ κυ . . ., of the 8th chap. of the Epistle to the Tarsians. See p. 131, and Aldrich's Edit. p. 120. But it is evident that it corresponded entirely with the Latin version of the two manuscripts just mentioned, as Vossius allows: "Cum vero codex ille quem dixi Florentinus, ad finem esset mutilus; nullis potuissem argumentis adsequi, quænam in eo epistolæ desiderarentur, tam ex genuinis quam spuris, nisi nuper ad manus venisset versio vetus, edita ab Reverendissimo Hiberniæ Primate Usserio Armachano. Simulatque enim illam videre contigit, non dubitavi, quin easdem plane epistolas continerint et codex iste, quo vetus Interpres usus est, et Florentinus." See Vossius' Edit. p. 116. In all these there is no distinction whatever drawn between the former and latter Epistles: all are placed upon the same basis; and there is no ground whatever to conclude either that the arranger of the Greek recension or the translator of the Latin version esteemed one to be better or more genuine than another. Nor can any prejudice result to the Epistles to the Tarsians, to the Antiochians, and to Hero, from the circumstance of their being placed after the others in the collection; for they are evidently arranged in chronological order, and rank after the rest as having been written from Philippi, at which place Ignatius is said to have arrived after he had despatched the previous Letters. So far, therefore, as the evidence of all the existing copies, Latin as well as Greek, of both the recensions is to be considered, it is certainly in favour of the rejected Epistles, rather than of those which have been retained.

Neither is there any thing in the matter, style, and composition of these Epistles which could warrant their condemnation as spurious by those who receive the others as genuine; while there are many circumstances that entitle them to a degree of consideration which the others cannot lay claim to. Tarsus was sufficiently near to Antioch for the intercourse between the Churches of both cities to be frequent. The latter was Ignatius' own flock, over which he had a long time presided; and Hero is represented as being a Deacon of his own Church, and, consequently, as his own personal friend. Surely it is more natural to expect that he should have been ready to avail himself of any opportunity which might have occurred of writing a word of affectionate remembrance to these, than that he should spend the little leisure which his harsh keepers might have afforded him in writing to other parties with whom he seems to have had little or no acquaintance, to admonish them of errors and heresies of which he himself states that he knew they were perfectly guiltless. See Epist. to Philad. ch. iii., &c. &c.

Moreover, there seems to be a great incongruity in admitting that Ignatius should write to two other Churches, to exhort them to send messengers and an Epistle to congratulate the Church at Antioch upon their being at peace, but should himself neglect to write a word to these Antiochians. The same messenger who bore the Letters of those Churches would have carried his. But this incongruity must be charged upon those who admit the Epistles to the Philadelphians (see ch. x.) and Smyrneans (see ch. xi.), and reject that to the Antiochians. I shall quote the words of a few other writers on this head. Whiston writes: "The places to which two of these Epistles are inscribed, Tarsus and Antioch, and the person to whom the third is inscribed, Hero, Ignatius' Deacon, who he earnestly desired might be his successor, are more unlikely to be forgotten by him than almost any of those to which the other Seven Epistles are directed." See Diss. on the Epist. of Ignatius, p. 94.

Eman. Schelstrate writes thus: "Ex quibus patet, Ignatium litteras misisse ad Antiochenos, idque per Philadelphenses, quas litteras Polycarpus vel per se, vel per alium quempiam se missurum promisit." Antiquitas Eccl. tom. ii. p. 249. J. E. Grabe on the same head: "Ad Antiochenos precipue cum scripsisse nullus dubito: neque enim proprii gregis oblivisci poterat, qui alias Ecclesias literis cohortabatur ac in fide confirmabat." Spicilegium SS. Patt. Vol. ii. p. 8; and Lenain de Tillemont: "Et il n'y a aucun moyen de douter qu'il n'ait écrit au moins à son Eglise d'Antioche, sur ce que Dieu avoit appaisé la persecution. On peut mettre dans la mesme classe les trois autres qu'Usserius et Vossius ont trouvées dans les manuscrits avec celles qu'on reconnoist pour indubitables, savoir celle à Marie de Cassoboles, celles à l'Eglise de Tarse et celle à Heron diacre d'Antioche; et examiner ensuite s'il faut rejeter ces lettres par la seule raison qu'Eusebe ne les a pas connues, parcequ'elles n'estoient point de celles que S. Polycarpe avoit envoyées aux Philippiens." Memoires pour servir à l'Hist. Eccl. Paris, 4to. 1701, tom. ii. p. 581. Dr. Hammond thought well of the Epistle to Hero: "Et licet alias omnes, istam præsertim ad Heronem Diaconum (cui bene se velle profitetur Walo) sanctissimo Martyri abjudicandas esse neutiquam contendamus, statuimus tamen has tantummodo septem, ut ex Mediceo et Anglicano codice prodierunt, a nobis in hac causa defendendas proponere." Diss. Secund. de Ignatio. Hammond's Works, Vol. iv. p. 746.

It seems plain, then, that the ground for rejecting these Epistles, simply because there is no mention of them found in Eusebius, is altogether untenable, and that these Epistles ought either to have been all received or all rejected together. The real state of the case seems to have been this—that there were such strong reasons for concluding that this Corpus Epistolarum contained many things which could not have proceeded from the pen of Ignatius, that judicious critics like Vedelius and Usher were willing to seize upon any circumstance which might be used as an argument to diminish the difficulties in the Ignatian question, by reducing it to narrower limits. Indeed I cannot forbear expressing my own conviction that this has also contributed to the general adoption of the Shorter recension of the Seven in preference to the Longer, rather than any peculiar excellence which was discovered in the one over the other.

It is not my intention to offer any critical observations upon these Epistles. I must remark, however, that I have found that the Epistle to the Antiochians commences with the very same words as another Epistle, also addressed to them by Alexander of Jerusalem, who wrote in the first half of the third century. They run thus: Ἐλαφρά μοι καὶ κοῦφα τὰ δεσμὰ ὁ Κύριος ἐποίησε. See Euseb. Hist. Eccl. lib. vi. ch. 11. Routh's Reliq. Sacr. Edit. sec. tom. ii. p. 165. Now it is impossible but that one of these writers must have copied from the other. If it be assumed that Alexander of Jerusalem, in writing to the Antiochians, copied the words of Ignatius, their own Bishop, this will not only overthrow the theory of those who reject the Epistle to the Antiochians because it has not been mentioned by name by Eusebius, but it will place the authenticity of that Epistle upon a firmer footing than any other, except the Three found in the Syriac which are quoted by still more ancient authors, by shewing that a citation of this very Epistle is preserved by Eusebius himself in an extract which he gives from an author who lived about a century before his own time. If, on the other hand, it be assumed that the Epistle to the Antiochians is spurious, and that the fabricator of it copied the words which another Bishop, also in bonds, had addressed to the same Church, we must necessarily assign the date of the fabrication to a period subsequent to Alexander's time, if not, indeed, to that of Eusebius.

The Epistle to the Philippians is not found in the collection contained in the ancient Latin version. See Archbp. Usher's Diss. cap. xix. p. cxli. For other satisfactory reasons against its genuineness see ibid. cap. xii. p. lxxix. See also the same learned Prelate's refutation of the three Latin Epistles to St. John and the blessed Virgin. Ibid. cap. xix. p. cxlii.

The editions of the several works which I have followed in giving the TESTIMONIES RESPECTING IGNATIUS AND EXTRACTS FROM THE IGNATIAN EPISTLES, AS CITED BY VARIOUS AUTHORS, DOWN TO THE TENTH CENTURY, contained in pages 158—189, are all specified at the head of the several Extracts. THE MARTYRDOM OF IGNATIUS, occupying pages 190—195, has been printed after the accurate text of Dr. Jacobson, pp. 550—579, of his third edition of the Apostolic Fathers, printed at the University Press, Oxford, 1847.

ON THE PASSAGES FROM THE IGNATIAN EPISTLES, AND
ST. IGNATIUS, IN SYRIAC.

No. 1, p. 197. Translation, p. 232.

This important extract, containing several passages from the Ignatian Epistles, is the only one which has not been drawn from the rich resources of the library in the British Museum. It has been copied from a manuscript in the Royal Library of Paris; and I am indebted to M. Munk, one of the most learned orientalists of Europe, not only for kindly pointing out to me its existence, but also for being at the pains of transcribing it for me, and likewise of furnishing me with an account of the manuscript from which it is taken. Knowing the labour and difficulty which this task must have imposed upon him, in consequence of the extreme weakness of his sight, it is impossible for me to express in too strong terms my sense of gratitude for his kindness in making so great an effort to oblige me by enabling me to render my book more complete than I could have done without his assistance.

The following is his description of the manuscript which has supplied this extract:—

N°. 33.

Recueil de Canons d'un grand nombre de conciles et de pièces y relatives ; petit in-fol., sur parchemin, 284 feuillets. Le manuscrit, écrit en caractères Chald. ou Estranghelo, paraît être très-ancien, mais comme il manque quelques feuillets à la fin, la date, qui s'y trouvait probablement, a disparu. It is evident that this is the work to which Renaudot refers in the following passages of his Liturgiarum Orientalium Collectio: "Genuina Ignatii Martyris scripta apud Syros vulgari sua lingua olim extitisse docent nos multa ex illis testimonia, quæ in libris Theologicis occurrunt; sed præ cæteris excerpta ex ejus genuinis Epistolis non pauca, quæ Conciliorum Canonibus adjuncta reperiuntur in vetusta versione Syriaca, quam Codex Medicæus membranaceus repræsentat. Addidit interpres, illas sententias vulgo inter Canones non referri, verum ex nomine tanti viri, æqualem quodammodo habere auctoritatem. Factam esse ex optimis Codicibus interpretationem illam agnovimus, et ab autore quicumque fuerit non imperito: tum illud etiam animadversione dignum observavimus, codices illum, similes Florentino illi celeberrimo quo Latinus interpres usus fuerat, secutum fuisse, nec alias nisi veras Epistolas agnovisse." Vol. ii. p. 226. And again, "In ista primum merito locum tenet Ignatius, ut Antiochenus quondam Episcopus, cujus etiam testimoniis abuti, ad errores sui patrocinium solent, ut ex variis Collectaneis et Tractatu de Fide Patrum intelligitur. Præterea tantum honorem illi tribuunt, ut in antiquissima Canonum Collectione Syriaca ex ejus Epistolis capita quaedam ad Ecclesiasticam disciplinam spectantia referantur, quia, inquit interpretes, ob summam Ignatii sanctitatem æquam cum Canonibus dignitatem habent.”—Ibid. p. 491.

The age of this collection, which Renaudot denominates Antiquissima, cannot reach to an earlier period than the end of the seventh century; for we find included in it questions proposed by a Priest named Adi, to Mar Jacob, Bishop of Edessa in the year of our Lord 687. See No. 48. The manuscript, therefore, containing them cannot be earlier than the end of the seventh century, and although ancient, probably is considerably later.

That the genuine writings of Ignatius were anciently in use among the Syrians in their vernacular tongue is incontestably proved by the discovery of the Syriac version of the Three Epistles; but the learned Renaudot has gone too far in inferring that fact from the simple circumstance of finding these extracts from the Ignatian Epistles in a collection of canons and other ecclesiastical documents. It is plain that the whole collection has been translated from the Greek; and from the place which these Ignatian extracts occupy, it seems almost certain that they formed a part of the original Greek collection, which was afterwards translated into Syriac. There is no ground to conclude that these extracts were taken from a Syriac version of the Ignatian Epistles previously existing, and were then inserted among the others when the rest was translated into that language. Moreover, the date of one of the articles in this collection shews that it must have been made subsequently to the time when the Syrian schools, abandoning the antiquity of their own literature, had acquired the taste of accommodating every thing to the Greek, even so far as to adopt fresh versions of the New Testament, and in a good measure to accommodate their venerable Peshito to the readings of the Greek copies. At any rate it is evident, from a comparison of the passage from the Epistle to Polycarp, and from that of the Epistle to the Trallians containing a part belonging to the genuine Letter to the Romans, at p. 198, that these extracts do not belong to the same version as the Three Genuine Epistles. And further, I should not omit to remark, that all the Extracts which I have given are taken from works written originally in Greek, such as those of Severus and Timotheus, and afterwards translated into the Syriac. They therefore supply no evidence whatever of the existence of any independent Syriac version of the Ignatian Epistles; they only shew what passages were cited from them in Greek by the several authors in whose writings they are found.

These extracts contain passages from the Epistles to the Ephesians, Magnesians, Trallians, Polycarp, Philadelphians, and Smyrneans, which are similar indeed, as Renaudot observes, to those of the Medicean manuscript, but they are far from exactly coinciding with them, as the comparison will shew.

l. 12. ܣܘܦܡܘܟܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “and his dominion is dissolved.” The Greek reads καὶ λύεται ὁ ὄλεθρος αὐτοῦ Epist. to Ephes. ch. xiii. p. 31. This variation seems to have arisen from the scribe confounding ܣܘܦܡܘܟܝܢ with ܣܘܦܡܘܟܝܢ “his destruction.”

l. 15. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ. The Syriac at p. 32 is ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ.

l. 16. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “For it is good,” as if the translator had read γαρ after καλὸν.—Ibid. ch. xv. p. 31.

l. 19. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “are of the ruler of this world, and those who are faithful in love, are the image of God the Father.” This does not correspond accurately either with the recension A. or B., but seems almost as if it were taken from both.—Epist. to Magnes. ch. v. p. 63.

l. 22. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ—ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ: “That is to say, the Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons.” This sentence does not belong to the Epistles, and is only inserted by way of explanation.

l. 25. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ—ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “And the Presbyters in the place of the angels of the council, and the Deacons in the place of the Apostles.” This varies considerably from καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων εἰς τόπον συνεδρίου τῶν ἀποστόλων, καὶ τῶν διακόνων, τῶν ἐμοὶ γλυκντάτων, πεπιστευμένων διακονίαν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, which is common both to A. and B.—Ibid. ch. vi. p. 65.

P. 198. l. 1. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ, and again p. 200, l. 8, ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “Titilians,” instead of “Trallians.”

l. 6. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “and be ye subject,” with ὑποτάσσεσθε of B., not ὑποτάσσεσθαι of A.—Ibid. See note p. 306.

l. 7. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ—ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ “so that we may be found living in the same,” seems nearer to ἐν ᾧ διάγοντες, ἐν αὐτῷ εὐρεθησόμεθα of B. than A., which omits ἐν αὐτῷ.—Ibid.

l. 8. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “who are the sons of the mysteries,” agrees with ὄντας μυστηρίων of B., or “ministros existentes mysteriorum” of Latin A., rather than μυστήριον of A.—Ibid.

l. 9. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “but of the Church of God,” simply, without any thing to correspond with ἐπιρέται of both the Greek recensions.—Ibid.

l. 11. ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ—ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ ܕܥܠܡܝܢ “The Bishop who is in the place of the Father.” The word ܕܝܫܘܫܝܢ seems to stand both for the Greek τόπος and τύπος. This passage then seems to come nearer to ὁ ἐπίσκοπος τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν ὄλων τύπος ὑπάρχει of B. than to τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, ὄντα υἱὸν τοῦ Πατρὸς of A.—Ch. iii. ibid.

l. 14. ܕܘܕܢ—ܐܢܝܢ. This is a passage belonging to the genuine Epistle to the Romans, which has been inserted in this place of the Epistle to the Trallians. The variations between the Syriac text here and at p. 56, shew that they belong to two altogether different versions.—Ibid. ch. v. p. 77.

l. 16. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “On this account be ye disciples to me,” varies from the Greek παρὰ τοῦτο ἤδη καὶ μαθητής εἰμι.—Ibid.

l. 18. ܕܘܕܢ—ܕܘܕܢ “That ye use only the food of gratitude.” The Greek of A. is μόνη τῇ Χριστιανῇ τροφῇ χρῆσθαι.—Ibid. ch. vi.

l. 19. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “of those who mix themselves up in Jesus Christ.” The Greek of A. is οἱ καιροὶ παρεμπλέκουσι Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. This and the preceding are omitted in B.—Ibid.

l. 21. ܐܢܝܢ “who is ignorant.” There follows nothing here as an equivalent of ἡδέως of A.—Ibid.

l. 24. ܐܢܝܢ. There is nothing to correspond with this particle in the Greek, nor in the Syriac version, p. 6. The variations in the Syriac here also shew that the two translations are altogether independent of each other.—Epist. to Polycarp, ch. iii. p. 6.

l. 25. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “Like a valiant man.” The Greek has ὡς ἄκμων. The Syriac at p. 6, ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “as a combatant.” See also note, p. 270.

P. 199. l. 1. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “in the stead of your souls”; as if ὑμῶν were found in the Greek, and the passage had run thus: ἀντίψυχον ἐγὼ ὑμῶν, τῶν ὑποτασσόμενων.—Ibid. ch. vi. p. 11.

l. 9. For ܐܢܝܢ “in this,” read ܐܢܝܢ “in one.” It is an oversight of mine in reading ܐܢܝܢ instead of ܐܢܝܢ in M. Munk’s copy, which he had transcribed in Hebrew characters.—Epist. to Philad. ch. vi. p. 91.

l. 11. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “I cried therefore,” as if the reading had been ἐκραύγασα οὖν, not simply ἐκραύγασα, as in A. Γὰρ is added in B., which comes nearer.—Ibid. ch. vii. p. 97.

l. 12. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “with the voice of God.” This is omitted in A., but exists in the Latin version A. “Dei voce.” B. reads οὐκ ἐμὸς ὁ λόγος, ἀλλὰ Θεοῦ.—Ibid.

l. 16. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “I tell you that I am informed.” The Greek reads ἐπειδὴ κατὰ τὴν προσευχὴν ὑμῶν, καὶ κατὰ τὰ σπλάγχνα, ἃ ἔχετε ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ἀπηγγελή μοι.—Ibid. ch. x. p. 99. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “in the Church of Syria.” The Greek has “the Church in Antioch of Syria.”—Ibid.

l. 18. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “the name of the Lord.” A. has only τὸ ὄνομα; B. τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ.—Ibid.

l. 21. ܐܢܝܢ—ܐܢܝܢ “Holy Churches.” The Greek is αἱ ἕγγιστα ἐκ-

l. 22. ܘܠܡܡܝܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "To the Church of Asia." The extract shews that the same Epistle is meant as that addressed in the Greek "to Smyrna of Asia, p. 101.

l. 25. ܘܠܡܡܝܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "while we have," without καὶ, as in B.—Epist. to Smyrn. ch. ix. p. 111.

P. 200. l. 4. ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "does nothing." There is no equivalent here for ἡνωμένος ὦν of A., which, with the words following, is also omitted from B.—Epist. to Magnes. ch. vii. p. 65.

l. 10. ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ—ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "In faith which is in the hope and the enjoyment of the blood of Jesus Christ." This varies considerably from A., which has ἐν πίστει, ὅς ἐστιν σὰρξ τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ ἐν ἀγάπῃ, ὅς ἐστιν αἷμα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.—Epist. to Tráll. ch. viii. p. 79.

l. 24. ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ—ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "In the passion of the cross of your Lord, whose members ye are." This is different from the Greek, δι' οὗ ἐν τῷ πάθει αὐτοῦ προσκαλεῖται ἡμᾶς, ὄντας μέλη αὐτοῦ.—Ibid. ch. xi. p. 85.

P. 201. l. 2. ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ "and they shall praise." The Greek is δοξάση.—Epist. to Polycarp, ch. vii. p. 13.

P. 201. Translation, p. 235.

This extract, containing passages from several of the Ignatian Epistles, is written on the vellum lining of the cover, and on the blank page of the first leaf of the volume in which it is found. It is in a large thick character, apparently of about the eleventh or twelfth century. Several other extracts in the same hand are written in the margin of the following leaves.

 ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ
 ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ
 ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ
 ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ
 ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ ܘܠܥܘܕܘܢܘܢܘܢ

"Again, from the Book of the Covenant of our Lord: but it is the first book of the Apostles which was sent by the hand of Clement to the Gentiles. 'And it came to pass, after our Lord was risen from the dead, and appeared to them, and was handled by Thomas, and Matthew, and John: and we were convinced that our Master was truly risen from the dead.' "

After this notice of John the Monk there follows "The first Epistle to Eutropius and Eusebius, composed by my Lord John the Monk:" [ܐܘܬܪܘܦܝܘܨ ܘܥܘܨܒܝܘܨ] At the end is written [ܐܘܬܪܘܦܝܘܨ ܘܥܘܨܒܝܘܨ] "Here ends the Epistle of my Lord John the Monk and Seer of Thebais, to Eutropius and Eusebius." This identifies the author of the letter with the John the Monk of whom the account preceding it is given. But the writer of this is also the author of the Epistle addressed to Eutropius and Eusebius, from which our Syriac extract is taken, and of the Sermones de animi et corporis affectibus, addressed to the same Eutropius and Eusebius, mentioned by Assemani, Bibliotheca Orient., tom. i. p. 431. Hence we gather that Assemani has erred in attributing these Sermons to John of Apamea, whom he supposes to have lived in the sixth century: see ibid. p. 430; and that these are the work of John the Monk, the contemporary of Evagrius, spoken of by Ebedjesu, see ibid. tom. iii. p. 45; not of John of Apamea, who is also mentioned by the same writer in his catalogue: ibid. p. 50. His having been contemporary with Evagrius would bring the age of John the Monk to the latter half of the fourth century; and the circumstance given in the account of him above mentioned, that he foretold the defeat of Maximus, would fix his date to the same period. The army of Maximus was vanquished, and himself taken prisoner, A.D. 388. See Clinton's Fasti Romani, p. 516.

I have already made some observations upon the passages from the Epistle to the Romans, cited by this author, in my notes at p. 291.

V.

P. 210. Translation, p. 242.

This is taken from a Syriac translation of the works of the Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, of which there are two copies in the British Museum, both acquired by Dr. Tattam in 1839, of Quarto size, and written in two columns. The one, Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 12,151 (fol. 70. b.) was transcribed in the year of the Greeks, or Seleucidæ, 1115, A.D. 804; and the other, 12,152 (fol. 152,) in the year 1148 of the same era, or A.D. 837.

VI.

P. 210. Translation, p. 243.

This extract is taken from a work by Timotheus, Patriarch of Alexandria, against the Council of Chalcedon. The same volume contains also the Apology of Cyril of Alexandria for the Twelve Chapters against the Oriental Bishops, a Treatise attributed to Gregory Thaumaturgus, on the Possibility and Impassibility of our Lord, and a Summary of Heresies, by Epiphanius. A note at the end, indicating the monastery to which the book belonged, has been partly erased; but what remains states that it was presented in the year of the Greeks 873, A.D. 562, about which period it seems to have been written by a scribe of Edessa. One or two leaves have been lost from the beginning; and consequently the work of Timotheus is imperfect. This volume is a large Quarto, written in three columns, and is one of those obtained in 1839. Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 12,156, fol. 1, and fol. 69.

l. 17. ܐܫܘܠܡܐ—ܫܘܠܡܐ “In the blood of Christ, that it is of God,” or “which is of God.” The Greek has only εἰς τὸ αἷμα Χριστοῦ.—Epist. to Smyrn. ch. vi. p. 107.

l. 22. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “of persuasion,” as in the Syriac, p. 44, and with πεισμονῆς of B., while A. reads σιωπῆς μόνον.—Ibid. See note at p. 295.

l. 23. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “the Christian,” with B. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “to all the Churches,” with the Syriac version and B.—Ibid. See note, p. 296.

P. 211. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “It is good for me,” with καλὸν μοι of B.—Ibid. ch. vi. p. 49. See note, p. 349.

ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “for the sake of Jesus,” with διὰ Ἰησοῦν, also of B., while A. reads εἰς. The quotation from Matth. xvi. 26 immediately following in both the Greek recensions is not found in this passage as cited by Timotheus; nor does it exist in the Latin version A. It is probably a marginal addition, which has found its way into the text subsequently to the time of Timotheus, and to the transcription of the copy from which that Latin version was made.

l. 9. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “I shall be a man,” with “homo ero” of Latin A. Both Greek copies have ἄνθρωπος θεοῦ ἔσομαι.—Ibid. p. 49.

l. 20. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “that he might purify the passible waters.” A. reads ἵνα τῷ πάθει τὸ ὕδωρ καθαρῖση. The passage is altogether omitted in B.—Epist. to Ephes. ch. xviii. p. 35.

P. 212. l. 3. ܐܘܪܘܢܐ “of Polycarp.” This passage from the Epistle of St. Polycarp, and the following from the Epistle attributed to St. Clement, although they do not bear upon the question of Ignatius, I have transferred to these pages, because it is interesting to know how any of the writings of the Apostolic Fathers were received and cited by early but it appears to be of about the eighth century. Mus. Brit. Add. MS. 12,155. foll. 111, 168. b. 262.

l. 22. ܘܢܘܕ ܘܥܨ “he who cleaveth,” as if the reading were ὅς τις, instead of εἰ τις of the Greek.—Epist. to Philad. ch. iii. p. 89.

P. 219. l. 1. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ — ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “To the Church which is in Asia,” that is; to the Smyrneans. Compare note, p. 348 above.

l. 3. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ — ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “In the blood of Christ, who is God,” or, “that is God.” These last words are not in the Greek.—Epist. to Smyrn. ch. vi. p. 107. Compare this passage quoted by Timotheus of Alexandria, p. 210.

l. 5. This is the same passage from the Epistle to the Ephesians, ch. vii., as is quoted above, although not in exactly the same words; but the variations are very slight.

l. 10. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ — ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “From evil men, who are beasts, and have only the form of men.” The Greek is simply ἀπὸ τῶν θηρίων τῶν ἀθροπομορφῶν.—Epist. to Smyrn. ch. iv. p. 105.

XIII.

P. 219. Translation, p. 250.

From an imperfect controversial work by a Monophysite. The first passage, cited as from Ignatius, is taken from a chapter, fol. 6. b. The second from ch. vi. fol. 15, ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “A chapter that sheweth, by testimonies from the Holy Fathers, that God was crucified for us in the flesh.” The third from the seventeenth chapter, ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “that it is right to honour the Priests,” fol. 22. A manuscript in Octavo. The greater part was acquired in 1842; but several additional leaves arrived in 1847. Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 14,535.

l. 16. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “But there deceived,” as if the reading had been ἀλλὰ, not καὶ, as in both Greek recensions.—Epist. to Ephes. ch. xix. p. 35.

l. 20. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ — ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “Thy spirit boweth down to thy cross.” The same terms are used here for περίψημα as in the version, p. 34. There is nothing in the Greek to represent thy.—Ibid. ch. xviii. p. 33.

l. 22. ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ — ܘܡܢ ܕܢܘܩܕܝܢܘܨ “He that honoureth the priest honoureth Christ.” These precise words are not found in any of the Ignatian Epistles in their present form.
